How the Famous Chefs Are Bowing at Shrine of Sergt. Dunne, Army Cook

Though War Department Borrowed 3840 Hotel Cooks to Open Kitchens at Cantonments, Army Meals Still Are Built on Dunne's 1909 Model, While Hotel Menus Are Changed.

By Wallace Irwin,
Humorist and Magazine Writer.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.

A FEW weeks ago the Quartermaster General's Department, faithful to its complicated task of supplying everything from shoes to sugar to a rapidly forming army of over a million men, telegraphed an appeal to 58 leading hotel proprietors throughout the country asking the loan of 3840 chefs and expert cooks to teach the science of gastronomics to the kitchens of our 16 new cantonments.

WALLACE IRWIN.

Now, the browned-in-the-oven old mess Sergeants of our regular army cooking schools—of which four have flourished for many years—are willing and anxious to sit at the feet of the capable wizards who have fed Fifth avenue and Tremont street; but so great is the faith of the Mess Sergeant in the Manual for Army Cooks, issue of 1916, that they pause reflectively in their scientifically arranged pantries and allow—quite unofficially—that maybe a few of those fancy chefs will go back to their hotels with one or two choice recipes well worth trying on the favored fellow who always gets by the plush rope and calls the head waiter by his first name.

As a matter of fact, M. Panchard, famous chef of the Hotel McAlpin, New York, was "loaned" a while back in order to gain sufficient knowledge of army cookery to instruct national guard kitchens in various New York armories. M. Panchard spent two days at Washington Barracks, where he studied the cuisine for enlisted men; he went back to New York with his observations, together with a copy of the month's menu. Today the McAlpin serves—by the enthusiastic recommendation of M. Panchard—a "military luncheon," which is a duplicate of the noon meal which Uncle Sam dishes up for his boys. The price of this meal is 50 cents; and it is the highest compliment which Broadway can pay the army's camp and field mess.

In fact, the day of Civil War hardtack and Spanish War embalmed beef is "long gone." Emergencies, of course, the soldier must carry to tide him over bad situations where the enemy fire is hotter than the bake ovens behind the line. But for feeding his armies in barrack and trench, Uncle Sam has become a domestic scientist, who thinks in terms of nutritive values and a psychologist who realizes that the stomach's digestive juices will not respond unless the palate telegraphs its approval to the brain.

Beans Always Ready.

Never before in the world's history have commanders of troops realized how absolutely an army "moves on its stomach." It would not be going too far to say that a unit in motion is organized around the commissariat. Closer than the artillery to the infantry, or the aviation division to either, comes the group of "rolling kitchens," which, their great kettles boiling merrily all day, go mule-drawn into action behind the marching men. Soup is simmering, beef is stewing, the classic beans are heating as the doughty cook wagon bumps along. When the company halts for noon the efficient cook is ready to announce "dinner is served." In appearance it's as simple as the organization of a dining-car service; and in actuality many times as complicated.

In the months to come, when our American "rolling kitchens" are perched reasonably out of range on a scarred field somewhere in France and our boys from home are emptying their plates of a generous helping of "El Rancho" stew, they may lift their bullet-proof helmets to the printed consoler, comforter and friend which has followed them to the trenches—the Manual for Army Cooks, issue of 1916.

As a matter of history, the present volume of official recipes is about a dozen years old. It has been collected from many sources by many wise men adorned with uniforms and backed by general orders; but its choicest and best originated in the instinctive inimitable methods of Aunt Diana, who concocted her champion waffles by "jes' tastin'."

In fact, a large majority of the good and fine points in Uncle Sam's daily menu for his Sammies is due to an old Commissary Sergeant of Fort Riley. His name was Dunne, and he was one of those "born to the griddle," who has the same advantage over the ordinary aspirant to kitchen honors that Kubelik had from birth over the little girl next door.

He was not a man of education in the ordinary acceptance of the word, but he was a first-class army cook. On scraps of writing paper or old bills he kept a copy of every recipe he had ever tried. These were edited by Col. Holbrook, then in command at Fort Riley, and published in a little book called "Methods of Handling Army Rations," which was developed into the "Manual for Army Cooks," the text book in the army schools for cooks and bakers started in 1900 by Com.-Gen. Sharpe, now Quartermaster General. And a perusal of its contents, after sampling the results of its counsel, leaves one little sympathy with the words fitted years ago to the bugler's regular mess call:

Soupie soupie soupie,
  Without a single bean!
Coffee, coffee, coffee,
  Without a drop of cream!
Piggie, piggie, piggie,
  Without a streak of lean!

There is a legend to the effect that there are several amusing musical diatribes against the army food, but questioning of officers and men at the Washington Barracks School does not reveal them. One sergeant—one of the three "noncoms" in line for their commissions—said that when the food was bad the men "got the growl" and wouldn't sing at all, and when it was good they "felt fine and sang the prettiest songs they knew."

The Portable Bakeries.

It is rather heartening to think that the men can have the same food in the field as they do in barracks. This is accomplished by the bakeries which are portable, easily taken down and set up, and by the very remarkable "rolling kitchens," which cook a meal as the army marches, having lunch or supper ready when the order comes to pitch camp. There are several models of this rolling kitchen, some more intricate than others and some very much more substantial than others. The Government has ordered a large number of a model which weighs 3000 pounds. All of these kitchens have stoves for burning oil and also arrangements for the use of coal or wood. One model, of which the Government has ordered a great many, has two double boilers where oatmeal, for instance, may be cooked as the big stove on wheels trails on supply wagon or truck. Also there are direct-heat boilers, where coffee may be made, or one of the many delicious stews, the familiar Irish, the savory "El Rancho" (containing everything eatable on a ranch), or the very delectable American stew, invented on the

Letters From American Air Fighter in France

--WHERE HE WAS DECORATED TWICE FOR BRAVERY--

To His Mother, Describing His Experiences

In These Communications, Almost as Intimate in Their Recital of His Development From an Inexperienced Though Adventurous Youth, Into One of the Brilliant Allied Airmen, as a Diary, Walter S. Rhino, Tells Just How Men Are Trained for War Back of the Lines and How He Fought With the German Birdmen When Finally Sent to the Front.

Though Only 22 Years Old, He Has Proved Himself Such a Reliable Man in Combat That Some of the Most Trusted Assignments on France's Defense Line Are Given to Him—Transfer to American Forces Has Been Ordered.

WALTER S. RHINO.

THE POST-DISPATCH presents today excerpts from the letters written by Walter S. Rhino, of the American Escadrille or flying corps, with the French army, to his mother, Mrs. Clara M. Rhino, who lives in Vineyard Haven, Mass. Rhino, who is only 22 years old, went to France last December, intent upon entering the French air service. The excerpts from his letters cover his experiences from the time of his arrival in France to September last, when he expected to be shifted to the American army for service immediately.

We read much of war these days. But what we read is of the earth fighting or the sea-fighting. Our reports of the air fighting are brief. Guynemer dies over Flanders; but of his combats in the air we know little—how he fought, what tricks he played, what acrobatic stunts he did. The glory of Guynemer lives after him. The world will remember him, because he played so fearlessly the game which few aviators ever win, the game with life and death as stakes that is hourly waged thousands of meters above the battlefronts.

Rhino's letters to his mother tell in detail the whole story of an aviator's life. From the time that Rhino arrived in France to the time when he alone fought the giant Albatross, sent spinning to their deaths the crew that manned it, and returned to receive the Croix de Guerre and one palm (later to be supplemented by another palm for a similar deed), his letters came frequently to his mother, telling her in detail the whole course of his life. Starting above the Pyrenees, he talks aloud to his sister's picture, which he carries with him, to his beloved machine, and to himself. Hour after hour, alone and miles high, he is thrown upon the resources of memory. The earth he finds beautiful beneath him—the spring time of Southern France when the trees first show their green harmonies, and the flowers of the fields welcome a warmer sun. Or 20,000 feet above the trenches he hovers like an eagle, waiting for a foe to appear; he sights a hostile plane. He dives, 'nose' down, with speed incredible—such speed as none in this country know anything about. His "Spad" plane, the most powerful one-place war plane, is capable of 140 miles an hour. Driven downward with the capacity of such a speed—how fast did Rhino shoot when he dove to strike with a hail of explosive bullets the ill-fated Albatross? . .

Or sent forth on a more dangerous errand, he flies with seven aeronauts to protect his advance against the Teuton 'sausages"—the ungainly observation balloons which hang high above the guns that vomit death. Reaching forward low above the battlefield, braving shrapnel and the fire of the deadly anti-air craft guns, he seeks to set in flame by his rockets these sausage balloons. Or he spins and dives and soars and "loops the loop" as he strives to get above an aeronaut as killed, perhaps, as he, to pour in the death-hail from his machine gun.

Rhino's letters to his mother, therefore, are a chronicle of the war in the air. They are here published as he wrote them, except that his letters are condensed and certain repetitions in contents omitted. They are given to the American public with the certainty that in them every patriotic American will find a new source for pride—pride that this young Lafayette has returned the compliment to France which she paid us during the Revolutionary War. And Rhino, brave as he is, but one of the many. His exploits, true, have raised him in fame above most of the others—but he represents the vanguard of that vast host which by a similar daring will soon prove to the German Kaiser the unconquerable might of America.

The Young Adventurer Arrives.

PARIS, Dec. 21, 1916.—Arrived here safe, nine days from New York to Bordeaux. I reported to my headquarters yesterday afternoon and went through everything first class. I shall be here for a few days and then I go to the Bleriot aviation field to train for a few weeks, and then I go to Pau to finish my training at the advanced aviation field. I then go to the front for actual service, which will probably be by the first of March.

Dec. 23.—Yesterday I received my aviation uniform, a special uniform made for the American aviators. Have met some very pretty French girls since I have been here. They treat the

WALTER S. RHINO.

American boys extraordinarily well for coming over voluntarily to fight for their country.

Dec. 25.—This has been the hardest Christmas I ever put in. I have a hard time to get what I want to eat, for I do not speak the French tongue, but, after a while, I manage to get enough to keep me from starving. I can speak a few words in French. I hope to speak and understand it quite well in a month or two. Wish you could see me in my new uniform. If I do say it myself, I look quite nice in it. Thursday I go to X for my first lesson in flying.

In the French Army at Last.

Ecole d'Aviation, Militaire, X., Jan. 8, 1917.—Well, I am in the army at last. On account of bad weather conditions I have had only two lessons in flying. We have many hardships to endure, but I am in the army now for the duration of the war.

Of course, you know that I am no more an American citizen, for I have taken the French oath. When I come back home, after serving in the French army aviation corps, I shall come the same as any foreign person who migrates to the United States.

I am in the American barracks, and find the boys very pleasant companions. We do nothing but learn to fly, which is more of a stunt than one would believe. There is a lot to it. We have many falls. Sunday morning two men fell and broke their machines rather badly, but no one was hurt. It is an interesting game. There are 17 American boys as pilots in my barracks. Fine chaps, too. They are sitting around reading while I am writing this.

Jan. 13.—Frederick Prince has visited the camp—a nice chap. This army life isn't what it is cracked up to be. We have many hardships to endure. If nothing happens and I go through in first class order, I will have the best training in the world, in the best army in the world.

Promoted to Real Flying Machine.

Jan. 18.—I have been promoted from a machine that wouldn't fly to one that will fly; so, from now on, I fly. I fly over the field for 15 or 20 minutes and then I fly for an hour or so over the country, before I have special work to do. We are going to be transferred soon to another school farther south in France, so we can have better weather to fly in.

We are going to be taken off the Bleriot machines to train on the Codrome machine. We have to go in the air to learn to fly a Codrome.

Here we are taught at first, "before flying," to be able to control the planes while running along the ground. In these other schools, we are taken up in a double command Codrome with our monitor, and he teacher us the controls and then has us take the control and fly ourselves. He takes us up about 200 meters. After we are able to handle the machine in the air without assistance, and able to bank our turns, etc., we are given a single command machine and have to fly alone. In this school we are able to get to the front on actual service in six or eight weeks.

The fact is that in the Codrome we can fly in almost any kind of weather, for it is a heavier machine. So I shall be on active service before I thought.

This morning at 7:30 we got all the machines out in the field, and one fellow went out and something went wrong with his machine. He looped the loop on the ground and landed upside down. He smashed up his machine—but he was not hurt at all.

We were then told to put up our machines, lest we have further accidents—for there is snow on the ground, which causes a deal of skidding when landing or running on the ground.

Hardships of Winter Flying.

Jan. 24.—Bitter cold weather has made flying on the field of Lecole l'Aviation a real hardship and the barracks are as cold as it is outside. To make matters worse, I am homesick. There have been many accidents and the boys are doubtless feeling blue over the misfortune of a French lad who fell two days ago and broke his leg above the knee and was badly injured internally. There are falls every day, but it is rare that anyone is hurt.

Jan. 27.—I am being transferred today to Pau, in the South of France. I shall be in a warm climate within 24 hours. I expect to get through this school at Pau in three or four weeks, for, in Pau, we shall have summer weather and can fly every day. I am peaking now. Peaking is flying to a height of from 75 to 100 feet and then cutting out the motor and at the same time turning your nose straight down until within 10 or 12 feet of the ground—then straightening the machine level with the ground and landing lightly, without the use of the motor at all.

Burdeaux, Jan. 29.—I am some happy and contented in this swell part of the country. I made two flights this morning, and my monitor told me before the rest of the boys that I would be a licensed pilot in about two weeks.

In about another week I shall be doing acrobatic stunts on a Nieuport machine, such as looping the loop, vaults, turning upside down for a few seconds, peaking, etc. When I finish those stunts, I go to Javezee to learn the operation of machine guns while flying, etc.

The French officers are very pleasant, and most of them speak English here, which is a great help. You can't imagine how I enjoy aviation, and how much I enjoy this part of the country.

Our machines are very stable and very fast—anywhere from 100 to 147 miles an hour. We have a very large military encampment here, and all kinds of level land to come down on.

Smashes His Plane in Fall.

Pau, Feb. 5.—I made several good flights this morning, but the last time I went up I fell about 60 feet and broke my plane all in pieces. My motor was not working right, and I lost control of her—and came down, head first, to the ground. I was lifted out of the wreckage unconscious and came to my senses about half an hour later.

When I hit—and I hit hard—the belt which holds me in the plane broke and that hurled me out of my seat into the wreckage.

I was pleased, and so were both the French and Americans here, to see America break her relations with Germany. They think now that peace is near. I shall stay here and learn my aviation completely and shall not return home until the war is over.

It is a pretty sight to mount the air and look down on the snow-capped Pyranees and over the valley. We certainly see some wonderful views from above. I am not a second-class pilot. We have nothing to do but learn to fly—no other work of any kind.

Tarbes, Feb. 17.—I am now in Avord, in the center of France. I shall stay here for one month or six weeks and then return to Pau to complete my training as a pilot in the professional school. I expect to be at the front by May. I made six flights today. I was sent up in a Bleriot machine to climb to an altitude of 10,000 feet and to keep that height for one hour. I went a bit higher than 10,000 feet and stayed up there for one hour and 20 minutes. I was above the clouds and unable to see land.

When I came down, after being up that long,

Associated Press Told How Rhino Won War Cross

AN Associated Press dispatch from Paris Aug. 23 last said that Walter S. Rhino of Martha's Vineyard, Mass., the day before, single-handed, had shot down a German two-seated albatross. He thus earned his Sergeant's stripes and a war cross at the outset of his career. It was considered a remarkable performance for so young a pilot. Rhino, with three others of the Lafayette escadrille, was flying low over the enemy lines when he sighted a German machine. Rhino left his patrol and climbed to 9000 feet. He then pointed the nose of his machine toward the unsuspecting German and when within 300 feet of him opened fire with his machine gun. The German machine crashed to earth.

Missouri's Food Administrator Outlines Plan to Prevent Extortion by Retail Grocers

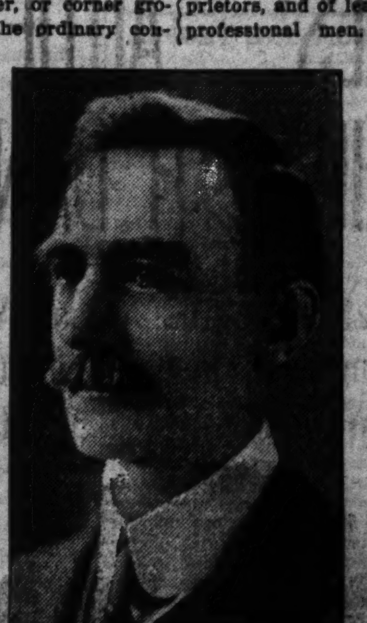
Dr. Mumford Declares That, While He Has No Authority Over Provision Merchants, Profiteering Will Be Crushed by Standardization of Prices Compliances With Which Customers Will Demand.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Oct. 13.

DR. FREDERICK B. MUMFORD, dean of the College of Agriculture of the University of Missouri, who is the newly appointed Federal Food Administrator for the State of Missouri, outlined to a Post-Dispatch correspondent today the plans for the State-wide work of food conservation and price regulation which he is about to begin organizing.

Dr. Mumford returned yesterday from Washington, where he was in conference with Administrator Hoover.

The small retailer, or corner grocer, from whom the ordinary consumer purchases most of his provisions, and whose price scale determines the cost of living for most families, will not be dealt with directly by the food administration, Dr. Mumford said.



—Holborn Studio, Columbia, Mo.
DEAN F. B. MUMFORD.

Instead of telling the corner grocer what he shall charge for eggs or cabbages, the food administration will undertake to control the large dealers, through the licensing system, and to prevent speculation and hoarding. This will be the function of the Federal administrator.

The chief work of the State Administrator will be to persuade the public to use practical means of conserving food, in order that the supply may remain sufficient for local demands and for the needs of export to America's allies in the war.

Regulation of Prices.

"By the conservation work, by control of the larger dealers, and by widespread publicity," Dr. Mumford said, "it is hoped to correct any tendency on the part of retailers to take advantage of the situation.

"We have not the power to say to the retailer what he shall charge for each article, but we have the power to tell consumers what they should pay for each article. This information will be based on standardized price schedules, with reference to the cost of production and distribution. All possible publicity will be given to this information as to prices, and we believe this service will have a direct effect in regulating the prices charged by retailers.

"The licensing law applies only to dealers doing a business which amounts to $100,000 annually. Congress has provided no means of dealing with the smaller dealers.

"The State Food Administration will not have charge of the licensing of merchants. It will give its chief efforts for the present to organizing conservation work, and it will conduct a pledge campaign, throughout the State, in the week beginning Oct. 28.

"Every housewife in the State, and the head of every household, will be asked to sign the pledge to assist in the saving of the four food essentials—meat, wheat, fats and sugar.

"Beginning Oct. 28, we will conduct this registration in every city, town and village in the State. Not only heads of households and housewives, but all restaurant and hotel keepers, will be asked to sign the pledge, to regulate their menus in such manner as to save the needed staples.

Effective Conservation.

"After the registration, we will collect definite information from those who aid in conducting the registration, as to how the conservation movement can be made most effective.

"We have now in Missouri one of the best food conservation organizations in the United States, in the State Council of Defense, which will co-operate with the food administration. We have the co-operation of the leading restaurant and hotel proprietors, and of leading business and professional men. Clergymen and school teachers will be inlisted in this patriotic service.

"We have mailed a letter to every school teacher in Missouri, asking help in getting the pledges of heads of families.

"Because of the world scarcity of the four staples I have named, it is certain that America must conserve all these materials before the winter has passed.

"The food administration was organized by Congress with a view to putting into force such policies and plans as should cause the people to economize and to conserve food before they are compelled by necessity to do so. The purpose of the State food administration is to conform this national policy to local conditions.

"Just how much can be done through greater economy may be indicated in the case of sugar. In the United States the average annual consumption of sugar is 90 pounds to the person. In England, France and Italy it is 21 pounds. It would be a comparatively easy matter for America to cut its sugar consumption by two-thirds. If we could do that, we could supply ourselves, our allies and neutral nations with sugar.

"Missouri is one of the greatest food-producing States, and if we can conserve the food supply at the source, the food administration can give help in the marketing of the products. Recently the farmers of Texas County, in South Central Missouri, wrote to the College of Agriculture, complaining that they could not find a market for their wheat.

Example of Efficiency.

"I wrote to the Food Administrator in Washington, and in a few days a wheat buyer, representing one of the allied countries, went to Texas County and bought the farmers' wheat.

"The food administration is interested in getting products to the nearest market by the quickest means. The policy is to stop speculation and hoarding, and to encourage legitimate storage.

"I wish to emphasize the fact that the entire food conservation work is voluntary service, and that neither Mr. Hoover nor any of the persons connected with the Federal or State food administrations will receive one cent for their services. I hope this fact will be an incentive to Missourians to assist in organizing patriotic service for food conservation, which may do more to win the war than the manufacture of guns or munitions."

Dr. Mumford will remain at the head of the College of Agriculture, and will handle the State food administration work from his office. The only person thus far appointed to assist in the food administration work in Missouri is M. L. Wilkinson, president of the Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney Dry Goods Co., who has been named as merchant representative.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

Greenbacks vs. Bonds.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

In the discussion about the issue of greenbacks instead of bonds for paying war expenses, I note the often repeated statement that "the greenbacks depreciated in value," etc.

Not all greenbacks depreciated in value, some never did depreciate and were even at the identical same premium as gold coin throughout the entire civil war period.

The enactments of July 17, 1861, and February 12, 1862, authorized the issue of $60,000,000 treasury notes, not bearing interest and "payable for all debts public and private."

Subsequent issues of treasury notes contained an "exception clause" which provided they should be a legal tender for all debts "excepting duties on imports and interest on the public debt." As the original issue of $60,000,000 treasury notes did not undertake to discriminate against their use for any purpose whatever which metal money was legally authorized to perform, it followed that they were always in equal demand for any transaction that could be legally performed by gold money.

All the greenbacks or treasury notes which depreciated contained the "exception clause," announcing that while the Federal Government had issued its paper money to pay all of its financial obligations to the people at large, it would not accept the same money in payment for its own custom duties, but demanded payment in some other kind of money. Therefore it was necessary to secure either gold money or the kind of paper money which, as originally issued, did not contain the "exception clause." These original $60,000,000 greenbacks were at all times on a par with gold money and never did depreciate. There are many reasons why certain kinds of money at various dates in history have fluctuated in value, and it is necessary to know all of the contributing causes before rendering an impartial opinion on this subject as well as other subjects of Government.

Free Mail for Soldier Boys.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

It has been my good fortune to be able to give one of my sons to the national army to help fight for democracy.

The letters I received from him from camp Funston have nothing but praise and expressions of complete satisfaction for his officers and the camp in general.

However, according to reports from some in other divisions and camps, it seems conditions are not as praiseworthy. It is said that the food is poor and very little of it. The sleeping quarters are made up of straw and very uncomfortable. Some who can afford it, buy mattresses to be able to rest better.

It has been the practice of some to send packages with eatables of all kinds, sweater coats and many other things which the boys would enjoy. In this way the Government is relieved of a great burden of supplying all the needs.

If this is true, why cannot the Government handle all mail to and from the soldiers gratis? This would allow people to send more and oftener.

I myself have served three years in the German army, and all letters and packages were handled for the soldiers without charge.

JOHN J. ROTH.

La Follette's Defiance.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Senator La Follete, in his three-hour speech in the Senate, failed to "vindicate or justify" his course of action and conduct since the sinking of the Lusitania. He has preached a "dangerous" doctrine in this country, and his "insidious utterance" would, if not checked by a sound, healthy, public, moral, patriotic and loyal American opinion, not only "undermine" the loyalty of the people in time of stress and war, but would "defy" the rights, powers and authority of the regular constituted authorities of the Government of the United States of America (under the Constitution and the laws made in pursuance thereof) to "successfully prosecute" the war which we are now engaged in against the imperial German Government.

We are at war, and I challenge the right of any United States Senator (since a state of war has been declared by the Government of the United States) to make verbal (oral) or written statements tending "to aid and encourage the enemy and to cast dishonor and discredit upon this nation" after war has once been declared. The Louisville Courier-Journal asks: "Is La Follette a lunatic, a rascal or a fool?" To which the Frankfort State Journal replies and says: "Between us, Marse Henry, he was a lunatic to think that such a rascal and fool could fool some of the people all the time or all the people some of the LIBERTY SIGNS IN GERMANY.

Von Capelle, German Minister of Marine, is reported to have resigned and Michaelis, Premier, is slated for retirement.

Herr Ledebour, Socialist Deputy in the Reichstag, boldly assaulting the Imperial Government for incapacity and for failure to denounce the atrocious misdeeds of its representatives, says with audacity hitherto unknown in the Reichstag, "These are excrescences of a system which can only be abolished if diplomacy passes from the hands of a closed caste and a monarchical commander into those of the people."

Vorwaerts, Socialist organ, not less boldly attacking the Government for its blunders, declares "Michaelis must go."

All of these incidents, with others of a similar nature, are significant signs that the German people, constitutionally cut off from control of their Government, have found an articulate voice in the Government which is steadily increasing in force.

The Reichstag, without constitutional power to hold imperial Ministers to responsibility, is slowly but steadily asserting its real power as the only organized political body in the Government, which represents the people.

There is accumulating evidence that the Imperial German Government, clothed by the Constitution with unhampered power under the Emperor's seal, feels impelled to consult the Reichstag and to satisfy in a measure its complaints and demands.

What has wrought the change, so profoundly significant and interesting in the Reichstag's conduct and the Government's attitude towards this hitherto mocked and despised popular body?

The reason is not far to seek. It is the old story of the growth of democracy and of popular control of government in all despotisms. The deceptive forms of democracy, designed to deceive and lull the people, assume in a time of storm and disaster and popular discontent, importance and vital power.

The Russian Duma, by the Czar's own confession, was created as a temporary sop to the Russian people, after the disasters of the Japanese War. The Czar intended it to be a meaningless form and to abolish it after it had served imperial purposes. But the despised Duma, in the greater disasters of the present war, became the instrument which destroyed czardom.

Bismarck, with mocking cynicism, in constructing the empire, fitted it out with the forms, trappings and trimmings of democratic government, but without its substance. The sham structure satisfied the German people so long as their masters "brought home the bacon" in war, and the despotic national organization contributed to the gain and glory of the empire.

Under the leadership of these masters the German people face ruin. They have been deceived and misled. They have borne heavy sacrifices and burdens and now, through the deception and blundering of their absolute rulers, they are threatened with the greatest disasters.

The rulers must in the end answer to the people for their national stewardship. There comes a time when absolutism under popular condemnation is helpless and brute might defeats itself. It is then that the wedge of popular control is driven into the imperial structure and the people hold their masters to rigid accountability.

There is not yet evidence that this culmination has been reached in Germany, but cheering signs of its approach accumulate in the rising tide of popular discontent and increasing timidity and weakness of the imperial will and power. When the German people become conscious of their real power all forms and shams will vanish and they will come into their own. This will be the signal for peace.

LA FOLLETTE'S BAD LOGIC.

Senator La Follette's illogical attempt to justify wrong speech upon the same grounds that established the right of free speech convicts him, at the very best, of loose thinking.

Does the Senator not know what free speech is? Is he not aware that, like other inalienable rights, it has its necessary bounds? Because ordinarily men have the right to come and go at will, would the Senator say they have a right to go wherever they please? Many enemy aliens whose rights to enter certain sections of the country have been curtailed could give him interesting information about that.

When certain streets are closed to traffic we go some other way, although the streets belong to us, are graded and made by money paid by us. The city designates some streets to be used by one kind of vehicle and to be forbidden to other kinds. Is either of these reasonable restrictions an interference with the right of "free traffic"?

We are free to dress, but not as we would like to dress, perhaps, when the thermometer is nearly 100 in the shade. It is the same with free speech. We are not always free to say the same things before an audience of children that we would say before an audience of men and women. The occasion establishes a limit. The fact that our nation is at war at once fixes a bound to our conduct and words. We should not do or say the things which may give aid and comfort to the enemy, and if we do, our profession of patriotism is nothing worth.

In the ancient Book it is written, substituting [illegible] man seemeth to be patriotic among you, and bridleth not his tongue, that man's patriotism is vain."

LIBERTY BOND FOR FARMERS.

While the cities of the Eighth Federal Reserve Bank District are making every effort to do their share towards subscribing for the $120,000,000 of the Second Liberty Loan bonds assigned to the district, the managers of the campaign have wisely directed their efforts to reaching its farmers and farming communities more thoroughly than was done in the first campaign.

An official Government crop estimate for September shows every one of the seven states represented in the district—Misouri, Illinois, Arkansas, Indiana, Kentucky, Tennessee and Mississippi—as among the first 15 of the states showing a big crop increase this year over average annual production. Missouri has the honor of leading every state in the Union, while Arkansas and Illinois are close behind.

When it is recalled that prices for nearly all farm products have doubled or more than doubled it will be seen that the agricultural prosperity of these Mississippi Valley commonwealths this year will be unprecedented. It is a prosperity directly due to the war, and yet the farmers as a class will not have to pay one cent of the excess profits taxes exacted from other industries whose wealth has been enormously increased by the war.

It will require only a fair representation of the facts to get farmers to subscribe liberally to the Liberty Loan. When it is made clear to them that each bond is not only an evidence of patriotism, but is also a good investment; that every dollar lent the Government at fair interest is a dollar that will not be taken from them in taxes; that a $50 bond is as good at the general store as a $50 bill; that the plan offers a splendid and safe opportunity to save a part of this year's earnings—when all these things are made plain there is no doubt what the Eighth District farmers will do.

The average farmer is a hard-headed individual who has learned the value of a dollar through bitter experience. He is not less patriotic than any other American, but it takes more than mere sentiment to persuade him to part with his money. Once the truth is brought home to him that by buying Liberty Bonds he is merely exchanging it for Government certificates of indebtedness that are as exchangeable as money anywhere, Washington's most sanguine hopes of a $5,000,000,000 subscription to the loan will be realized.

VARDAMAN LOSES TEST VOTE.

Senator Vardaman has lost his first test in his home State. A resolution indorsing President Wilson's acts was introduced in the lower house of the State Legislature, which was in special session this week, and was passed by a vote of 90 to 9. No sooner had the session closed than one of the "willful nine" issued a statement that he greatly regretted his "unfortunate vote." He explained that he had entered the hall late and voted against the resolution under a misapprehension. Another of the "willful nine" is a cousin of Senator Gore of Oklahoma, so there really were but seven unbiased men who voted against the resolution.

There is considerable interest in the State on the question of how Senator Vardaman will conduct his campaign when he returns from Washington. It is the general expectation that he will attempt to ignore the war question, especially in the rural counties, and throw as much of his personality as possible into the campaign.

NEW AUTO LAW RECOMMENDATIONS.

The Legislative Committee of the New York State Automobile Association has adopted several practical recommendations looking to changes in the laws of that State. One is that notices setting forth the quality, make and price of the gasoline they sell shall be displayed at all filling stations. Penalties for the sale of a product that does not conform to the notices are to be presumed. This would do nothing to minimize the most common form of swindling at filling stations, short measure, but would remove frequent causes of dissatisfaction.

Another recommendation, that in oiling country highways only one-half of the width of the roadway shall be treated at a time, is of obvious merit. The slightly additional expense of this method would be compensated for in diminishing the danger of skidding and of damage to clothing resulting from profuse oil thrown up by the wheels.

$4,500,000 SAVING OF FOOD.

Louisiana is going to save $4,500,000 worth of food this year that heretofore has been wasted, or nearly so. This is in the form of 3,000,000 bushels of sweet potatoes. Formerly the sweet potatoes were left in the ground for the hogs to root out, and the proportion eaten by the hogs is said to have been very small.

The saving comes about with the building of dry kilns, which are comparatively cheap buildings, but are so arranged that the heat can be run up for the sweating process and then lowered to a point at which the sweet potatoes can be kept for several months without loss.

The State Council of Defense placed a considerable sum of money at the disposal of Agricultural Commissioner Wilson for this work and he engaged a dry-kiln expert. Also he interested several lumber companies in the project. The lumber companies decided to build several kilns and the State built others, and then parishes took up the work. As a result, kilns with 3,000,000 bushels capacity are nearing completion. If these kilns are successful, and it is not doubted, it is expected that the number will be doubled by another potato harvest.

In driving home his argument, one of the kiln experts told the people: "Last year 2,000,000 bushels of sweet potatoes were absolutely wasted in this State and the price of those potatoes would have built kilns for the storage of 20,000,000 bushels."

JIM DUGAN.

He was labeled jist plain orn'ry
In our quiet little town.
Name, Jim Dugan, good-fer-nothin',
Drank his booze and laid aroun',
Old Bill Smithers, City Marshal,
Riled by Dugan's mean abuse,
Brought a charge of "vag" agin him,
Locked him in the calaboose.
Fine ten dollars or the rock-pile,
And, of co's, Jim couldn't pay.
Worked it out an' cussed the Marshal,
Crawled a freight and rode away.
Three years passed. We missed Jim Dugan
From our quiet little town,
Not so much because we loved him,
Simply missed him hangin' 'roun'.

And the calaboose was empty;
Broken doors and twisted bar,
For the town was fairly decent
Since the town-boys went to war.
Old Bill Smithers got to loafin',
Patronized the local bar,
Till the town-folks, clean disgusted,
Took away his club and star.

When the British "tank" came rollin'
To the front to try its luck,
From a trench a whiskered Yankee
Sprang upon the speeding truck.
Shot and shrapnel fell around him,
But he held on with a grin,
Said: "I'm due to ride this hoopie
To the gates of old Berlin!"
Hell a-poppin', airplanes droppin'
Bombs upon the lurching car,
Cannon boomed—the din was awful
In that shiftin' scene o' war.
But at last the Boches yielded—
Cheering Tommies won the day—
And they searched for young Jim Dugan
When the smoke had cleared away.

Though they said the masses o'er him,
Private Dugan didn't die.
Got released, and, with his pass-ports,
Told his cheering friends good-bye.
Caught a boat and journeyed homeward
To his loved and native land;
Jimmie Dugan was a hero
And we met him with the band.
Later, what became of Dugan?
Well, there's not much more to tell.
'Cept the town-folks made him Marshal,
An' he's doin' it right well.
Old Bill Smithers? Oh, that feller
At this time ain't runnin' loose,
In a bran'-new calaboose.
Fer he's crackin' rock for Jimmie

PUEBLO'S TEMPLE OF LABOR.

(Dedicated to the men who made their Dream come true.)

'Neath azure skies a temple stands,
Built strong and fair by Labor's hands;
A monument long to endure,
And fitting shrine of motives pure.

But more enduring and more fair
The symbol of stanch hearts stands there,
And Labor's loyal friends afar
Salute His newly-risen star.

Into his Own at last, He comes
No blare of horns, no beat of drums,
Is needed now to stir the throng
As Labor's ranks form proud and strong.

Behold His shackles where they fell
Cast back into the depths of Hell;
And nevermore to fret and gall,
Or hold in bondage—Free Men All

The Western sun glows not so bright
As this mute sign of Labor's might—
This pioneer of Labor's shrines,
Which as a star promise shines,

The mountains first shall waste away,
Which guard this temple, night and day;
The sun shall fade, the stars shall fall
Ere ruthless hands shall touch its wall.

ABOUT DYEING.

J. S. Black dye for woolen: For [illegible] pounds of goods, blue vitriol, [illegible] boil it a few minutes, then dip the goods three-quarters of an hour, airing often; take out the goods and make a dye with three pounds logwood; boil one-half hour; dip three-quarters hour and air goods and dip three-quarters hour more. Wash in strong suds. * * * To dye cotton black: For 5 pounds goods, sumac, wood and bark together, 3 pounds; boil half hour and let goods steep 12 hours; then dip in lime water half hour; then take out goods and let drip an hour; now add to the sumac liquor, copperas, 3 ounces, and dip another hour; then run them through the tub of lime water again for 15 minutes; now make a new dye with logwood, [illegible] pounds, by boiling one hour, and dip again three hours; now add bichromate of potash, 2 ounces, to the logwood dye, and dip one hour. Wash in clear, cold water and dry in the shape. * * * Always be sure to get the right sort of dye for your material. Always use soft water, if possible. If hard water must be used, dissolve half ounce of castile soap in two gallons water and boil, skimming off scum of lime and soap which will rise to top. Always use agate, granite or porcelain vessel. Always have materials perfectly clean and free from all spots of grease, paint, tar or stain. Always put goods in at low temperature and increase heat gradually. Dye bath should be kept lukewarm 20 minutes while goods is thoroughly wet with dye. Always bring dye bath to boiling point to set color. Always take out any old color which will conflict with the color desired. This can be done by boiling goods in soap and water and rinse well. Red and brown should always be removed before application of black. Always give goods to be colored a long warm exposure to the dye instead of a short hot one. Always mix dye in a little hot water and work into a paste; add a little hot water at a time, then boil in small dish and strain into dye bath. The neglect of this one caution causes a large part of the failures in dyeing. Always have goods moist when put in dye bath. Always have vessel large enough to allow turning and stirring goods. Always use less rather than more dye than directed. It is a simple matter to add more dye to the bath if color is too light. Always keep goods in motion while in dye bath. Do not allow them to become twisted or knotted.

BEAUTY CULTURE.

F. R. Any druggist will sell you [illegible] tonic. Water and oil do not mix.

E. S. M.—One writer says: If the hair is to be brightened it should first be thoroughly washed with a shampoo which contains no ammonia, and dried with a hot-water brush. Then wet the hair with a teaspoon of chemically pure peroxide of hydrogen, diluted in a teacup of water, then dried as before. Should one wish to lighten the hair very perceptibly, it is wet after the preliminary shampoo with half water and half peroxide. Peroxide used in this manner is not injurious. Ammonia is never to be used in connection with it, as ammonia used on a bleached hair will ultimately destroy the constitution of the hair. Fletcher, in the Woman Beautiful, says: "The texture and vitality of the hair are even more seriously affected by bleaching than by any coloring agent. That most commonly used, peroxide of hydrogen, will, if its use be persisted in, utterly destroy the hair. It induces an actual decay of the hair structure, rendering it brittle and shriveling up."

DELIGHTFUL POISONS.

A. O. K.—Oleanders are poisonous. Scientists say poison lurks in the aroma of the lilac, lily and the rose. The condemnation is sweeping. Even the violet, emblem of innocence and timid and shrinking flower, beloved of poets, is included in the list of flowers that should be avoided as one avoids an unmasked evil. Particularly is the worning given that flowers be kept from invalid's rooms. French scientists particularly warn vocalists not to inhale odor of violets. Instances are cited of eminent songstresses being seized with a mysterious throat affection just on the eve of their appearing in the limelight. This strange seizure has actually prevented the vocalist from fulfilling an engagement. A close examination of a Japanese plant, the mirabilis, showed that when moths fluttered within reach of its odor they fell dead. As a result of unloading a vessel laden with Holland bulbs, 2 stevedores died. They were asphyxiated by the carbonic acid gas generated by the bulbs in the hold. That led to the building of lattice work pillars reaching from the floor of the hold to the deck, these acting as ventilators. A British doctor, writing in the Lancet, tells of an experience of his in trying to resuscitate two Chinamen who had gone down into the hold of a vessel laden with oranges, garlic, soy beans, sugar and cooked rice, and says the respiration of the oranges and garlic in the absence of ventilation had replaced the oxygen with carbon dioxide.

"WILL you wait?", snapped Waring, addressing the house detective. "I will send you"——

"I'll ring the office, and there'll be a nice scandal in the mornin' papers," jeered Grimfel. "Come through!"

Waring turned to the girl. "This man—misunderstands"——

Her heavy breathing had subsided a trifle. "Never mind—him. Let—us—go"——

"Nothin' doin'," said Grimfel. "You'll pay, or"——

Waring silenced the girl with a gesture. "Have you a blank check?" he asked the detective.

"You—bet—and a fountain pen." Grimfel gave both to Waring. The latter walked to a desk and wrote a check for the amount Grimfel named. He gave it to the man. Grimfel folded it and placed it in an inside pocket. He walked to the door, where he stopped a minute.

"I can see," he said, "why you didn't notice the little stenographer."

Waring made no answer, and Grimfel closed the door behind him. Waring locked it. He turned to the girl questioningly.

"Who was that man?" she asked.

"The house detective, a—an unclean person. He"—— But he did not have to explain to her; a slight color was visible, suddenly, against the pallor of her cheek.

"Then he does not know about"—— she began, slightly relieved.

"The matters we know of?" Waring shook his head. "But tell me"——

She interrupted him. "Come, at once! They will be here"——

"Who?"

"Bergson knows that you—are not Carvajal. In a room over him, I could hear him telling the others—he sent them here—to kill you. He knows that you are Philip Waring, and"——

"But how did you get here?"

"He didn't think of me—no one noticed as I crept downstairs. I got a taxicab—it's at the side entrance. If we hurry, they may not miss me. We might get back there—with the police—before Bergson knows"——

Waring saw the point. A surprise capture, before Conybear could be injured. * * * They stepped into the hall together.

"You—you're a wonder," he told her. "But how did you know my room?"

"I registered; I saw the name Jacques Pelletier—that, I knew, was the name you were to use. I got a room on your floor and—here, this elevator."

They descended. Through a narrow hall—from which opened parlors that would be filled a little later when ladies, returning from the theater, paused to arrange their hair before supper—they passed, to come out upon the street through an inconspicuous door.

"He's waiting—the taxi," said the girl. "We can go right to the nearest police station, and"——

Her words were lost to Waring in the roar that came from the engine as the chauffeur cranked the car. He handed her in, and still the engine's roaring made him miss her next words. He knew that she spoke, but that was all. He thrust his head through the door.

"Did you ask someth"—— he began. But he did not finish the question. He felt suddenly sick and limp, and his head seemed very large, so large that it filled the whole taxicab, would burst in another moment, he was certain. He felt hands drag him into the interior of the machine; he felt the machine start; he wondered what had happened. Then he knew; he had been struck a heavy blow on the head. Claire, his Claire, had inveigled him into the taxi. * * * No, he wouldn't believe that; he'd ask her; she'd tell him it wasn't so. * * * He lost consciousness.

CHAPTER XIII.

THE telephone in his bedroom awoke Commissioner Herkomer from a restless sleep. He had not retired until 2 o'clock, and at the time of retiring he was no nearer the solution of the kidnaping mysteries than when Peter Perkins had first brought him the note signed by Burton Conybear.

In the short space of time it took for him to reach over and grasp the telephone Herkomer reviewed all that had happened since Peter Perkins brought him the creased and wrinkled note. And though the lightning review brought him dismay, his voice was alert and crisp as he asked who called.

"It's Kelcey speakin', Commissioner. Legay and Dibblee are dead."

Herkomer swung his legs out of bed. "What?"

"Yes, sir." Kelcey's voice held a mixture of excitement and regret. "And Waring's Jap servant, too."

"Then they got Waring?"

"No, sir. You know Legay and Dibblee were sent to Waring's apartment, sir. Well, I got down here to headquarters an hour ago, and no report had come in from them during the night. I thought that was funny, so I telephoned the Thirtieth street 'house,' that bein' the nearest station, and told 'em to rush a man over to give Waring's place the once-over. Well, Commissioner, he got the jaintor to let him in, and he finds a Jap—the janitor said it was Waring's servant—and Legay and Dibblee, dead. Knifed, the whole three of 'em. No weapons found on any of 'em. Janitor don't know nothin' about it. Havin' him brought to headquarters, but the man that went over from the 'house' says he's ignorant of anything. He phoned that he's bringin' him in, though."

"Right. I'll be down as soon as I've had a bite"——

"Somethin else, Commissioner," said Kelcey quickly. "Though the janitor of Waring's place don't seem to know anythin,' the hallboy of the apartment across the street does—the night boy. He didn't get off duty until 8 this mornin,' and he saw the ambulance that was sent over from the hospital ,and he crossed over, and"——

"Get to it, Kelcey," admonished Herkomer impatiently.

"Well, sir, it seems like the boy was smokin' a cigarette on the street last night and he saw Dibblee and Legay sort of hangin' around. He lives near Dibblee, though he don't know him to speak to, and knew he was on the force, so he was kinda interested. Well, while they was hangin.' around, along came a couple of men and entered the building. The boy says in about five minutes Dibblee and Legay crossed over after them, and from where he was standin' he could see that Dibblee was ringin' a bell. Then they went in and he could still see them enter the door of a ground-floor apartment—that's Waring's. And he says he's dead sure them other two men went in the same apartment after ringin' the bell. And the other apartments in the building have been visited already, and none of the tenants will admit having four men, or two men, visit 'em last evenin', and"——

"Well, well?" snapped Herkomer.

"Why, the boy knows Waring by sight, and he says that neither of the first two men was him. And he says that the first two come out in about 10 minutes and walked away swift, scared-like. That's all, sir. Nothin' else has come up."

Herkomer dressed swiftly and breakfasted at a rate that made his motherly old housekeeper shake her head mournfully. The telephone rang again as he was leaving the house, and he turned back impatiently.

"Kelcey talkin', Commissioner."

"I'm on my way downtown now," said Herkomer.

"Don't, sir. There's somethin' new come up. The Traders' Loan just telephoned, sir. A check was just presented for cashing there. It was dated yesterday, and was for a hundred dollars."

"Are they holding the man?" cried Herkomer.

"We hadn't told them to, sir,' Kelcey defended himself. "Your orders was simply to round up Waring's bank account and tell the bank to notify us if a check from him went through, and to hold Waring himself on some pretext or other."

"But it don't make no difference, Commissioner. The paying teller was no boob. The check was a blank of another bank, with the Traders' Loan's name written in. And while the check was made out to 'cash,' the teller hemmed and hawed and said this was a bit unusual, and—well, anyway, he got the guy to write his name on it, and then he phoned the bank whose name was scratched out, and—why, I know the guy who presented it, Dan Grimfel. He's house detective at the Plutonia, and a fine second-story man he is, too.'

"And you think he's at the Plutonia now?"

"I made sure of that before I phoned you, sir. I telephoned the hotel and got him on the wire. I told him that Commissioner Herkomer would be wantin' to see him, and for him to hang around until he heard from me again."

"But he may take alarm and"——

Kelcey guffawed. "I know that bird, Commissioner. He's crooked as a ram's horn, and yellower than a canary! Run? Him? Say, he's sweatin' blood now if he done anythin' wrong, and too scared to move. He'll be waitin' for you, Commissioner."

Herkomer hung up—fairly ran to the car awaiting him.

It was a very nervous Dan Grimfel, somewhat different from the blustering blackmailer that had talked with Phil Waring, who met Commissioner Herkomer at the desk of the Plutonia.

"You wanted a little talk with me, Commissioner?" said Grimfel.

"You're Grimfel, eh? The man that cashed a check drawn by Philip Waring, this morning?"

"Sh-sh!" Grimfel's eyes pleaded. The curious clerk, recognizing Herkomer—the Commissioner was no stranger to the hotel—drew a little nearer. "Couldn't you come down to the grill, Commissioner? There's nobody there this time o' mornin'."

Herkomer nodded. He had no particular desire to have his conversation overheard.

"Well?" he said as with the house detective he sat down at a table in the grill room. He waved away a hovering waiter.

"Y'see, Commissioner," began Grimfel, "they're a nosy bunch up at the desk, and I thought maybe you might have somethin' private"——

"I have. When did Waring give you that check?"

"Why, he gave it to me last night, Commissioner," answered the house detective easily.

"What time last night?" asked Herkomer.

"Oh, I guess it was about 9 o'clock."

"And what did Waring give you the check for?"

"Well"—Grimfel shrugged his shoulders and nodded his head from side to side—"I ain't on trial, am I, Commissioner?"

"What do you mean?" demanded Herkomer.

"Why, Commissioner, there aint any harm in a couple of gentlemen makin' a harmless little bet with each other, is there?"

"Not at all, Grimfel. That's how it happened, eh?"

"Yes, sir." He eyed the Commissioner with veiled contempt. For Herkomer was rising from the table as though satisfied.

"That all, Commissioner?" questioned Grimfel.

"Yes—here," replied Herkomer. "But I want you to ride downtown with me."

'Eh? But I got my job here, Commissioner."

'Not any more, Grimfel,' said Herkomer very kindly. "There's a nice little cell down at headquarters where you belong. Come on!"

His voice was suddenly crisp and hard. Grimfel stared at him. But Herkomer smiled.

"You see, Grimfel, it's very important to me that I acquire all the information about Philip Waring that it's possible for me to acquire. And I must acquire it in about five minutes—five seconds, if possible. You're in a mood to lie, Grimfel; I'm in the mood to hear the truth. I won't change my mood; a cell may change yours. Come on!"

But Kelcey knew the Grimfel character, and had not erred in his description thereof. Grimfel seemed physically to curl up.

"Sit down, Commissioner," he said huskily. He had been fooled; Herkomer had not been fooled.

And Grimfel told the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. Herkomer listened. The contempt that he felt for Grimfel at the latter's recital he hid.

"You'd better stay around here; I may want you," was all his response to Grimfel's story. Then he went upstairs and telephoned Kelcey to come at once to the Plutonia. That matter attended to, and fortified by Kelcey's assurance that he would be at the hotel as soon as the swiftest police automobile could convoy him there, Herkomer turned his attention to the register, the clerk offering no objection.

He found the name "Jacques Pelletier." There was no question in Herkomer's mind as to the truth of Grimfel's story. A man does not confess blackmail unless he is telling the truth. "Jacques Pelletier" was Philip Waring. And Grimfel had said that the girl whom he had seen in Waring's room had registered under the name of "Doris Marchant."

Herkomer knew enough of Philip Waring to be quite certain that this was no vulgar intrigue in which Waring had been caught by Grimfel. It stood to reason that a man playing the desperate game that Waring was playing, a game in which millionaires had been kidnaped and policemen and a Jap servant murdered, would not be indulging in liasons at the very moment when his crimes were nearing their climaxes.

The clerk winked at Herkomer. "Two of 'em—both without baggage—changed their minds about staying here. That's all."

Herkomer heard the man, but did not heed him. If Waring had had a "date" with a girl, neither he nor the girl would have gone to quite such roundabout methods of keeping it. And according to what the porter who had seen the couple leave had told the night clerk, Waring and the girl had left the Plutonia within ten minutes after the girl had registered. The girl, then, had come for Waring. Where had she taken him?

Kelcey arrived as Herkomer reached this question. Swiftly the Commissioner told what he had learned.

"Well, there's a taxi-starter," suggested the Sergeant.

Herkomer nodded. He turned to the desk, behind which now stood the manager of the hotel, anxious for his hostlery's reputation. He mentioned his private office, and Herkomer allowed himself to be led there, followed by Kelcey. There was no necessity for taking the manager into his confidence, and the Commissioner did not do so. He merely stated that he wished to learn where the two fleeting guests of the hotel had gone to. The taxi-starter had a room in the servants' quarter of the hotel. He came down, bristly as to beard and dulled as to eye, but able and willing to tell what he knew of the departure of Waring and the girl.

"They stepped into a taxi like they was in a hurry," he said, "and the taxi went off. That's all there was."

"Did you hear the address they gave?"

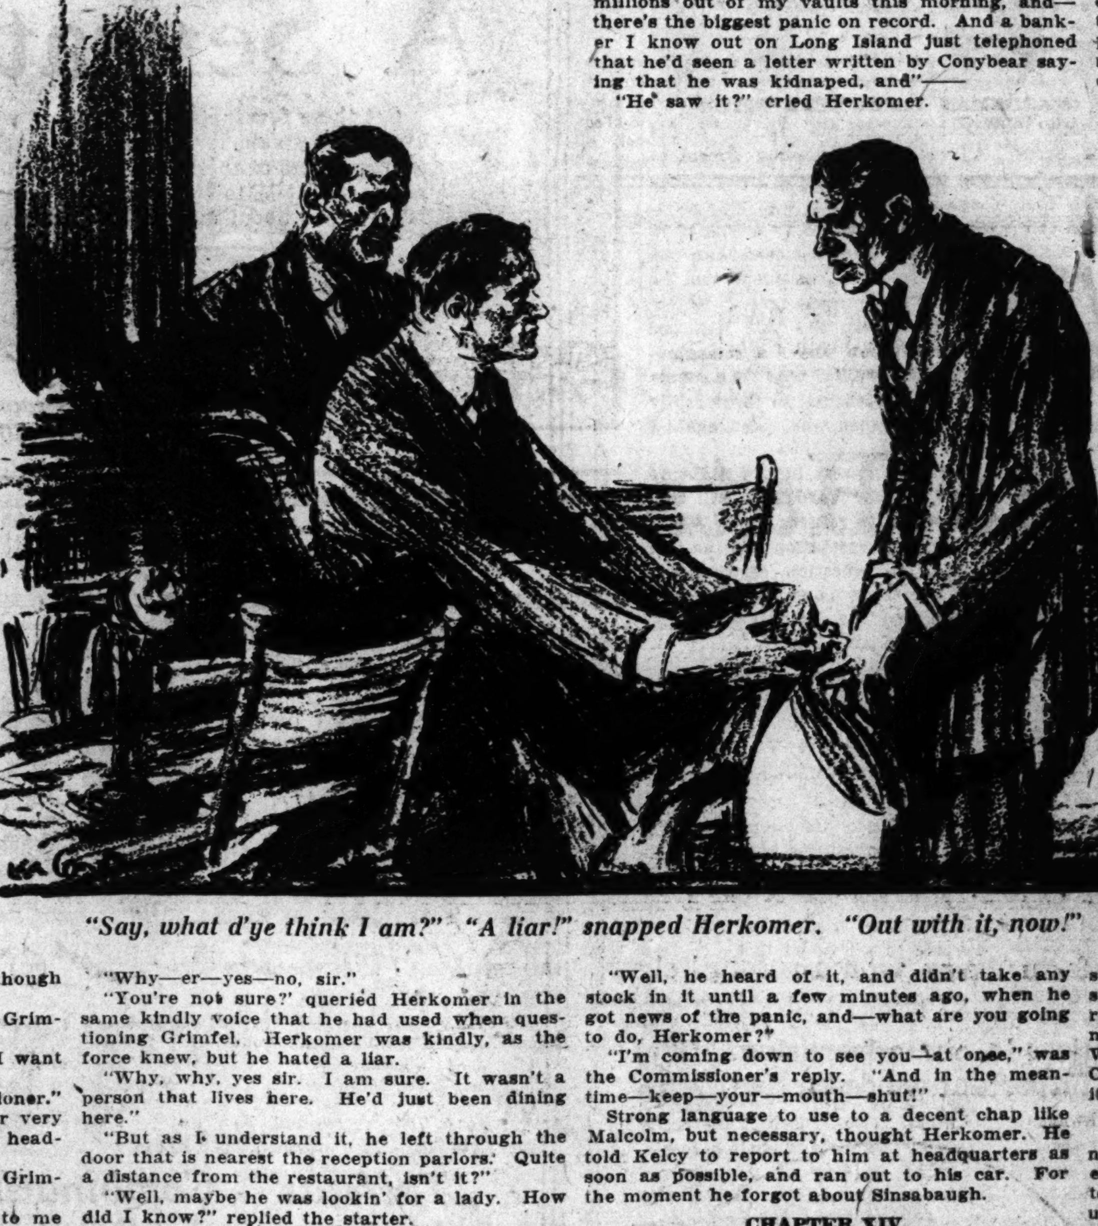
The starter shook his head. "I don't believe they gave any. The lady said something, and the gent stuck his head in the door, and then he climbed in the rest of the way and the car started."

"Who drove the taxi? Happen to recognize him?" asked Kelcey.

But it was Herkomer who caught the shifty glint in the starter's eye, the too-honest bluffness of his voice.

"No, sir; someone was coming out the door, a guest, sir, and I turned to him to ask if he wanted a taxi, sir."

"A guest, eh? You mean a person that lives here?"



"Say, what d'ye think I am?" "A liar!" snapped Herkomer. "Out with it, now!"

"Why—er—yes—no, sir."

"You're not sure?" queried Herkomer in the same kindly voice that he had used when questioning Grimfel. Herkomer was kindly, as the force knew, but he hated a liar.

"Why, why, yes sir. I am sure. It wasn't a person that lives here. He'd just been dining here."

"But as I understand it, he left through the door that is nearest the reception parlors. Quite a distance from the restaurant, isn't it?"

"Well, maybe he was lookin' for a lady. How did I know?" replied the starter.

His tone was sulky now, and a man telling the truth would have had no reason for sulkiness.

"How much did someone give you to tell this story?" asked Herkomer.

"How much—say, what d'ye think I am?"

"A liar," snapped Herkomer. "Out with it, now! As if a starter would make it his business to know a regular guest when he saw one! And you weren't sure. Out with it!"

Authority works marvels. The taxi starter could have blustered and bluffed a civilian, even as Dan Grimfel could have done. But behind Herkomer was the majesty of the law, with all its vague, mysterious threats.

"Come, I'm in a hurry," insisted Herkomer. And as Grimfel had yielded, so this man yielded.

"Well, I didn't know there was anything in it, or"——

"We won't bother with the excuses, please," said Herkomer.

"Well,' the starter gulped, "it was like I said. The lady and gent got into a taxi, only—it wasn't the one that the lady had drove up in and that she'd told to wait. Just as she went into the hotel, three men stepped out of a taxi that had followed hers to the curb. One of them spoke to the chauffeur that had driven the lady and handed him something, and the chauffeur cranked up and drove off. The other machine moved up a little, and the guy that had been talkin' with the chauffeur noticed me lookin' on, kind of curious, and he come up to me and he says: 'Playin' a little joke, Starter. Buy yourself a smoke. And talkin' is mighty unhealthy,' he says. And he slipped me twenty; so"——

"And who was the first chauffeur? Did you recognize him—the one that drove the lady here?"

The starter was thoroughly cowed and truthful. "Yes, sir," he answered meekly. "His name was Monte Messerman, sir."

"That's all," said Herkomer, and he turned to Kelcey.

"Anybody with you?"

"Brought up a couple of men, sir," the Sergeant replied.

"Well, have them look up Jacques Pelletier at the Anson. There should be some reason for Waring's taking that name and that address—Dubuque. Find out. Look up this Monte Messerman. Find out where he picked up the girl before bringing her here."

"Yes, sir. And are you going to headquarters, sir?"

Herkomer shook his head. "I'm going to call on Sinsabaugh. It seems to me that he may be able to give me some information."

A page passed by, droning: "Tel-phone for Mr. Herk'mer, Mr. Herk'mer on the phone."

Herkomer stopped the boy and verified his hearing. The telephone was for him. He went to a booth, wonderingly. It was Malcolm, president of the Seventy-third National Bank; and his voice was the voice of a man in agony:

"Herkomer? Thank God! I had the devil's own time getting your damned headquarters to tell me where you were, but now"——

Herkomer heard a gusty sigh of relief. It was so different from what might have been expected from the suave and debonnair Malcolm that he was shocked.

"What's wrong?" he demanded.

"You haven't seen a ticker? It's hardly time for the papers to have it, though they will in a minute or two."

"Have what?"

"The news of what's going on in Wall street, in Boston, in Philadelphia—all over the country!"

"What?" roared Herkomer.

"The worst bear market in history. Worse than when the great war broke out. Everything being thrown overboard! By God, they're crying the first extras now! It means ruin, ruin for the whole country, Herkomer, unless"——

"Pull yourself together, Malcolm," advised Herkomer. "What can I do?"

"Do? You can find Burton Conybear, if you're anything at all of a Commissioner!"

"Find him?" So the cat was out of the bag already! "Why—where is he?"

"That's for you to find out! But I've heard that he's kidnapped, and if he is, I want to know it, for—my God, Herkomer; he got over fifty millions out of my vaults this morning, and—there's the biggest panic on record. And a banker I know out on Long Island just telephoned that he'd seen a letter written by Conybear saying that he was kidnaped, and"——

"He saw it?" cried Herkomer.

"Well, he heard of it, and didn't take any stock in it until a few minutes ago, when he got news of the panic, and—what are you going to do, Herkomer?"

"I'm coming down to see you—at once," was the Commissioner's reply. "And in the meantime—keep—your—mouth—shut!"

Strong language to use to a decent chap like Malcolm, but necessary, thought Herkomer. He told Kelcy to report to him at headquarters as soon as possible, and ran out to his car. For the moment he forgot about Sinsabaugh.

CHAPTER XIV.

A POLICEMAN peremptorily stopped Herkomer at Twenty-third street.

"Jump in here," Herkomer ordered.

Hereafter, nearsighted policemen not recognizing their chief and not granting him the right of way over all traffic would yield to the blue uniform of the traffic officer.

He was in the financial district now; his blue-garbed companion was standing up in the machine, hoarsely bawling for the right of way, which was given. Yet of the scores of thousands on the streets and sidewalks, hardly one gave a glance toward the racing machine; they were too intent on their thoughts, their fears, to which newsboys gave shouting expression:

"Panic on Wall street! Panic on Wall street!"

"Stay by the car," Herkomer commanded the officer as he drew up before the Seventy-third National. He alighted and ran up the steps, to be met half way by Malcolm.

The debonnair young genius of finance fairly seized Herkomer by the arm, dragging him past the long queue of customers, practically all of whom, the Commissioner noted, were at the paying teller's windows.

But Herkomer hid his feeling from the banker and was smiling as he faced Malcolm across a desk in the latter's private office.

"Now, let's have it—briefly," he said.

A certain calm about Herkomer made Malcolm ashamed of his own fright. He swallowed painfully, and when he spoke he spoke deliberately:

"The Exchange opened steadily enough. Exactly one hour after opening time, however, it was deluged with selling orders. Selling orders that didn't come in thousand-share lots, but in ten thousand, in twenty-thousand-share orders.

"I was at the office of one of the governors of the Exchange when the thing started. From the beginning I could see that it promised to be bad, so I raced over here to my bank, to steady my people against the rush that was inevitable, to try and steady our customers. But I've kept in touch with the governors. While you were on your way down here they phoned me again—it's the Conybear-Clurg-Prendergast-Larned-Mikells crowd that started this. Their brokers—we know that the big selling houses are operating for them, although they'll admit nothing—started with an attack on Conybear's own pet stock, Amalgamated Products—to throw dust in somebody's eyes, I guess. But that was only the beginning; transportation, textiles, steel—everything is being thrown overboard.

"And it's been done without any rhyme or reason except the greed of Conybear and his crowd! That's why he took his cash reserve from my vaults this morning. I don't know how much he had in gold certificates, but I do know that it was over fifty millions, for he said as much once. Think! In addition to the prestige of his name, in addition to the credits he'll establish with all the stock he's sold, he'll have fifty millions—and millions, tens of millions more than the others will furnish—to buy at the low marks that will be established today, and"——

"But what's his game? Just to make money on a bear market?"

Malcolm shook his head despairingly. "There's been a rumor that he intended to combine Amalgamated Products and all the transcontinental railroads, and coastwise shipping lines. I know that he and several others went to the President a year ago, asking him what were the chances of the repeal of the Sherman law and the other anti-trust laws."

"A megalomaniac!" cried Herkomer.

"Maybe. But Conybear had it worked out wonderfully. He showed the President exactly how such a combination would reduce the cost of living, would make for efficiency and all that sort of thing. Government ownership of everything—only Conybear and his associates were to be the Government!

"But the President dismissed him immediately. It was absurd for Conybear to propose such a thing. But the laws can't prevent him from owning a majority of the different industries. He can go around having interlocking directorates, too. He can, with his crowd, own practically everything of importance, do away with wasteful competition"——

"It sounds worthy," interpolated Herkomer.

"Of course. Those things always sound well. Only, Conybear will use the thing as a means to further wealth. But only a saint from heaven bearing St. Peter's seal would be able to get the consent of the American people and Government to what, on the face of it, is a return to those principles of private ownership without public responsibility from which we have only recently escaped.

"But Conybear seems to have been obsessed with the idea of combination in effect. And what better time than now, when Europe is dreadfully in debt, when we've loaned millions, billions, almost, abroad, and Europe is buying none of our stocks or bonds!"

"What has that to do with it?" demanded Herkomer.

"Everything! Even Conybear couldn't fight the wealth of a normal Europe. And a normal Europe would be so interested in our market here that it would hurl millions into the street tomorrow—this afternoon. But Conybear has only to fear his fellow capitalists, and those are with him—the biggest of them, at any rate."

"And you think that the bottom is going to be knocked out of everything?"

"It's being knocked out now," groaned Malcolm.

"Then what can I do?"

"Do? Conybear is obsessed. Megalomania is right! He thinks that he can get away with a thing like this! Man dear, if this panic lasts into tomorrow—and the Exchange can't close down again as it did when the great war broke out—if this panic continues into tomorrow, Conybear and his crowd will ride rails. And all your police department and the Federal Government can't stop it, either! Wall street has been decent for a long time; the thimble-rigging is ended. It's a legitimate market for the legitimate investor now. Wall street is essential to the business life of the nation, and the business life means actual life. Wall street has survived a thousand blows. It can survive no blow like this. If the people come to realize that their life savings are still at the mercy of a buccaneer like Conybear—God help Wall street! So it's up to you—up to you to find Conybear, and if he won't listen to reason, then it's up to you to make him heed force!"

"You mean?"

"I mean that when one man can jeopardize a nation, it's up to the guardians of the law to enforce its spirit, not its letter. It's up to you to place a dangerous megalomaniac like Conybear under restraint."

Herkomer shrugged his shoulders at this phase of the situation.

"First catch your rabbit," he said laconically. "Where is Conybear?"

Malcolm thumped the desk with a knotted fist. "I shut up that fool out in Portsmouth," he snapped. "It's bad enough for people to know that one man can do a thing like this, but if they realized that the kidnaping of one man—but that's absurd," he ended more calmly. "Conybear has just decided to get under cover for a while. And you want to drag him out."

"But his brokers—he left instructions with them?" asked Herkomer.

"They won't admit it; they simply grin and say nothing," was Malcolm's reply. "But I happen to know—one of the governors told me this half an hour ago—that a list of brokers had sealed orders from Conybear to be opened this morning. And those sealed orders contained instructions to sell all along the line until further word from him. That is in the strictest confidence, of course."

"And you think I can make Conybear give that word?"

"I could if I were Police Commissioner," said Malcolm savagely.

"But you spoke of kidnaping. How can that be, if Conybear was at your vaults this morning? You saw him?"

Macolm shook his head. "No; I was down at the Exchange conferring with one of the governors on a private matter—it has to do with a new course at my golf club," he grinned reluctantly. "But Conybear came here, attended by a band of retainers, with suitcases and—well, I entered his vaults myself a while ago. They're stripped—clean. And I know what he had there! So he's around town, and he passed that Amalgamated dividend merely to pave the way for this panic! If I"——

Then Malcolm stopped short as his telephone rang. He listened for a moment, and then he turned, with a queer look in his eyes, to Herkomer.

"It's Symons, Hathway Symons, president of the Amalgamated," he said dully, "and Symons tells me that he's calling a conference of bankers, that Conybear is kidnaped, and so are Larned and"——

Herkomer grabbed the instrument.

"Symons? This is Commissioner Herkomer. If you have anything more to say about the gentlemen just mentioned, don't say it over the telephone! You understand?"

"I do," cried Symons, "and I understand, further, that you've put me off before on this matter. Your police force is incompetent. Five of the biggest men in America have disappeared; panic follows upon their disappearance, and you bid me keep quiet!"

"But you must realize what public knowledge of this matter means," parried Herkomer.

"Can it possibly mean more than what is happening now?" cried Symons. "You've had plenty of time in which to apprehend the kidnapers, restore their victims; and yet when I telephoned your office a moment ago your man Kelcey, whom I talked with first, tells me that there is nothing to report as yet. Nothing to report!"

"But you're talking to me now, not Kelcey," said Herkomer, sweetly.

"Well, what have you to report? Have you found Conybear?"

"No, but I know where he is."

"You do? Where? For God's sake tell me, so that"——

"Easy. I can't tell you—yet."

"Why not?"

"Do you happen to remember that I am Commissioner of Police?"

"Well?"

"I don't tell department business to everyone. But you may take my word for it—take my word for this: if Burton Conybear is not at his office tomorrow morning, there will be a new Commissioner of Police. In the meantime, the panic can't be checked. Let it run its course. Conybear will be on hand. Is that enough?"

"I suppose it must be," grunted Symons. "May I tell that, on your authority, to my associates?"

"You may," said Herkomer.

He hung up the receiver to meet the amazed eyes of Malcolm.

"Do you know where Conybear is?" asked Malcolm.

Herkomer shook his head. "He was here this morning. In the fastest automobile, he couldn't have gone more than a few hundred miles from this bank. So I know that much. He's in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Connecticut or Massachusetts. Considering what a big earth this is, that's narrowing his whereabout down quite a bit, don't you think?"

"Can you locate Conybear before tomorrow morning?"

"If I don't, I'll resign."

"That wont help much."

Herkomer looked the young banker over carefully. True, Malcolm was excited, but so was Herkomer, though he hid it a bit better. And Malcolm had brains. He might be able to aid. Swiftly, not wasting a word, Herkomer told the banker the events that had transpired since Peter Perkins had come into the Commissioner's office with the note signed by Conybear.

Malcolm waited, with a patience rather remarkable, considering his excitement, until Herkomer had finished. And now Malcolm was the keen, reasoning man of affairs again.

"That note you mention? The one you showed me?"

Herkomer nodded.

"Let me see it again," demanded Malcolm.

Herkomer produced it from his pocket.

Malcolm studied it only a moment. "The signature is genuine," he announced, "but the body of the note—it's a forgery!"

"It doesnt look as though Conybear had been kidnaped," said Herkomer, dryly, "considering that he was in his vaults here today."

"But why such a silly forgery?" mused Malcolm. He reached for the telephone. He asked for the number of the Portsmouth National Bank.

"If my friend out there knew about it—it was brought to you sealed?"

Herkomer nodded assent. Another mystery, added to those already confronting them, was rathing dazing. Neither spoke until Malcolm got the Portsmouth banker on the telephone. Malcolm asked only a few questions. Then he hung up and turned to the commissioner.

"He says that a half-witted man named Peter Perkins went to his bank this morning and said that he ought to get a reward for telling him that Burton Conybear was kidnaped. He seemed quite upset when he got no reward. He said that the Commissioner of Police in New York had rewarded him for giving him a letter from Mr. Conybear, and he thought that my friend in Portsmouth ought to do as much. This Perkins, as you've said, is a half-wit, and my friend reiterates that statement, but—Perkins evidently knew the contents of the letter, and"——

But now Herkomer had taken up the telephone and Malcolm was quiet. Herkomer asked for the Portsmouth Chief of Police, and got him within three minutes. He announced his identity and asked that the Portsmouth police round up and bring immediately to headquarters in New York the man Peter Perkins.

"He isn't as foolish as he'd have had me think," he said to Malcolm. He reached for his hat. "I ought to be at my office. I can't do anything for you, Malcolm, except to tell you that I'll be on the job. And if anything comes up—man, there's no cryptogram in that note!"

For the banker was studying the note that was signed by Conybear, but the body of which was, indisputably if Malcolm said so, a forgery.

"No," said Malcolm, "but it's odd paper. This waterproofed stuff—it's Government stuff—limited supply, sold only to the Government, to the State Department—used for messages carried by secret service agents and all that sort of thing. Note paper's a hobby of mine, you know," he added half-apologetically.

"I see," said Herkomer. He reached for the note, put it in his pocketbook, and with an effort at a cheerful farewell and a promise to keep Malcolm in touch with events, he left the bank.

The traffic policeman was waiting in the car. He served once more to clear the path for the Commissioner as the automobile raced toward headquarters. There, in his office, Herkomer found Kelcey in a fever of impatience. But another man was there, even more excited. This man was William Sinsabaugh, and Herkomer was very glad indeed to see Mr. Sinsabaugh.

CAMOUFLAGE....

Many Prominent Women Registering at Red Cross Office for Instruction in Motor and Ambulance Driving Classes—Patriotic Ball on Oct. 25 Promises to Be Big Event of the Season—All Boxes Sold First Day.

THERE are not many more popular places in St. Louis these days than the Red Cross Office, where registrations are taking place for the instruction classes in motor and ambulance drivers. The list almost looks like a page from the Social Register, and each day names of women prominent in the social world are added. The instruction is given at the Y. W. C. A. building and all branches of repair work, mechanism and handling of automobiles in all sorts of emergencies are included in the course.

How queer it must be to see Mrs. Ray Carter handling greasy bolts, adjusting spark plugs, putting on tires and all the other work incidental to a practical knowledge of automobiles. Then there is Miss Frances Filley and Miss Grace Semple, who would look much more natural with a golf club in their hands. Mrs. Erwin Hilts is another, but she has driven her own car for so long that there will not be so much for her to learn. Miss Bertha Bates, who is noted for her graceful dancing, has also enrolled. Mrs. Sam Fordyce Jr., Mrs. Robert Holland, Mrs. Harry Langenberg, always equal to any emergency, and many others have put on the regulation service uniform of a gray coat, aviators' cap, puttees, leather belt and an arm band of the American Red Cross with a wheel on it and the letters A. R. C. inside. St. Louis women are ever ready to serve where they can and no patriotic movement is started that does not seem to meet with the hearty approval and interest of women who during times of peace form the gay, social life of our city.

THERE is a fashionable affair on the social calendar to which society is looking forward with an unusual amount of anticipation, and that is the patriotic ball to be given under the auspices of the Inter-Sorority Council at the Arcadia on Oct. 25. The proceeds of this affair are for the purchase of equipment for the Navy Drum Corps and Naval Scouts. No doubt this ball will be one of the largest and most successful of the year, for with practically no large private affairs to be given, society will have to depend upon patriotic benefit entertainments in the way of balls and card parties for its social diversion.

Miss Alice Martin will give a patriotic classic dance at this ball and have charge of the dancing, and Gus Haenschen will furnish the music. On the first day of the sale of boxes, every one was sold and one patriotic citizen whose family is one of social prestige purchased 350 tickets. If that is an indication of the interest being manifested it is sure to be one of the successes of the season. Some of those who are sponsoring the affair are Mmes. Howard Benoist, Theodore Benoist, J. D. Perry Francis, Auguste Chouteau, Walker Hill, Festus J. Wade, John O'Fallon Delany, Eugene Angert, Lon O. Hocker, Paul Bakewell Jr., Thomas L. MISS REBECCA GARESCHE WHOSE ENGAGEMENT TO MR. HENRY F. BISBEE HAS BEEN MADE KNOWN...

THESE Indian summer days have been ideal for the annual Woman's Golf Championship Tournament which has been in full swing the last week at the Midland Valley Country Club. The entire entry fees of the tournament go to the Red Cross for war relief work, which fact, aside from the competition involved, made it an event of unusual interest.

The links were in almost perfect condition. There were 60 entries this year, all of them women well known in the different Country Club sets. Some of those who entered were Mmes. Claude Kennerly, George Simmons, Sterling Edmunds, Ed Simmons, Dan K. Catlin, Henry Boeckeler, Alden Little, Charles Parsons Pettus, Al Terry, James McCluney, John Caulk and A. N. Edwards.

SINCE music is to be so prominent in the winter pleasures this year, the Symphony concerts will be more largely attended than ever before. Already all the boxes for the Friday afternoon concerts have been taken. Music is a form of entertainment that leaves one something worth thinking about afterward, and now that few families are without some friend or relative serving his country, people seem more serious minded and perhaps have a desire for entertainment more worth while. The array of boxholders for the coming year is greater than it has ever been and include such well-known names as Messrs. and Mmes. Herbert L. Parker, Charles Pope O'Fallon, William Bagnell, J. Campbell Smith ed man in a regimental band. Both Casiova and Grainger have donated their services and the entire proceeds will go to the Red Cross.

The other entertainment on the same evening will be a lecture given by Abbe Patrick Flynn, who is an officer in the French army and has been in service since the beginning of the war. He has but recently arrived in this country from "No-Man's-Land" and his account of the conditions and incidents there will no doubt be very enlightening. The patronesses of this entertainment are Mrs. Theodore Benoist, who is the president of the Catholic Women's League; Mmes. Daniel C. Nugent, Charles F. Bates, John H. Carton, Seth W. Cobb, Amedee V. Reyburn, Leo de Smet Carton, Benoist Carton, Edward H. Walsh, William C. McBride, Howard Benoist, Charles Farris, D. G. Taylor and Misses Emilie Maffitt and Josephine Cobb.

It was with pleasure that the fact was noted last week that at a meeting of the chaperons of the "Every-other-Friday" Club it was decided to continue the dances during the winter. It is rather unusual for a club of this sort to be in existence for 28 years, but such is the record of the "Every-other-Friday" Club, which is generally called the "Fortnightly." Its dances are the most important "sub-deb" affairs in St. Louis and nearly every Veiled Prophet Queen for the last 10 or 15 years has been a member of this club. Mmes. Howard Benoist, Alonzo C. Church, H. L. Block, Powhatan Clark, James M. Franciscus, Albert Bond Lambert, Harvey Mudd, Charles Nagel, George Niedringhaus, Vincent Price, H. C. Scott, G. Herbert Walker and Peyton Carr.

Distinctive hemstitching, 5c per yard, while you wait; pleating, buttons, work guaranteed. Becker's, 819 Washington. Main 4403.—ADV.

Another interest that will occupy some of the "sub-debs" is a French club organized to meet once a week at the homes of the different members. They are all cultured girls and have traveled extensively, but now that France is no longer available as a point of travel and also owing to the fact that after the war our soldiers will return from foreign shores with a more improved knowledge of the French language, it is just as well that the girls should brush up their understanding of this language. Mlle. Baheux will conduct the class and the first meeting was held last Wednesday at the home of Miss Elizabeth Kennard. Besides Miss Kennard some of the members are Misses Jane Wight, Marion Franciscus, Vesta Reed, Juliette Reyburn, Mary Randolph Gordon, Lucile Capen, Harriette Price and Dorothy Phillips.

GIRLS! USE LEMONS! MAKE A BLEACHING, BEAUTIFYING CREAM

Strain lemon juice well before mixing and massage face, neck, arms and hands. It's splendid!

What girl or woman hasn't heard of lemon juice to remove complexion blemishes; to bleach the skin and to bring out the roses, the freshness and the hidden beauty? But lemon juice alone is acid, therefore irritating and should be mixed with orchard white this way. Strain through a fine cloth the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle containing about three ounces of orchard white, then shake well and you have a whole quarter pint of the best skin and complexion lotion at about the cost one usually pays for a small jar of ordinary cold cream. Be sure to strain the lemon juice so no pulp gets into the bottle, then this lotion will remain pure and fresh for months. When applied daily to the face, neck, arms and hands it really does clear, smoothen and beautify the skin amazingly.

Any druggist will supply three ounces of orchard white at very little cost and the grocer has the lemons.—ADV.

EUROPE BUYING FURS STEADILY IN SPITE OF WAR

John Revillon Says High Wages Paid Workers Is Big Factor in Trade.

INDUSTRY HAS ROMANCE

Throughout Whole of Earth's Wild Places Trappers Seek Valuable Pelts.

Despite the war there has been a larger quantity of furs sold in France, England and Russia than at any time prior to 1914, according to John Revillon, president of Revillon Freres, who attended the Funsten fur auction in this city last week. This condition is true, he said, although furs always have been classed as a luxury. "This is due," said Mr. Revellon, "to many conditions, one if which undoubtedly is the prosperity of working people because of high wages in all trades. At present in Europe there is a big demand for Russian sable, chinchilla and the finest silver fox, as well as most every kind of the less valuable and moderate priced pelts.

"War effects have been felt in the fur supply. Many trappers, white and Indian, have enlisted. But this is a condition that is not at all serious up to the present time."

The fur industry has a romantic side which was touched on by Mr. Revillon.

Trade Has Romantic Side.

"This, like many trades, has numerous tentacles which reach into the remote places of the earth, far beyond the information of many, "he said." The trading posts are established throughout Canada as far as the most extreme northern parts, as well as through the white Siberian world. The Indians do most of the trapping.

"The Canadian trappers work the fall and winter until about Christmas and then bring the skins to the posts in time to attend the Christmas mass. These aborigines are very devout Roman Catholics for the most part educated by French missionaries. After they attend the services the Indians go back to their settlements and rest until about February. This trapping season carries them on to the latter part of March and they they come into the posts again for the Easter services.

"The posts usually are many miles from the trappers' homes, but they bring the skins by canoe or sleigh.

"They exchange furs for merchandise. The basis of the system of exchange is made beavers for merchandise. A made beaver usually is valued at about 33 cents. At the posts in Siberia most of the goods is exchanged for money and bartered among dealers. However, in some few places in Canada where the white man has invaded and trading is done in money, our Indian brothers follow his example and want cash for skins. But the Indians rarely accumulate money. They like finery and fancy things too much to save money.

Eskimo Kills Own Food.

"A comparison can be drawn here with the Eskimo who will trade his skins for very few things. He will trade for muzzle-loading guns, knives, tobacco and field glasses, for the Eskimo still kills his own food. He cannot depend upon merchandise being sent to the post, because getting it to those extreme northern places is too costly.

"Wild animals appear and disappear in cycles, as does the rabbit, upon which they prey. Because of this an established post at which there may be no catch one year will be forced to close and a new post created for the trappers' convenience.

"This extensive phase of the business requires years of organization," declared Mr. Revillon, "and capital to perfect. While it makes for a bigger corporation and a more independent one, it is an enormous undertaking."

Mr. Revillon said that the Canadian Government takes good care of the Indians. For years, he said, there has been absolute prohibition in Northern Canada.

AUSTRALIAN, ENLISTED IN U. S. ARMY, WILL GIVE RECITAL HERE

Composer-Pianist Who Will Serve as Oboe Player to Appear in Red Cross Benefit.

Percy Grainger, picturesque composer-pianist from Australia, who has enlisted as an oboe player in a New York regiment, will appear Tuesday night in a recital at the Odeon for the benefit of the Red Cross. He will be assisted by Miss Marie Caslova, a St. Louis violinist.

Grainger will play a march from his "In a Nutshell' suite and his piano setting of the chanty, "One More Day, My John." In addition he will offer numbers by Bach, Debussy and Chopin.

Miss Caslova will present the Tartini-Kreisler "Devil's Trill," dances by Dvorak and Granados as arranged by Kreisler, and several other numbers.

After-War Control of Shipping Planned.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—According to the Central News, the Government intends to retain control of shipping, shipbuilding and kindred industries until one or two years after the war, instead of six months. The news agency says that Great Britain intends to prevent Germany from obtaining ships from British ship yards through neutral orders until the requirements of Great Britain and her [illegible] are met fully.

W. U. ENROLLMENT TOTAL 130 LESS THAN LAST YEAR

Freshman Class Is Biggest in School's History, but Graduate Department Shows Decrease.

STUDENTS NUMBER 1073

College of Oral and Plastic Surgery for Medical Officers' Reserve Opens Tomorrow.

Final enrollment figures for the current year at Washington University show a total in all the degree-conferring departments of 1073 against 1203 for 1916-'17, a decrease of 130.

"It is a most gratifying situation when the abnormal conditions are taken into account," said Chancellor Frederic A. Hall when he announced the figures.

In the college department there is an increase of 29; the medical school an increase of three, a dozen of the students carrying on their work in France with Base Hospital Unit No. 21; there is a slight decrease in the engineering school; registration in the dental department shows a decrease of about 25 per cent, and the law school has only about 60 per cent of last year's enrollment. The art school also has quite an increase, but this is not a degree-conferring department. The biggest decrease is in the graduate department.

Biggest Freshman Class.

Both the freshman and sophomore classes in the college are substantially larger than last year, the first named being the largest in the university's history.

In the two lower classes men predominate, while in the upper classes the ratio is reversed, a situation accounted for by Chancellor Hall as due to the men entering some of the professional departments at the end of their second year.

Registration for the Saturday and evening courses is not complete, but it promises to be very large for the night instruction.

The College of Oral and Plastic Surgery, established by the surgeon-general of the United States Army, will open tomorrow, a contingent of the Officers' Reserve Medical Corps having been ordered here by the War Department to take three or four weeks' intensive training.

Faculty for New School.

The school instructors were chosen from the Washington University Medical School, the St. Louis University School of Medicine and Washington University Dental School, with a few specialists from outside this city. The head of the school will be Prof. Vilray Papin Blair, head of the department of oral surgery in Washington University Dental School, who is a major in the Medical Reserve Corps. Dean J. H. Kennerly, Prof. E. P. Brady and Dr. W. F. Neuhoff, of the Dental School, have been assigned to the war college.

Beginning this year, the course at the Dental School of Washington University will cover a period of four years insteady of three, as heretofore, and to this fact Dean J. H. Kennerly attributes the decrease of about 25 percent in enrollment since last year.

JEWISH SONG RECITAL TONIGHT

The first recital of Jewish songs ever given in St. Louis will be tonight at the Sheldon Memorial Auditorium, with Pilichas Jassinowsky, Jewish tenor, as soloist. He will present Hebrew folksongs and religious music. Mrs. David Kriegshaber will be the accompanist at the piano and organ.

The Lichtenstein string quartet will play several selections, and accompany the soloist in a group of Jewish cradle songs. Oscar Leonard will give a short address on Hebrew folk music. Jassinowsky recently came to this country from Petrograd.

FAMOUS CHIEFS ARE BOWING AT SHRINE OF AN ARMY COOK

Mexican border and the first favorite at Sammies' table.

There is also an oven where a roast may be brought to a turn, and, as a surprise to you, a big, smooth plate where flapjacks come to life. One kitchen will feed 200 men, a war-strength company, and it will need three men to operate it at its maximum company.

Trailing each kitchen is a fireless cooker with four large compartments. These are very convenient in that the tin receptacles fit either the stove or the fireless department and can be transferred without the bother of emptying of food from one vessel to another.

There are now four regular schools for army cooks—at Fort Sam Houston, Tex.; Fort Riley, Kan.; Monterey, Cal., and Washington Barracks. The next cantonments will increase these schools manyfold. It takes about four months of rigorous instruction to make a first-class army cook, but under the intensive method the cantonment cooks will be educated in half this time.

Oddly enough, the fact that a man has had previous experience is more apt to be a hindrance than a help, and there is a great deal in his natural endowment. As the Sergeant in charge of the cooking school at Washington Barracks said, "You can do more with some men in five minutes' talk than you can with another in a month's hard work." The work begins with a talk on spices, which, to most of us, seems the final touch rather than the rudiments of cooking. But in the army they really begin with the first principles. The desire for food, known as appetite, and certainly spices do much toward making simple dishes tempting and palatable.

Army Irish Stew.

Take, for instance, the army Irish stew. It is far removed from the dull washday dish which answers to that name in most households. The vegetables are tender and flavorous; the meat (round steak) is very delicious, because it is properly cooked; and the gravy; it's thick, but not thickening, and so very good with the meat juices and vegetable flavorings accented with spices that there is a justifiable temptation to wipe the last bit of it from the plate with a piece of the excellent army bread.

To the average cook and housewife this bread is very remarkable, for it is made without milk and without lard. When you see it going into action in the floured hands of a squad, of bakers your comment is that the shortening is "elbow grease," for it is worked until the dough is perfectly smooth. They "cut it over" five times, which takes about 45 minutes of hard working, so hard no mixing machine is strong enough to do the work.

The most difficult thing to teach the student bakers, or "slick ears," as they are called, is the shaping of a loaf. This must be uniform, as there must always be 12 pounds, divided into six equal loaves, in a pan. The recipe for a batch of bread calls for 200 pounds flour, 4 pounds sugar, 4 pounds salt, 1½ pounds yeast, and 13¼ gallons of water. The bakery at Washington Barracks turns out 3500 pounds a day and every man gets his pound.

What They Eat.

There are many very delicious and exceedingly efficient recipes in the Manual for Army Cooks, and Uncle Sam gives his boys all three of their excellent meals for an average of 40 cents a day. If the economy of the army kitchen could be brought into all American homes we would hear little of food conservation, for the utilization of every edible molecule is nothing short of marvelous, as is the system of accounting for every ingredient that comes out of the storeroom.

On Sunday, June 9, the bakers and cooks' mess had the following meals:

Breakfast.

Creamed beef on toast, French toast, butter, fried potatoes, strawberries and cream, coffee with milk, bread.

Dinner.

Chicken soup with noodles, chicken fricassee, cucumbers, young lettuce, white radishes, fruit salad with mayonnaise, strawberry shortcake, lemonade, sliced bread, butter, cheese.

Supper

Beef loaf, brown gravy, creamed potatoes, plain muffins and sirup, lima beans, iced tea.

Now, the actual cost of those three meals for 100 men was $50.29. And every gram of every material, as well as every cent of every dollar, is accounted for. Part of the training of a student cook is the preparation of a day's menu, and the listing of the exact amounts and exact cost of every article used. And when you have seen the kitchens and tasted the food and investigated the system of accounting, you have every sympathy and enthusiasm for the new project of bestowing commissions on instructors of the bakers and cooks.

And if there is any anxious mother who, after reading these lines, still thinks that her boy is going to France to be starved or ill-nourished by the Government that sent him, let her take these favorite recipes home and try them on her gas range:

Beef Turkish (for Sixty Men).

Eighteen pounds beef, 5 pounds rice, 1 pound fat (butter preferred), 1 pound flour browned in fat, 2 pounds onions (browned), 3 gallons stock.

Make a batter of flour and fat, adding the stock and onions to make a gravy. Cut the meat in 1-inch cubes; season with cayenne pepper, salt, and a little garlic; roll in flour; and fry in deep lard. After the meat is fried, put immediately in the gravy and allow to simmer for two hours. While cooking it may be necessary to add a little more stock. Meanwhile, boil the rice (and fry, if desired) and place around the platter, making a nest in the center into which the stew is poured.

Stew El Rancho (for Sixty Men).

Twelve pounds meat, fresh, without bone and but little fat, cut in about 1½-inch cubes.

Ten pounds potatoes, 2 cans tomatoes or 6 pounds fresh tomatoes, 3 pounds carrots, quartered lengthwise.

Four pounds turnips, sliced across grain.

Four pounds cabbage, with core in cabbage. Cut from top to bottom in quarters or eighths, depending on size of head.

Three pounds onions, small preferred, whole.

Place the meat and such vegetables as turnips, carrots and tomatoes in a large pan of cold water and bring slowly to a boil. Let simmer until the meat is tender and then add the remaining vegetables, season with salt, chili colorado, comina and oregano, and cook until done. All ingredients should be thoroughly cooked but not broken into pieces in the cooking. The liquid should cover all the solids by about an inch. It should not be pasty, but of the nature of broth gravy and have a reddish hue from the chili pepper and tomatoes. The stew is improved by a bunch of parsley chopped fine and added just before serving, and a few sprigs of parsley may be used for garnishing. Serve hot with vegetables, whole as far as possible. Any fresh meat and any vegetable may be used in this stew.

Old mess sergeants declare that the characteristic taste imparted to delicacies out of the "Book" varies with the climate. In the words of the commissariat, "Fort Riley cookin' ain't Monterey cookin'—you can tell 'em at the first mouthful."

CUBA BOND CASE SETTLED

HAVANA, Oct. 13.—The long-standing contest over the bonds of the Ports Improvement Co. of Cuba has been settled, the report of the committee appointed to study the matter having been affirmed by President Menocal. The representatives of the bondholders also have agreed to the committe's report.

By the agreement the bondholders will receive 15-year 5 per cent Cuban Government bonds in lieu of the securities they now hold and they will forfeit all claims for unpaid interest. The Ports Improvement Co. was formed under a concession granted by the Gomez administration to clean and dredge the ports of the island. Its $7,000,000 bond issue was sold principally in the United States and England. When President Menocal entered office he canceled the concession.

BRAND-NEW PLAY TO OPEN HERE TONIGHT

"Yes or No" Premier at Garrick; Warfield Returns in "The Music Master."

By the premier production of a new play at the Shubert-Garrick Theater tonight, St. Louis is rendered liable to classification with Stamford, Conn., Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Philadelphia and Washington, as a "dog town," on which dramatic offerings can be tried before they are presented to the New York public.

"Yes or No," a name which might be applied to almost any play ever written, is the title of the new drama. Arthur Goodrich is the author, and Anderson & Weber are the producers. The plot has not been made known, and the advance announcements hint at a surprise. An unusual feature of the cast is the presence of three leading women, all of equal importance in the development of the plot. Mary Boland, the very capable and very blonde actress who formerly played opposite John Drew, and who was at the Park Theater for several weeks, season before last, is to have one of these parts. Marjorie Wood and Emelie Polini have the two other "leading" feminine roles.

With the exception of the works of local authors, St. Louis has not had a premier production in one of its larger theaters since "A Modern Eve" began its career in 1913 at the Shubert, now the Jefferson, theater. A memorable premier of the late '90s was that of "When Knighthood Was in Flower," with Julia Marlowe in the leading role, at the Olympic Theater.

"Music Master" Returns.

There is nothing of the untried or the problematical about the Belasco-Warfield production of "The Music Master," which opens tomorrow night at the Jefferson. This play, in successive St. Louis engagements about 10 years ago, repeated the great success it had made in New York. It was revived last season, after David Warfield had spent several seasons in more or less successful appearances in other plays, before audiences which always wanted to see him again as Herr von Barwig.

Two attractions of established drawing power, which have not heretofore been seen here, are to open next Sunday night. "Turn to the Right" is to be at the Jefferson, and "Very Good, Eddie," at the Garrick. "Turn to the Right" was the most successful comedy in New York last season. It opened at the Gaiety Theater, Aug. 17, 1916, and ran into last July. When it had become established in New York, a Chicago company was formed, which was declared by Chicago critics who had seen the play in New York, to be better than the New York cast. The Chicago organization will come here.

"Very Good, Eddie," which is a musical makeover of the steamboat farce "Overnight," started in New York season before last, and was in Chicago a large part of last season. Its cast has undergone several changes. Much of the musical score of "Very Good, Eddie," is familiar here, the "Babes in the Wood" waltz being especially popular.

Edeson at the Orpheum.

The Orpheum Theater, beginning tomorrow, will feature Robert Edeson in an Indian playlet called "Flying Arrow." Edeson has starred in a number of romantic plays. Harry Fox will sing original songs, and Percy Wenrich, popular song writer, will accompany Dolly Connolly in new songs. Elsa Ruegger, 'cellist, will have violin and harp accompaniment by Edmund Lichenstein and Shay Clark. The third and last episode of the remarkable British war film, the Battle of Arras, will be shown.

Of other vaudeville bills opening tomorrow, the Grand Opera House will feature "Temptation," a musical comedy directed by George Damerel, and with Bobby Vail as chief comedian. At the Columbia, Robinson's military elephants will perform their ponderous tricks. The American Theater, beginning this afternoon, will welcome persons not less than 18 years old, who are willing to believe that what they see on the stage has a bearing on the question of birth control. The same experiment was tried at the American last year, with sufficient success to warrant this repetition.

The Imperial Theater, which is producing vaudeville, burlesque or whatever one wishes to call it, on the stock company principle, and which has been doing a good business at popular prices, will put on a new bill today entitled "Hotel de Joy." Living statuary and reproductions of famous paintings will be a feature of the show. A "ladder of roses" specialty is modeled after that of the Hippodrome show, seen at the Coliseum last winter.

Joe Rose is the star of "Biff! Bing! Bang!" which is scheduled to make its explosion at the Standard today. "The Corner Drug Store" and "Triple Beds" are the titles of the two acts.

The Rose Sydell London Belles company will come to the Gayety, with George F. Hayes, Ted Burns and Kate Pullman as the leading trio.

EXPLORER MISSING 19 MONTHS

DAWSON, Y. T., Oct. 13.—Commander Vilhjalmur Stefansson, explorer, has not been heard from since March, 1916, according to Bishop Stringer, who was here today after a five months' trip up the Arctic coast as far east as Cape Bathurst. In March, last year, Stefansson was in Banks Land. Northerly gales which carried the Arctic ice pack toward the main land, are thought to have made it impossible for him to travel toward Dawson. His original plans were to proceed eastward through the Northwest Passage, it was understood.

MAYOR OF AKRON, O., SEIZES 100 CAR LOADS OF COAL

Fuel Totaling 5000 Tons of Coal Will Be Sold at Prevailing Price to Alleviate Shortage.

AKRON, O., Oct. 13.—One hundred cars of coal consigned to lake ports for shipment to the Northwest were ordered seized here today by Mayor W. J. Laub to alleviate the serious coal shortage. The cars contained about 5000 tons of coal, which will be sold through the local dealers at the prevailing price of -6.50 per ton.

CANTON, O., Oct. 13.—Mayor Schrantz today confiscated 1000 tons of coal owned by the Central Power Co., which furnishes the city with electricity. A price of $5.60 a ton was fixed for the coal confiscated.

LA CROSSE, Wis., Oct. 13.—With the Government thermometer registering 19 degrees, 13 below freezing, hundreds of families in La Crosse shovered today because of a coal shortage. Coal dealers admitted there was practically no hard coal to be had and that the soft grades also were scarce.

TRUCK MEN MEET TO FINISH ORGANIZING

The St. Louis Motor Truck Dealers' Association will be formally organized Monday night at a dinner meeting, probably at the Missouri Athletic Club. This association will be the direct outgrowth of the assembling of trucks on Garrison avenue last week during the Fall and Winter Car Display on Locust street. The truck dealers there made a special exhibit in the open air which was brilliantly lighted, and which was visited by a large number of interested people during the week.

Arrangements for the dinner are being made by J. T. Rumble of the Dorris Motor Car Co., and up to Saturday night he had 40 acceptances. The temporary officers of the St. Louis Motor Truck Dealers' Association are, Charles Pagett of the Federal Truck Co., chairman, and W. E. Conway of the Garford Truck Co., secretary and treasurer. At the dinner Joseph A. Schlecht, president, and Robert E. Lee, secretary of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association, will be the guests of the truck dealers.

The trucks which are already represented in the proposed association are as follows: Mack, Garford, Auto Horse, G. M. C., White, Master, Den[illegible], Little Giant, Federal, Nash, Autocar, Kissel, Dorris, Reo, Sterling, Fulmer, Selden and Ameston.

TIRE PLANT ON LOCUST.

The Pickett Puncture Proof Tire Co. has leased quarters at 1909 Locust street, where the Pickett puncture proof tire and its accompanying rims will be manufactured and sold. L. E. Pickett is president of this company, which manufactures a combined inner tube, outer casing and metal rim for the various sized wheels, and for which the claim is made that they are absolutely puncture proof and that after the outer casing is worn down to the inner tube the car can be run on the inner tube for 3900 miles.

NEWELL ADDS STEARNS TO ITS LINE OF CARS

The Newell Motor Car Co. has taken on another important line to be sold in connection with the Paige line, which it assumed about three weeks ago. The new line is the Stearns-Knight, the car which has been advertised the world over as carrying the Knight sleeve valve motor. James E. Newell, L. S. N well and M. Frank of the Newell company went to Cleveland, O., to close this contract and secured territory for the eastern half of the Missouri and the southern half of Missouri and the southern Ill.

Saturday, George W. Booker formerly of St. Louis, who is now president of the F. B. Stearns Co. of Cleveland, accompanied by Guy Vaughn, salesmanager of the company, were in St. Louis to complete the arrangements.

The Newell company has received a line of these cars and in particular is showing the closed models, which are among the classiest automobiles to be found on the market. Particular attention will be given to service to Stearns-Knight owners at the big Newell plant at Jefferson and Locust street.

CLOSED CAR WEEK ROUSED REAL INTEREST

The first successful display of fall and winter automobiles which has been held in this country closed in St. Louis Saturday night after a very successful run of a week at the various auto salesrooms along Locust street. While the attendance of visitors was at no time large during the evenings of the week along Locust street, it was entirely satisfactory and many of the dealers have expressed themselves as well pleased with the results obtained from their Open Week.

Unlike the attendance at an automobile show there was no miscellaneous crowd, and all who did visit the show rooms came with the future purchase of an automobile in their minds.

The showing made of closed cars was of great interest because it is the first time that the 1918 lines of winter bodies have been exhibited. These cars will remain on display at the various salesrooms for the next two weeks.

H. W. Spalding of the Show Committee of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association, speaking for himself and his committee, said:

"An Open Week at salesrooms must not be judged by, or compared with a regular automobile show. It was never expected by the dealers that there would be thousands of people each evening visiting the various show rooms. There was a very satisfactory attendance, however. This I learn from talks with many of the dealers, and in not one single instance have I heard any expression of dissatisfaction as to the results of the week.

"I find that many sales were made and in a large number of instances immediate deliveries of the cars displayed were made. In addition to actual business transacted, nearly every dealer on the street managed to secure the names of really live prospects to whom sales will be made later on.

"Aside from this actual business, the great benefit to the automobile trade which comes from an Open Week of this kind, is the interest which is excited in the public mind in automobiles, and people who are lukewarm, or passive in their intention to buy an automobile are spurred to immediate interest and sales result which might be held until next spring or which might never be made with a general result, therefore, for the trade of St. Louis. The fall and winter car display has been, to my mind, entirely satisfactory."

OLYMPIAN BUYS PLANT FOR BODY BUILDING

The Olympian Motors Co. has purchased from the trustee in bankruptcy for the Meridian Manufacturing Co. at Indianapolis, Ind., all of the drawings, patterns, forms, dies and materials for the manufacturing of the specially designed customed built Olympian bodies. This includes also the materials for the new Olympian four-door roadster.

Franklin T. Chapman, body engineer and designer, has just arrived at the Olympian factory from Indianapolis, Ind., with 30 carloads of materials and a large number of workmen and their families who are specially trained in building Olympian bodies.

The Olympian Motors Co. wll build all of their own bodies in future. The west section of the big Olympian plant being exclusively devoted to bodies which makes it possible for the company to turn out 20 bodies daily. This means increased Olympian sales as the sales department has orders ahead to take care of more than twenty cars daily.

The Olympian line of cars includes a five-passenger stream line double cowl body, a Gypsy chummy roadster, four-passenger roadster with four doors, winter detachable top, coupe and sedan, handled locally by the Welling Motor & Equipment Co.

President Frank Bischop reports sales made last week by the Brisco Motor Sales Co., as follows:

MITCHELL SHOWS NEW CAR

Wednesday night the Mitchell Company held a reception to ladies in the gorgeous salesroom at 3308 Lindell Plaza. The entertainment included a select musical program. "Closed Car Week" with the Mitchell offered an opportunity for the motor loving public to inspect the new 1918 models in what is known throughout the industry as the "most beautiful automobile salon in the country." A profusion of smilax and ferns added to the already beautful appearance of the room, which was decorated in a pleasing color combination executed by the well known Italian artist, Aquadro, and the effect was not that of a merchandising emporium but rather of a bridal bower.

The Mitchell Company makes sixteen different body designs, which is probably the most complete turned out by any factory. An addition to their line this year is a Club Seden which has taken to public wherever shown. The new limousine embraces numberless care- public wherever shown. The new limousine embraces numberless carefully worked out details to the delight of milady. Another model that has also been added and which will be ready for delivery is the [illegible] car done up in varied colors, [illegible] sents the last word in coach[illegible] and in the art of sensitively [illegible] building.

Quicker, Better Haulage at Much Lower Cost

This new Nash One-Ton Truck solves the problem of light hauling. Sturdily built from finest truck materials, it gives long untroubled service with minimum cost of upkeep.

It is driven by the same four-cylinder motor that has proved so successful in Jeffery trucks of much greater haulage capacity.

The simplex governor prevents overspeeding—20 miles per hour is the maximum, uphill or down. The electric starting and lighting feature effects a real economy, for the driver soon learns to shut off the motor instead of letting it run idle.

This truck is designed to handle with greatest efficiency the one-ton load. It is more economical than a horse and wagon and has an infinitely wider delivery radius. The price is reasonable, chassis $1495.

THE CONVERTIBLE CAR HELD THEIR INTEREST

That the convertible car holds the stage during the fall buying season was evidenced by the throng of visitors who attended the opening of the second annual All-Year Car Show Week, at the salesrooms of Harry Newman, Inc., St. Louis Kisselkar distributer. The unusual display of the different All-Year models was so arranged that visitors could readily grasp the many new features as well as quickly understand how Kissel has maintained his leadership in the All-Year idea.

The accuracy with which the All-Year top is built in to the lower body, with elimination of all fastenings, seemed to impress the visitors the most. The new four-passenger Sedanlet, which made its first appearance, is still a further advance in the development of the detachable top idea. This top is not only entirely removable, but through its exclusive construction, side windows may be lowered or raised, thus enabling owners to have a car of a semi-convertible type, if they do not want to remove the top.

The Kissel has made the most of the limited space in cars of this type, was evidenced by the unusual roomy tonneau which permits adults moving about or sitting down without having to cramp their arms or legs. The aisle between the front seats is unusually wide, as are also the doors—which measure 24 inches wide.

CHAMPION NON-STOP CAR MAKES RECORD

The famous Maxwell Non-Stop Champion of the World has set another record. Its latest record is in gasoline economy. Thirty-one and one-tenth miles on a gallon of gasoline is the record made by the veteran, which has traveled more than 138,827 miles. Peoria, Ill., was the scene of the Champion's last glorious record accomplishment.

The Champion Non-Stop car made 22,022.3 miles in Los Angeles in the fall of 1916. Since then it has been wandering about the world visiting Maxwell dealers. The faithful old car is battered and worn, but is able to travel as well as any automobile.

Accompanied by an official observer, Thomas J. Gorgan of Peoria, the Champion started at 10 o'clock on Sept. 30. There was but one gallon of gasoline in the red tank attached to the car.

The car looped a circuit for one hour and a half. When the last drop of gasoline burned the speedometer registered 31.1 miles.

It was a remarkable record and beat the mark made by the same car in Springfield the previous week by nearly three miles.

The mileage on a gallon of gasoline obtained with the Champion is all the more wonderful because it was made with a car which has had such a strenuous life. The car has never been touched by a mechanic. During the Peoria run the engine purred like a new machine.

SHOW ROOM MADE INTO PERFECT RURAL SCENE

A rural scene calculated to inspire powerful longing in the hearts of beholders for a leisurely and extensive auto tour filled the entire broad front of the salesroom of the King Motors Corporation, at Locust and Twenty-eighth streets during open week with the auto dealers of St. Louis. Three corners of the scene were occupied by corn shocks, flanked by small shrubbery, while in the fourth was a lifelike tourists' camp, with tent and all the essentials of an outfit save the tourists themselves, yet so naturally displayed that one could easily imagine they were at least within call. Small oak saplings dotted the space, and upon all the specimens of vegetation there were distinct traces of frost effects, thus bringing the spectacle into splendid harmony with the season.

Through the scene there was constructed a broad sandy roadway, with a typical old-time rail fence skirting it on one side and adding forcefully to the realism. A King closed car and a coupe model were represented as traveling in opposite directions, the latter being sidetracked, while its owner went into camp.

The scene was designed and constructed under the supervision of J. D. Porter,, general manager of the St. Louis agency of the King Motor Corporation, and also of the agencies at Kansas City and Wichita, Kan. That it was a fetching idea was shown by the crowds which filled the salesroom, especially in the evenings, and it naturally was productive of immediate business as well as creative of cheerful prospects.

FARMERS' MONEY GOES INTO GOOD MOTOR CARS

To retail motor cars in September at the rate of 30,000 a year is something new in the annals of automobile selling. Yet this is the record that Saxon established in September when 2400 orders for Saxon motor cars were received at the factory, according to advices to the Frye Motor Car Co., St. Louis distributor.

This year, however, has been one of surprises in the automobile industry and the tremendous business of the first fall month is just one of them. Furthermore the first days of October have seen no decrease in the sales throughout the country and dealers everywhere have about concluded that the selling season will stay at its full height until snow puts a damper on motoring generally.

In explanation of why the late summer and early fall months have been boom selling months instead of only mediocre time, it is pointed out that this year, as never before, foodstuffs have commanded high prices at the harvest season. Instead of the abundant supply of food that is always on hand at the close of the harvest, making food prices lower, this year has seen them as high, if not higher, than they have been in the early spring of other years. Consequently the farmers have been selling this fall instead of holding their crops for the rising market and the result has been that they have had plenty of money to buy motor cars and have been buying them.

GIVE BEARING SERVICE.

"Service" has come to be a word of such general application that it is often a difficult matter to determine its significance in connection with the various industries to which it is applied.

An interesting use to which this word has been put is in the name of the Bearings Service Co., an organization formed during the past year for the purpose of extending to the automobile dealer and motorist, a specialized service for bearings with a branch at 3300 Locust street, St. Louis. According to A. K. Hebner, general manager, the numerous inquiries received concerning the name of this company indicate that it is not exactly clear in the mind of the public just what the nature of the service is that the company renders.

"Some people have the idea that we operate a garage and do repair work on bearings," says Mr. Hebner. "The function of our service, however, is quite different. We do no work on cars whatever, nor do we renew or regrind bearings. We act as a siurce of supply where garagemen, automobile dealers and motorists may secure any type or size of bearing which they need in making bearing replacements in motor cars, motor trucks or other motor vehicles. Announces an Exclusive
ALL-YEAR Car Show Week
October 13th to 20th
Kissel's Original Idea That Changed the Motoring Habits of a Nation
KISSELKAR

First showing of the new 4 Passenger Sedanlet. Made famous over night.

The new Kissel triumph in body designing and building. The SEDANLET combines all the comforts of the Sedan with the utility and economy of the Roadster. All windows in the ALL-YEAR Top, excepting the rear one, may be raised or lowered. The new Semi-Victoria Style Summer Top is standard equipment.

They Compared, Checked-Up, Judged and Decided It "The Ultimate in Motor Car Utility, Economy and Completeness"

OUR contention that the Kissel ALL-YEAR Car reaches the very topmost point in the development of the two-cars-in-one idea was unanimously endorsed by the hundreds of show visitors who attended. Never before has there been such an enthusiastic gathering of local car buyers and owners as at our opening display. They saw how, through the exclusive Kissel construction, the ALL-YEAR Top is built-in, not on, with no visible fastenings or attachments. They now know how all draughts, leaks, rattles and squeaks are eliminated.

They inspected the Hundred Quality Features of the famous Hundred Point Six, including the new Kissel-built power plant, and found the reasons for the remarkable performance of this car---its perfect construction, its quiet, easy-running motor, the low up-keep cost and slow depreciation.

The New Kissel Four-Passenger Sedanlet, a Constant Source of Admiration

THIS latest Kissel triumph in body design and construction with the ALL-YEAR Top that is not only entirely removable, but in which all windows may be raised or lowered, proved one of the big surprises of the opening day. Its roomy tonneau, wide aisles and doors, its three-cars-in-one convertible features---created a new standard in this style of automobile. The new Semi-Victoria Summer Top was voted the most original and unique top ever shown.

Be Sure to Attend the ALL-YEAR Show This Week!

THIS special ALL-YEAR Car Display will be on exhibition every day this week. You are cordially invited. Stunning effects will be shown in body color, upholstery and interior refinements. We want you to be sure and see them. Never before have we had the privilege of standing sponsor for such an attractive group of cars. Doors open daily from 8 A. M. to 10 P. M.

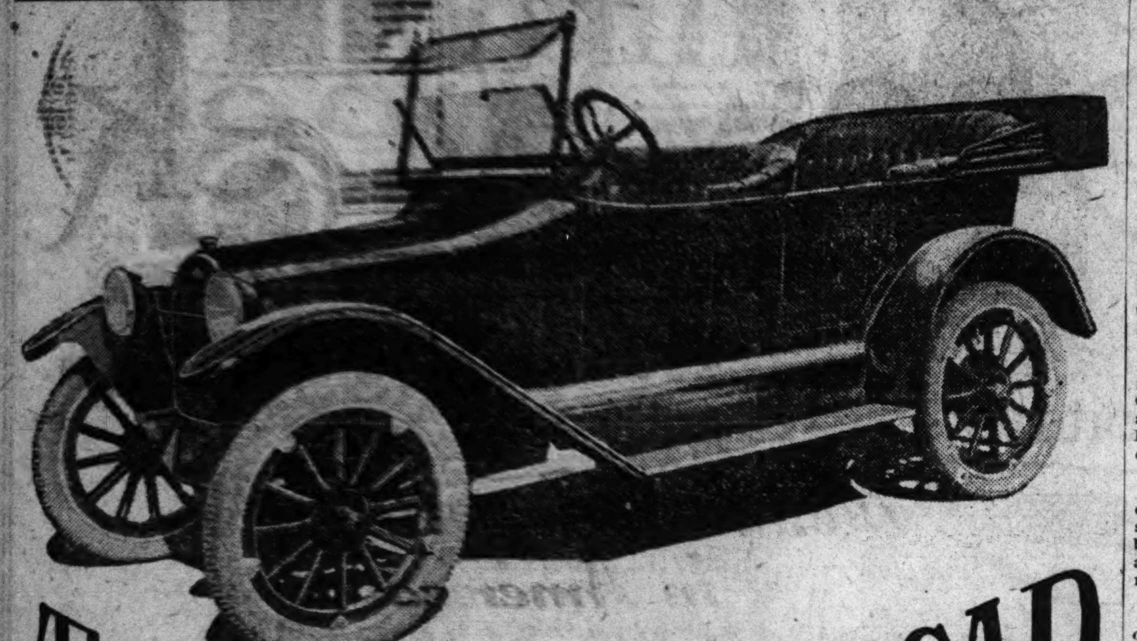
BEGAN ON CHASSIS FOR THE BODY LINES

"The graceful lines of the Marmon 34 closed cars has been the subject of much favorable commendation everywhere, and it has been often asked how coach builders have produced in Marmon closed car bodies such excellent examples of coach builders' art,' said J. T. Salisbury of the More Automobile Co.

"It can be explained by the fact that a closed car is no more than the chassis upon which it is built. Comfort and style count for nothing without master workmanship in the machine itself. It was the scientific design of the chassis that permitted the closed car bodies of the Marmon 34 to be only six feet, seven and one-half inches in height overall, thereby permitting them to possess actual dimensions that coach builders long have sought to express by design.

"Quality cars in every sense of the word, the Marmon 34 closed cars also embody such refinement in detail that they meet all the demands made of a mere luxury car. Present indications point to a demand for these high-class closed cars that will no doubt exceed the supply."

S. P. nowles, 520 North Fourteenth street, East St. Louis, has taken the agency for the city for the Empire car under the Knight Motor Co., of St. Louis, which is the distributor.



The SUPREME MOTOR CAR VALUE

It is possible to make a better car than the CHEVROLET, but—What's the price of that car?

The CHEVROLET gives you everything you can ask in a Motor Car. It gives you the famous Valve-in-head Motor, which gets more power out of the fuel used. It gives you Auto-Light Starting System and Willard Storage Batteries. It gives you Remy Ignition, Zenith Carburetor, One-man Top, Demountable Rims and 30 x 3½ Tires all around with extra Rim and Tire Carrier in the rear. It gives you Robe Rail, Foot Rail, Kick Pad, Speedometer, Oil Gauge, Ammeter and every other convenience you can buy with any other car, regardless of price.

Yet the CHEVROLET costs only $660, complete; and is equal in appearance to more expensive cars that are no better.

By the way, have you seen the CHEVROLET Coupe and Sedan? They are the center of attraction at the Fall Exhibit. Come in and let us show you these cars. Salesrooms open every night and Sundays.

New Victor Band Records of Popular Patriotic Pieces

"Over There" by George M. Cohan and "Where Do We Go From Here"

If there is anybody who can put the American flavor into popular patriotic music, George M. Cohan can—and "Over There" shows Cohan at his best. With bugles, drums and piccolo passages this record fills the corpuscles of your patriotism with a "vim, vigor, victory" feeling!

"Where Do We Go From Here" is a now famous air with an infectious swing that inspires a glow of pleasant, patriotic pugnacity. Both these numbers are on one double-faced record by the Victor Military Band.

Victor Double-faced Record 18370. Ten-inch, 75c

"A Hot Time in the Old Town" and "The Girl I Left Behind Me"

Two famous war tunes which seem to have a perennial hold on the affections of American and English soldiers. "A Hot Time" saw valiant service in the Spanish-American war, while the British Tommy always marches or sails out of England to the tune of "The Girl I Left Behind Me." The Victor Military Band has made a masterly record of these two gems. Stop in and have us play them—or any other music you wish to hear.

OAKLAND SENSIBLE SIX MAKES ITS BOW

New lines, more body room, increased power and greater ease in handling are the outstanding features of the new Oakland Sensible Six model for 1918, placed on view this week in the show rooms of Sperreng Oakland Co., local dealers for Oakland automobiles.

"While refinements and improvements extend to all parts, it remains in every sense an Oakland Sensible Six," said Mr. Sperreng, discussing the new models. "The several improvements merely strengthen the right to the term 'Sensible Six.' The fundamentals of previous models are strictly adhered to, but the body has more room, the new pleated upholstery adds to comfort and appearance of luxury and the new lines give even a more dashing appearance.

"One of the biggest single achievements comes in the power plant. Naturally, after Oakland's successful experience with the valve-in-head design, the engine is of that type. The use of new aluminum alloy pistons and the lightening of recoprocal parts adds snap and pulling power. It is so simple that we believe it to be the easiest engine in the world for the motorist to take care of. It now develops 44 horsepower at 2600 revolutions, making car weight 48 pounds per horsepower—a truly remarkable achievement.

"The problem arising from the use of the grades of gasoline now on the market have been met by improvements in carburetion through the improved intake and exhaust systems. Vaporization is secured in three stages of heat from the exhaust in a way that overcomes low-grade gasoline.

"The new model comes in five body styles—a five-passenger touring car, three-passenger roadster, four-passenger coupe, five-passenger sedan and a two-passenger roadster-coupe."

TEST ARMY KITCHEN.

A most unusual caravan started trekking its way from Toledo to Washington, D. C., last month. It consisted of an army kitchen, piloted by Capt. F. H. Buzzacott of Chicago, which was mounted on an Overland commercial chassis, two 1200-pound Overland delivery wagons, with special army bodies of the prairie schooner type, and one Overland 85-4 five passenger touring car.

Capt. Buzzacott has been in the closest possible touch with field cooking methods in the United States for 35 years and he has devised this new field kitchen as an improvement over anything which has been in existance in the past. The object of the caravan was to submit the unique arrangement for inspection by the Federal authorities in Washngton.

Among the many new features of the motor kitchen are the following: Two 20-gallon soup and coffee boilers; four 10-gallon reserve hot food retainer vessels; two large ovens for roasting and baking purposes; pans for frying, and a complete set of cook's tools essential for work in the field.

In addition to the above, space is provided for extra fuel and rations, sufficient for one complete food renewal. The cooking capacity of the motor kitchen is 250 meals at one time and it can be operated equally well on the march, when traveling 10 to 20 miles an hour, as when it is at a standstill.

DUAL POWER APPEALS TO GAS CAR DRIVER

A few of the recent deliveries of Wood Dual Power cars made by the Woods Electric Vehicle Co., were to J. H. Vette, 3120 Hawthorne boulevard; F. A. Leland, 10 Windemere place; W. W. LaBaume, Newstead and Lindell boulevard; Robert Holmes, 46 Portland place, and G. J. Wanstrath, 4270 Athlone street.

Speaking of the Dual Power, Harold MacCarthy, local Woods manager, said:

"Dual Power appeals to the gas car owner because it has the speed and mileage of the gas car and yet retains the simplicity of the electric, there being no clutch pedal, and no shofting of gears. The entire operation of the car is controlled by two small finger levers on the steering wheel or by a single foot brake pedal.

"For the reason that it is never necessary to resort to a foreign charging plant, the cost of current is eliminated. The consumption of gasoline and oil is greatly reduced as compared with a gas car because of the supplementary electric power, the self-generative, thus touching the very bottom of power economy."

Beautiful 1918 Maxwell Now On Exhibition

Without altering the world champion motor, the famous perfected clutch and transmission or the mighty axles, the Maxwell builders have produced a new wonder car, far superior in construction and in appearance to anything yet turned out by the Maxwell factories—we have this new and beautiful car—come and see it.

The car is larger and roomier, for one thing—the wheelbase has been increased six inches.

It is also a stronger and more rigid machine for the road.

The frame is now six inches instead of three inches deep.

And the body rests directly on this powerful frame instead of on brackets extending from the sides, as in the past.

Do you know what that means?

It means this: The firmness with which the wheels grip the road and the steadiness of the car at high speed give you a sense of security such as you have been able to enjoy before only in cars shackled with a battery of shock absorbers.

This New Car is 50 Pounds Lighter

There's a marvel of engineering for you, friends!

The car is made bigger and stronger—and yet actually lighter.

This means greater ease and comfort on the road.

More than that—it means greater economy.

And the Maxwell before was the most economical 5-passenger car in the world.

Compensating underslung rear springs—the last word in spring suspension—mark this wonderful Maxwell of 1918.

They mean greater comfort—greater economy, by lessening wear and tear on the car.

Maxwell Now Has the Style of the Costliest Cars

The new Maxwell is a car of great beauty.

It has a sloped windshield and rakish lines never before produced in any car costing less than $1200.

Its good looks now equal its proved mechanical efficiency.

The new upholstery is richer and gives a new comfort.

Inside and out the new 1918 Maxwell is a perfected car.

We're proud to sell it.

ONLY TIRES IN GERMANY ARE ON KAISER'S CAR

The only automobile in Germany running on pneumatic tires is Kaiser Wilhelm's. Even the Crown Prince is denied this luxury. Along with [illegible] Hindenburg, Ludendorff, Von Mackensen and the other diadems in the German crown, the Crown Prince bumps along to the front on tires filled with rags, compressed cork and [illegible]er.

These observations form but a small part of the anthology of facts gathered by Victor Van der Linde, special technical representative of the [illegible] Goodrich Rubber Co. of Akron, who just returned from Europe after a study of tire conditions abroad.

In some European countries tires are not to be had at all, except at a fabulous price and only after a dozen or two high government officials have had one on the witness stand for weeks, literally speaking; gasoline is worth more than champagne and is obtainable only with government consent, and nine-tenths of the automobiles are not running.

"German scientists have tried to improvise for the scarcity of rubber by compounding what they call synthetic rubber," said Mr. Van der Linde, "but in this they have been unsuccessful. There is not an ounce of crude rubber in it at all and therefore it is devoid of fiber. Then again it has cost about fifteen times more a pound than the vegetable rubber.

"The situation of both Germany and Austria, as concerns tires, is truly deplorable. Countries bounding the Central Empires, with the exception of those that are at war with them are in just as bad plight.

"Really the only car running with inner tubes in Germany today is that of the Kaiser. Most casings are stuffed with compressed champagne corks, paper, rags and sausages made of ground cork.

"Some have even been filled with sand and dirt. This only refers to those cars that have ragged casings left. Most automobiles have ground away their shoes and move about on rims bound with rope. I was fortunate to find a taxicab in Berlin—a taxicab is rare there now—and experienced the sensation of riding in a machine having nothing but rope bound wheels. It was just like riding on a wagon. Every time the car struck a cavity in the road, you were jolted clear through.

IMPROVE WINTER DRIVING

Cadillac engineers have provided more than a usual number of ways to increases engine efficiency in cold weather. Having in mind that an increasing proportion of motor cars are used the year round, they have overcome by simple and sensible means, most of the cold weather detriments.

To promote easy starting of a cold motor, they have devised an enriching device for the gas mixture passing through the carburetor. This is operated by a small lever located on the steering column. The intake manifold has a hot water jacket of unusual length, insuring proper vaporization of the fuel immediately after starting.

The temperature of the water is thus quickly raised because of the thermostatic controls which the Cadillac incorporates in the water circulation line. In starting, with the water in the engine and radiator cold, the thermostat valves are closed, and the supply from the radiator is cut off. The amount of water around the intake manifold and the cylinders being relatively very small, it is quickly brought to proper temperature. As it warms, the heat causes the thermostat valves to open gradually, permitting circulation of the water from the radiator. Thus there is no danger of overheating.

A condensing device, which is covered by Cadillac patents, renders it possible to use the inexpensive alcohol solution as a non-freezing cooling medium.

TRUCK A HUSKY PULLER.

When a one-ton truck will move a weight of nearly 10 tons up a 45 per cent curving hill and then over three miles of dirt road it may be said to have performed a task to which the owner was not fairly entitled and which would justify its maker in expanding the selling claims for it. That is what is reported by a Buffalo owner to have been done by a one-ton truck put out by the Globe Motor Truck Co. of East St. Louis. The outlay for repairs on the machine for a period of more than one year aggregated only $289, of which $186 was for tires, due, as stated in the report, to a "shameful overloading" of the truck.

ARE "FOURSEASON CARS"

According to H. F. Fabrenkrog of the Kordell Motor Car Co., local Dort distributors, the Dort Motor Car Co. is out with a new and very appropriate name to distinguish its closed models from others. The Seden and Sedanet are called "Fourseason Cars," an appropriate designation in view of the widely increasing use of these types in summer, as well as in the cold and inclement months.

Dort dwells upon the following effective points in arguing the utility of "Fourseason Cars:" Touring comfort in autumn; warmth in winter town use; immunity from rain and chills in spring; protecton from heat and dust in summer.

COLE WINS SPEED EVENT.

A stock Cole Eight touring car, with H. P. Federspiel, Cole Eight distributor at Salt Lake City, at the wheel, won the Utah State championship 50-mile race in that city last week and at the same time established an unusual record for performance. In competition with the Cole Eight, were several specially built racing cars.

The Cole Eight finished six laps ahead of the second car and 17 laps ahead of the third car. During the while contest, Federspiel's car consumed but one pint of oil, one quart of water and less than four gallons of gasoline.

CONTEST MADE SALES OVER $3,000,000 WEEKLY

During the 10 weeks of the John N. Willys Sales Congress contest, which closed Aug. 22, there were 47,212 Willys-Knight and Overland cars sold at a retail value of $39,237,250, according to the final checking up of the contest figures. The amazing totals are said to not only mark a record for Willys-Overland but also a record for the medium and high priced car industry.

For 10 solid weeks Willys Overland products went into the hands of consumers at an average of more than 4721 cars each week with approximately $3,923,725, the proceeds derived from their sale, pouring into the factory. On the basis of six working days a week, the daily retail sales average was in the neighborhood of 783 cars sold every day at a retail value of $653,954.

EASILY HANDLED CARS.

The popular motor car of today must be built with due consideration for the woman driver, for the time when the builders of high-powered automobiles had to cater only to men is no longer here.

No woman cares to spoil her clothes changing a tire in the old fashion, nor does she care to pump up a tire after it has been put on the car. This, combined with the fact that not all women are able to take along a man to do the rough work, makes it necessary for the manufacturer to see to it that there is the smallest possible number of such tasks.

"This fact has been recognized by the factory that builds the National car, and while this is one of the speediest and highest powered cars, it is at the same time one of the easiest to drive," says George Weber of the Weber Implement & Auto Co., national distributors.

"This is seen in the strict attention to detail of design, in which the woman is always considered. If a woman owner had occasion to pump up the tires, she does not have to run on the flat until she reaches the nearest garage at the risk of ruined tires. Without stopping the engine she attaches the hose of the convenient tire pump to the tires, and the engine does the rest. No dirt, no trouble; just a stop for a couple of minutes and the tires are in shape for a continued run."

The Most Economical Car
GRANT SIX
$875
f. o. b. Cleveland

YOU could not pick a more opportune time to buy your Grant Six than right now, at the present price. Every day brings added evidence that cars will be scarcer and higher priced before long. It is probable that the needs of the Government will greatly reduce the amount of material obtainable by motor car manufacturers and therefore the number of cars to be had, and that the railroads will be able to transport very few cars even if they are made.

In buying your Grant Six now you are not depriving the Government of material that it needs and you are making sure of a car for yourself.

Notwithstanding the fact that the Grant Six is the lowest priced six in the country, it contains more high-grade features of construction and equipment than any other car under $1100.

You get an overhead valve engine which develops 35 h. p. at 2400 R. P. M., a full floating rear axle, real cantilever rear springs, equalized brakes, double bulb headlights, demountable rims, vacuum gasoline feed, highest grade upholstery, fine finish, splendid electrical equipment.

No other popular priced car follows so closely the standards of equipment and construction of higher priced cars.

Grant Six economy means 20 miles to a gallon of gasoline, and 900 miles to a gallon of oil.

We believe that you get more for your money in the Grant Six than you can get in any other car made.

But we repeat—if you want to make sure of a Grant Six you'd better buy it now.

KEEPS KIDNEYS ACTIVE WITH A GLASS OF SALTS

Must flush your Kidneys occasionally if you eat meat regularly.

Noted authority tells what causes Backache and Bladder weakness.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.—ADV.

HOGAN, BEFORE HIS INJURY, HAD CRIMINAL RECORD

Physician Attributed Paroled Burglar's Delinquency to Wound Received in Fight.

James Hogan, the burglar paroled by Gov. Gardner after his brother, Representative Edward J. Hogan Jr., changed his vote on the soft drinks bill, began his criminal career before he received the injuries in a gang fight, to which Dr. William A. Dillon attributed his delinquency in recommending the parole. This is shown by the St. Louis police records.

These records were at the disposal of Gov. Gardner, who paroled Hogan before he was sent to the penitentiary under a two-year sentence for robbing the residence of Samuel W. Rawson, 2215 Alice avenue, and Circuit Attorney McDaniel, who recommended the parole.

The gang fight which, according to Dr. Dillon, resulted in Hogan being afflicted with phrenasthenia, was on Aug. 28, 1915. More than a year before that, on July 4, 1914, Hogan was arrested on a grave charge charge and was convicted and sent to the Industrial School for an indefinite term as a juvenile delinquent.

Hogan at that time was a member of a gang which gave the police trouble. One of his asosciates was arrested afterward for stealing a $20 cake from a caterer's wagon at Eighteenth street and Washington avenue.

When Hogan was arrested on July 4, 1914, he said he was 15 years old. When he was arrested June 19, 1916, he said he was 19.

SHE WAS FAT--LOST 47 LBS.

Mrs. Charnay's Happy Reduction of Burdensome, Unsightly Overstoutness.

Tells the Simple, Wholesome Secret to Readers of This Newspaper Who Wish to Become Slender.

Now that so many Missouri women are desirous of reducing their figures to comely size, thereby also improving health and looking younger, all will be interested in knowing how it may be done pleasurably, without any discomfort.

Mrs. Alexander Charnay was formerly Ruth Marks, a beautiful young woman of the brunette type, and who often had been sought as a model by artists and society costumiers.

Some years ago her friends noticed that she was gradually developing a double chin and that in other respects she showed a somewhat uncomely plumpness. Obesity—or overstoutness—mars beauty and weakens personality. Being disturbed at these evidences of incipient obesity, the young woman began taking strenuous walks and otherwise exercising vehemently each day and to follow a self-starvation routine—a foolish thing to do as it causes needless fatigue with discomfort and induces wrinkles.

Mrs. Charnay, before reduction.

Strenuous Exercise No Benefit.

After weeks of these severe measures, without losing weight, although she did lose her cheerfulness, Mrs. Charnay began other methods, trying almost everything she saw or heard of from floor rolling to horseback riding. She took pills, salts and other purgatives, thyroid extracts, anti-fat lotions, and electric massage, all to no benefit. Indeed, she upset her stomach and became more miserable.

Gradually the fatness increased despite everything this woman could do. She had spells of depression and became almost discouraged, as so many overstout persons do, and after various desultory attempts, gave up for the time in despair.

The remarks of sympathizing friends are sometimes far from consoling. This was the case when they told Mrs. Charnay that she ought not to worry, since she couldn't help herself—and so on.

Here let the lady continue the narrative in her own words:

No Excuse for Being Fat.

"It was a good thing after all," said Mrs. Charnay, "when some friends at a piazza tea gathering were discussing the stoutness of three of us and they agreed by acclamation that there was no reason why any woman should give thought to the subject.

"That remark hit me hard. It pierced right through and irritated my mind. The very absurdity of it forced me to begin thinking.

"I am an ambitious woman. The idea of reconciling myself to an abnormal overstout condition for the rest of my life, was abhorrent to me. It wasn't in keeping with my principles of life."

"There being some ambition left within me, and knowing that there certainly have been many cases in which actresses, society beauties and others who, having become overstout, reduced their weight to a natural, well-proportioned figure quietly and with apparent ease, I determined to make inquiries through professional friends. Not being afraid of the truth, I frankly told them what I wanted and soon was on the right track. I didn't have to spend a cent for the prescription, it came to me free and I gladly reveal the secret to everyone."

Secret of Reducing Weight.

"Yes, I found the secret of becoming slender and I adopted it, reducing my weight 47 pounds in less than four months. Don't ask me to go into all the details of my search for the truth. Suffice to say, I positively found the secret—and it is so simple and comparatively inexpensive that it makes me happy to tell it.

"First of all, I weighed myself and the scale registered slightly under 177 pounds. This was as ungainly for me as would be 250 pounds to a taller woman, for I am petite in stature and looked as well as felt terribly big. My abdomen measurement was 38 inches. I carried a burden of fat all over my body and not only did I possess a double chin, but there were bags of fat under my eyes and flabbiness over my neck and shoulders and under my arms. I looked much too old and discontented with life."

Lemon Juice and Vegetable Oil.

"My first rule was to boil some water and squeeze the juice of a half lemon into it (no sugar), sipping a cupful in the morning. Any fat person who cannot take this hot, unsweetened lemonade may take plain hot water with a spoonful of ordinary cooking soda and get good results.

"[illegible], I took at each mealtime and [illegible] to bed, a few drops of oil of korein. This is a pure synthetic vegetable oil for weight reduction. I understand this has a particular virtue in advancing the disintegration and elimination of the abnormal adipose matter so that the layers of fat imbedded under the skin are gradually decreased. This oil of korein you may now buy or order at almost any drug store and for convenience it is put up in small capsules. These are easily swallowed if taken with a sip of liquid. The effect is pleasant.

"Other simple things that I did were to have the obese parts of my body massaged by another or to do so myself, by vigorous rubbing whenever convenient, also to excite a perspiration in a cabinet or hot-water bath or by a brisk easy walk in plenty of clothing."

Ate Candy and Ice Cream.

"As for eating, I partook of as much food as I needed and did not omit potatoes, pudding, confectionery or ice cream when eaten slowly and to a reasonable extent according to the common-sense directions which were given me. The oil of korein and hot water drinks seemed to make it needless for me to eat as much as formerly and I felt remarkably better.

"For a few days I noticed no difference in my weight or measurements, but I began to feel livelier and more cheerful. I had determined to be persevering. A person who allows fat to accumulate and solidify itself upon the body like layers of gristle, for years, and who then expects some magic to reduce this ponderosity to a nice, normal figure in a few days, is clearly suffering from the pernicious effects of obesity about the brain."

Tape Measure Showed Reduction.

"One morning I was happy to see that the tape measure around my waist showed a reduction of a half inch. My hips had reduced almost a whole inch. Yet the scales did not show any loss of weight. Nevertheless, I had ample confidence, for I knew of so many fat persons who had reduced their weight agreeably and lastingly by the system that I was following.

"A little later—after all, it was only a matter of days—I was delighted to see the scales show 174¼ pounds. And from that day the reduction continued steadily, ounce by ounce, pound by pound. Each day I felt better. Life was becoming a joy again. The world seemed more sunny and smiling. My friends were amazed.

"My weight came down from slightly under 177 to 129, a loss of 47 pounds. My waist, which had been 31, was decreased to 24¼ inches. The reduction in abdominal measurement was most notable.

"I look and feel years younger, and am sure my life has been lengthened. Certainly my contentment is alone worth hundreds of times as much as the slight sacrifice of expense and effort in reducing my weight. At present I am keeping my weight at 129 by taking only one capsule of oil of korein daily and by following a few easy rules, but I may decide to reduce another 10 pounds or so later. It is no trouble at all, I assure you."

Mrs. Charnay's Attractive Personality.

These are items of reliable information given by Mrs. Charnay and readily confirmed by friends who have known her for years. She looks younger and her figure is natural. Her eyes, which were dull, are now sparkling with their commanding vivacity. Her skin is much clearer. Her health has improved so that she has no more stomach ailments, no shortness of breath or heart fluttering after ascending the stairs, no headaches, no nervousness and no irritability.

After 47 pounds reduction.

There is said to be no difficulty in keeping the figure slender after the reduction has been effected through the method that was used in this lady's case. Surely there is no inconvenience in taking an occasional capsule of the oil of korein. These, with compliance to other simple and easy rules, are sufficient to prevent the fat from forming again.

Men and Women Becoming Slender.

Numerous persons of both sexes in St. Louis and throughout Missouri are using oil of korein with satisfaction in reducing 10 to 60 pounds of excessive fat. Strength, health, superior personality, calmness of mind and other advantages follow proper obesity treatment. The korein system is safe and wholesome. Doctors prescribe it.

Overstoutness NOTICE

Those wishing to obtain oil of korein in capsules may buy it at almost every drug store in St. Louis and throughout Missouri and the Middle West, or the druggist will obtain it promptly. Whoever prefers to receive it by mail may send $1 in paper money, money order or stamps and it will be mailed, in plain wrapper, on request.

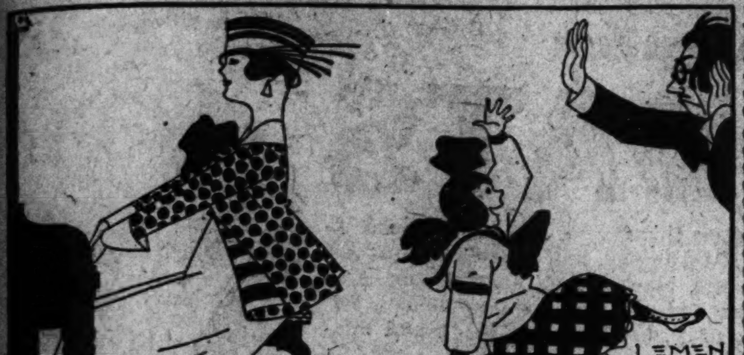
ARABELLA PUMPS.



MISS ARABELLA SIMPKINS BROWN, when seated at the player,
Can chase away each vagrant frown and make the world seem gayer
You're sure her dainty little pumps were made for pedal pumping,
The while your heart responsive jumps to automatic thumping.
When Paderewski hits the keys with rhythmic intonation,
He conjures no delights like these to win your approbation,
For though his fingers nimbly fly in manner most fantastic
He never would consent to try a method so elastic
As that of Arabella Brown, who though she wears no medals,
Can vie with any girl in town at pushing player pedals.
A virtuoso would not dare to change the time or measure
Of what he finds is written there; tradition is his treasure.
He'd never play a Chopin dirge as though 't were syncopated,
Or feel an independent urge except "where indicated,"
But Arabella Simpkins Brown, when seated at the player,
Will tumble all traditions down to make the world seem gayer.
To her the Largo is a waltz that gaily goes a-tripping,
And you'll admit, with all its faults, her style of play is ripping.
So make a little call some night, if you would be in clover,
And watch her pump with all her might and play "We're Going Over."

TENSHUN COMPANY.

WELL, Bo,
We saw you go,
And you've been in camp
A month or so,
And we know
You're beginning to show
You're fit to hoe
Your own row.
Yes, Bill
You've got the will,
And all you need
Is just the skill,
And you'll fill
The bill.
And go through the mill
Without a spill.
Sure, Mike,
It's you we like,
And you're learning fast
To make a hike.
You're the tike
To fight and strike
And make the Kaiser wish
He had a bike.
Go it, Jim,
You've got the vim,
And camp life's
Putting you in trim.
You may be slim,
But your eye's not dim.
There's no hate
In your hymn,
But you've got the Kaiser
Out on a limb.
O, you Bert,
In your flannel shirt;
You'll hit the dirt
With a valiant spurt,
And somebody in Deutschland
Will know he's hurt.
Well, Bo!
Yes, Bill!
The Kaiser'll feel
Like he'd tapped a till,
Sure, Mike!
Hey, Jack!
When you get
Upon his track.
We saw you go,
And you've been in camp
A month or so,
And when you come back
On that transport boat
Your mascot will be A Pots-
Dam goat.

PEACE AT LAST.

HELLO, Jinks.

"How are you, Binks. What's the latest from the front?"

"The scrap is about over."

"You don't say."

"Yes, we'll have peace from now on."

"Why, I didn't even know negotiations were under way."

"Sure. Everything is settled except signing the papers."

"Will the terms be favorable.'

"I should say so."

"It beats all how those things can be kept a secret."

"Every precaution was taken to prevent it from getting out."

"There wasn't a line about it in the papers.'"

"Not a word."

"I'm glad the awful conflict is over."

"So am I.'

"I thought the enemy would be too stubborn to surrender."

"I did, too. It required a great deal of diplomacy."

"And a great deal of fighting."

"You bet."

"Are you sure everything's arranged?"

"No chance for a hitch."

"Naturally it was necessary to make some concessions to the enemy, wasn't it?"

"O, yes."

"What were they?"

"Well, we agreed to let her have Tuesday and Thursday out, and company, with the use of the player piano, Wednesday and Friday evenings."

LETTERS FROM AN AMERICAN AIR FIGHTER IN FRANCE

I was about 50 miles from the Bleriot field. I soon located my course and managed to get back safely to Avord.

After I landed and the monitor had looked at my altitude barometer and at my time and record, he found that I had burned nearly the last drop of gas. Well—I was considered a French military pilot after that.

March 6.—The French Government has ordered our Captain of Aviation to get 60 pilot ready to leave for the front by the first of May. I am one of the 60, so I shall be at the front, near the firing lines, flying as high as 20,000 feet, fighting German airplanes. You bet I shall do my best to get as many boche machines as possible. I shall be flying over the lines into Germany, dropping bombs, etc., and day and night doing air scouting.

At the front rain, wind, clouds or ssualls do not hinder us from flying. Imagine being as high as 20,000 feet in the air, driving aread at a speed of from 90 to 140 miles an hour! It is great sport, believe me!

When we are on a trip over the country, we call it "triangle flying," and carry both a map and a compass. We are not allowed to fly lower than 5000 feet on a triangle, which consists of about 200 miles or more, for the motor may fail, and then we have a chance to spiral or volplane and have time to look for a place to land. There is more than one would believe to aviation.

April 14.—I am now a licensed aviator. This afternoon I am leaving her for a small voyage of about 200 miles. I can make this in about three and one-half hours, if nothing happens. I pilot by a map and compass and must land in three different towns to look my machine over and fill up with gas and oil. This is a most interesting game. Yesterday I made 17 flights and did a few acrobatic stunts. We begin flying in the morning at daybreak and stop at 10, begin flying at 3 and stop at dark. So you see, we have long days. We shall soon start at 2 or three in the morning.

We had a number of accidents this morning. One man was killed; another pilot was caught in a propeller and may die, and a number of machines were broken to pieces.

When I am above the clouds I think of you, my folks, and I talk to my machine and to myself, and have a great time. We do not fly in the middle of the day, because there are too many air pockets into which we fall—and when we hit the bottom of an air pocket, we get a kick that sends us sometimes 100 feet upward and nearly turns us on end. The air is worse than any fast elevator. It takes a cool head and rapid work One thing we can't do is to be brutal with our controls.

Learning to Duck Gunfire.

Alpine, April 16.—I am taking my last course in a fast machine, called the Nieuport. We fly this machine at no less than 90 miles an hour, and she will speed up to 160 miles. I am going to the front on this plane. I leave for Pau in about two weeks to finish my training. There I shall do acrobatics to learn to duck the gunfire of the enemy. I am considered a first-class flier now. I hope before long you may see in the paper where I have brought down a few German machines. I am beginning to realize now the work I shall have to do in and above the clouds, to fight with life and death at the front to get a crack at those Germans. Each day I shall go up to a height of 20,000 feet to watch for a German plane. When I see him I will drop down and fight it out with him. I now fly in all kinds of weather, no matter how hard the wind blows or how unsteady it is, or how many pockets there are to fall into. I fly just the same. By the time America gets her army over here I shall be at the front ready to congratulate them.

Pau, May 9, 1917.—I have got to do more acrobatic stunts here for 15 days. I was setting up and operating the Lewis automatic machine gun, the "Spad," the "Vickers" and the "Hotchkiss" machine guns this morning. While I am here I shall do group flying, looping the loop, right and left and upside down flying, vertical variage, barrel turns, nose dives and "go into Veree," etc. I have done stunts that the American exhibition flyers would never attempt to do. They would call most of these stunts suicidal. The French over here think that if America gets a large army over here soon fighting on the lines, the boches will throw up their hands in six months' time. We are having fighting now on all sides, but we are holding our own and pounding them hard. I have made a good record here so far as my ability goes. Three pilots were killed yesterday doing acrobatics. They lost their heads and, before they knew, were masses of jelly. Hope I don't get mine yet awhile. I would rather end up in some air duel.

If you could only see a combat in the air, buckle and drop, etc., you would drop dead with excitement. It is no fool's job. I never was so popular in my life. I can't step into Paris unless there are receptions waiting for me there. Wherever the young American goes, handsome in his sky-blue uniform and silver buttons, with his Corporal's stripes on his arms, and the silver wings on his shoulders, he attracts attention. If he enters a cafe, he is invited to drink or smoke.

(Note—At the time he was making a cross-country tour and at a height of 10,000 feet his gas gave out. He made what is known as a "four-turn spiral" and "a couple of serpentines in order to reach his field." He landed in a plowed field near a chateau without getting into trouble or damaging his machine, a wonderful feat considering the height from which he had dropped without an engine. He went to the chateau and met the Countess, who spoke English perfectly. She telephoned to the airdrome for him, got the police to guard his machine and did his interpreting. He had lunch and tea with the Countess, who has three sons in the war herself, and would have stayed as her guest that night, but a car brought gas later in the afternoon, so he again took to the air and flew safely back to the airdrome. The Countess told him she would write to his mother, telling how she had seen her boy and found him well, and kept her promise, on a card that has a picture of her beautiful chateau.)

June 26.—At last I am ordered to the front to join the Lafayette escadrille, to fly a 200-horse-power Spad, the strongest, most recent and [illegible] war plane. By this time I can fly any plane, and from a height of [illegible] feet take any plane safely to earth, even without a motor, even though it had to land in a bunch of trees. I am ordered to go to Plessis Belleville and thence to the front at Compiegne. I am hoping for a commission in the American army meanwhile. Paris has been doing her best to spoil us with receptions and dinners. I am showered with offers of positions after the war—as a Government aviator, as a commercial or even as a pleasure pilot.

Thirty Bullets in His Machine.

July 5.—Yesterday there was a big time in Paris, but I stayed out at the front and had two combats without loss on either side. We certainly did some fighting, though. I was attacked by a Boche and we did some flapping around in the air. I had 30 bullet holes in my machine, but none took effect.

There was another big attack this morning. I witnessed part of it from a great height. We find the Boche planes quite active in the air. They certainly do keep us busy at times.

I am still with the Lafayette escadrille and have no idea when the American army will take me with them. You people know more about the war than I do. We are here where all is activity, day and night, but we know nothing of what is going on outside of our work. I am on the order of the day service for high patrol work tonight, from 6 to 8. It is dandy flying weather today.

This escadrille I am with moves to different parts of the lines every few weeks. We are a traveling squad. We go where the enemy is most active. So you can well understand we always can find plenty of trouble.

Yesterday a few of us had rather a narrow escape from a stray shell. It came singing through the air at a speed beyond the imagination and landed right beside us. When we hear them coming or are bombarded by the enemy machines, we run and hide in the nearest dugout. Right now the artillery are firing their aircraft guns at a Boche plane that is just above us. I hope they get him. I saw 14 pilots buried in a trench the other day after they had been bombed.

Hardships of Traveling Squad.

Aug. 2.—I got up this morning, as I was pilot of the day, at 3 o'clock, to see how the weather was, for I had to do patrol duty over the lines from 4 to 6. The weather has been very bad, blowing a gale, and the clouds are too low for flying over the lines. It rains hourly. I am now writing you in my miserable quarters. We are a traveling squad, so I am used to it. The squadron expects to move to Dunkirk soon. I still have the other two Americans with me—Coatsworth and Wilcox—my chum for over three months. He comes from Pasadena, Cal., and is one good boy. He has an aunt in New Bedford.

The guns are still booming away and if you knew the damage they are doing both to humanity and to property! They shelled us yesterday, but nothing serious. We should worry. When it is meant for us to go then will be the time to worry.

Aug. 3.—It is not very pleasant at times when up in the air, high or low, with all kinds of shells bursting around you and below you. Believe me, we realize it when they make a close shot. When they do we are sometimes knocked end over end, at other times it is as if somebody had put a stick of dynamite under a chair that you were sitting on. Then there are the combats with the enemy planes. Sometimes before you are through with one plane you have three or four piling on and around you, firing at you with their automatic machine guns. It is hard for those who are in America to realize a thousandth part of this game.

Besides these combats, we take photographs of the enemy's lines and furnish all kinds of information regarding new moves of the enemy.

Fighting German Sausage Balloons.

Some of the things our squadron has to do are these: First, we are moved to the part of the line where there is the most going on. Second, we swoop down on the trenches and open fire, getting them confused during an attack. Third, we swoop down on their sausage balloons, that are held by cables at a height of about a thousand meters over their lines, for observation work. There are from one to two men up in them at a time. It is one of the most daring jobs to swoop down and try to bring a sausage down. When you are down to that low height, their artillery and anti-aircraft guns are pouring all kinds of shells around you. If a piece of shrapnel hits us, our chance is small. It doesn't take much to put us out of commission. Although we come down sometimes with many holes in our planes after combats, we do not begin to realize until then how closely we fought for our lives. Each day there is a schedule of the different patrols. Fourth, each patrol is sent out to look for trouble and consists generally of three planes. There are high and low patrols. High patrol is at a height from 4000 to 6000 meters. Low patrol is from 2000 to 3500 meters. Fifth, then there are special patrols. It may be to go out and take care of a couple of bombarding planes, observing planes, or a plane that is looking for trouble and is in a dangerous position and needs help. At other times they may send out a special patrol when word has been received that enemy machines have crossed our lines. Then we get out to any height we see fit and make it our business to either bring them down or drive them back to their own lines. It would take a book to tell you about the tricks and games we play with them and they with us. I am in the district between the Meuse and Verdun. I am unable to tell you just where.

Kills Motor 16,000 Feet Up.

XXXII.

August 12, 1917.

I got into a combat with a Boche two-place machine the afternoon of the 9th of this month. I was behind and above and to the left of a group of my own boys over the German lines about four miles. I saw a Boche about 3000 feet below me and ahead so I signalled my boys, but they were chasing two more Boches, so did not see me.

So I made up my mind that I would attack this bi-place Boche down below me. Down I went at as much speed as I could get, which was I bet about 180 miles an hour, and dove for the Boche.

I fired about 20 rounds of ammunition at him, but he turned enough so as to spoil my aim. So I put my plane up and over on a vertical plane, so as to turn back quickly, and by trying to make a quick turn I brought my motor on again. When I opened my gas throttle, my motor gave a few kicks and quit dead. My motor stopped dead at a height of about 16,000 feet. Now you can imagine how quickly and coolly I had to work, to leave the Boche out of my reach and find my bearings back to my own lines. I looked at the ground below me, and at the same time put my machine into a direct nose dive, and started back to my own lines.

I planed all the way from over the Boche lines for my side, but had no idea where I could land. The clouds were heavy, which made things difficult, and besides, the whole country where I was to land is a maze of trenches, shell holes and barbed wire. This whole country, indeed, is pitted by shell holes, with little level places here and there, where we have our airdromes located.

I decided that I should have to land in a big forest or woods, so I kept on planing for that. As I got about a thousand feet from the nearest end of the woods, I saw a tiny piece of ground which I thought I should try to reach.

I barely reached it by clearing a row of trees and fortifications. The soldiers saw me coming and thought I was a Boche at first, who planned

Feels Better Now Than For 30 Years

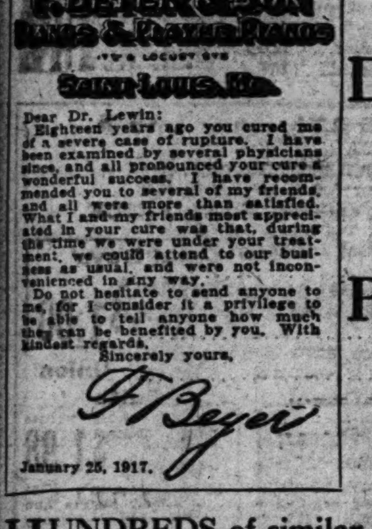
DANIEL J. PELLIER

Fruitola and Traxo Are Used With Most Gratifying Results.

"Fruitola and Traxo have made me feel better than I have for more than thirty years; I can now eat anything without having indigestion or heartburn, and am free from those terrible dizzy spells and pains in the back and sides. One bottle made a new man of me." This is the statement of Mr. Daniel J. Pellier, 3 Mason St., Gloucester, Mass. Thousands have used Fruitola and Traxo with equally satisfactory results and testify to the effectiveness of this treatment. Anyone who suffers with stomach or liver trouble or intestinal disorders, should at least try it.

Fruitola and Traxo are compounded in the Pinus laboratories at Monticello, Ill., and can be purchased in drug stores; a doctor's prescription is not necessary. Fruitola is a pure fruit oil that acts as an intestinal lubricant. One dose is usually sufficient to indicate its efficacy. Traxo is a tonic-alterative that is most effective to restore and rebuild the weakened, run-down system. A booklet of special interest to those who suffer with stomach trouble can be obtained by writing to the Pinus Laboratories, Monticello, Illinois.

What Prominent Men Say of Dr. Lewin's Painless and Permanent Cure of Rupture



F. BEYER & SON
PIANOS & PLAYER PIANOS
1719 LOCUST ST.
SAINT LOUIS, MO.

Dear Dr. Lewin:

Eighteen years ago you cured me of a severe case of rupture. I have been examined by several physicians since, and all pronounced your cure a wonderful success. I have recommended you to several of my friends, and all were more than satisfied. What I and my friends most appreciated in your cure was that, during the time we were under your treatment, we could attend to our business as usual, and were not inconvenienced in any way.

Do not hesitate to send anyone to me, for I consider it a privilege to be able to tell anyone how much they can be benefited by you. With kindest regards,

Sincerely yours,

F. Beyer

January 25, 1917.

HUNDREDS of similar letters from equally well-known men permanently cured of Rupture are on file in my office, each testifying to the success of the Lewin Method.

Physicians, clergymen, lawyers, business men, farmers and laborers to a total of 12,000, in and about St. Louis have been cured by me.

¶ Why trifle with your health, your energy; perhaps your life? My treatment is painless and does not interfere with your business or social obligations. No knife, no ether, no risk. Consultation free.

"5-Drops" Gives Quick Relief to Rheumatic Sufferers

J. W. Mason, Port Allen, La., writes: "I was stricken with rheumatism which paralyzed my right arm. I purchased a bottle of your '5-Drops' and used it according to directions and before I had used half the bottle I was entirely relieved and could use my arm the same as ever. I can't collect words enough to praise it as I would like. I wish every sufferer would give it a thorough trial."

E. M. Herrell, Point Caswell, N. C., writes: "I had rheumatism so bad that I could not raise my arm at all and could not sleep for pain, but one bottle of your '5-Drops' relieved me. I thank you for putting your wonderful medicine within reach of suffering humanity at a price that all can pay. You are at liberty to use my name for the benefit of others who suffer as I did."

"5-Drops" has proven its value for many years past and the testimony of those who have used it and found relief from the torture and agonizing pains caused by rheumatism is the best evidence of its remarkable power.

"5-Drops" is now sold by the leading druggists in every part of the United States and Canada.

Twelve of the Coats Are Accurately Reproduced

Beginning Tomorrow—An Event in Which Hundreds of St. Louis Women Are Interested

SEMI-ANNUAL SALE "VICTORIA" COATS

(Copyright, 1906.)

¶ There is no garment sale of the entire year that offers so much that is good and practical as this Annual Sale of Victoria Coats. This statement is positive, and it reflects the splendid character of the garments that have been arranged for this event.

¶ Victoria Coats, as you have heard so often, are sold in St. Louis at this store only. They were introduced by us several years ago, and we predicted at that time that they would be first in popularity within a very short time. Our prediction came true long ago; and our figures indicate that more Victoria Coats are sold in St. Louis every year than any other kind. All of which indicates their true value.

¶ But there is another point that should be specially interesting to every woman THIS year, and you will find it fully emphasized in these sale groups. Note, first of all, that a thoroughly GOOD Victoria Coat can be had at $15. After all that you have read of rising costs, this low price may surprise you.

¶ Again—note that the variety is larger even than in seasons past. That is another point of value. So, as a whole, this sale of Victoria Coats will be the best sale we have ever announced, and it comes at the very time when good, substantial Winter Coats are needed and wanted. These are the four big groups:

Group 1—$15.00

The "surprise" values of this big event. Every size from 14 to 44—an important point to consider.

Group 2—$19.75

Burellas, tweeds and zibelines, and the wanted plushes. Many are trimmed with fur fabrics. Sizes 14 to 44.

Group 3—$24.75

The ever-wanted Plushes are numbered among this group; also velours and cheviots. Sizes 14 to 44.

Group 4—$29.75

Models for street wear, motoring and afternoon social affairs, with all the better details of trimmings. Sizes 14 to 44.

to drop amongst their works. I thought so myself. Anyway, I made a perfect landing—never broke a wire from four miles over the German lines to about five miles inside our lines, from an altitude of about 16,000 feet, when my motor quit dead. Then I found that a ball out of the Boche plane had hit my magneto. That ball was so close to me—so close I am glad I didn't know, up in the air.

Sees French Hangars Blown Up.

Aug. 17, 1917.

This sector of the front is a bad one, and has been for a long time. I have flown five hours today already over the lines, and it is now only 4:15. My mechanic is putting my machine in good order, for the next flight, which I expect may be again today. An aviator's life in war time is not worth much. As I was starting out on a low patrol of 2500 meters high this noon, I saw two big hangars full of aeroplanes and another tri-plane machine of ours just leaving the ground, blown to nothing. The Boche planes managed to get across the lines and bomb this place. We haven't got the casualty list yet, and keeping account of daily incidents is a specialty. The man who does it has a very dangerous position, for when a combat machine drives onto him and drives big rockets or fuses that set the big moss of his observation balloons on fire, he must jump for his life in a parachute. When they do jump, 99 out of 100 are broken up a bit.

I am one of the pilots that has the job of setting fire to such observation balloons during the attack. It is no fun doing this, for the anti-aircraft guns and artillery are bursting heavy explosives and shrapnel all around you, and if one little piece of shrapnel should hit its mark, the pilot can say, "I have done my bit."

How They Outwit Gunners.

P. S. Had just finished writing your letter and was about to seal it when word came that I have lost another chum. His name is Baudoin, a French Lieutenant, who had five Boche planes to his credit and was decorated for each. I was talking with him not an hour and a half ago, and was discussing about his going to America and teaching aviation. He was an excellent pilot and a daredevil.

He was to leave for America inside of a fortnight. He was a volunteer patrol—something we do often—and attacked a biplane machine over the German lines. While he was in the combat with this lone plane two more Boche biplane machines came down behind him and shot the poor boy down. The last he was seen he was nose down in a viree, going like a shot out of a gun into eternity.

A viree is a nose dive, spinning around like a top. We do that in every combat. When the anti-aircraft guns are too hot, we go into a viree, to spill height straight down, so as to make them change their gun's bearings, which takes 30 seconds' time—and gives tnother chance to get away.

Tomorrow morning at 4:40 sharp six of us are to make a raid on the sausage balloons. We shall try to bring down a costly bunch of property, valuable to the Boche. I hope to come back, but if I don't one of my chums, Wilcox, will send my dress uniform and little belongings to you for a very sincere remembrance.

We must fly at a height of 1000 meters, which is no height at all, and swoop down on the sausages and pour a few rockets into them. If we hit them the sausages will go into a blaze. If I get one I shall be well decorated with the War Cross and maybe the Medal Militaire. I hope I get him. If I do, I shall try for another.

The artillery guns and anti-aircraft guns will take probably a few years of my life, if they don't get me for good. It is a very nerve-straining experience.

I shall think of you while I am alone in the air and pray that with your thoughts with me I can maneuver my plane so as to be successful. If I get back safely I shall write you immediately. If I land in Germany I shall also write, my first chance. Good luck and may God take care of you all!

He Gets His First Boche.

August 19, 1917. Yesterday, the 18th, I brought down my first Boche aeroplane. I had two combats with a big, two-plane Albatross, and during the second fight which was some fight, too, I hit the right mark.

He fell within our lines. I was at a height of about 15,000 feet, when I located this lone Boche plane below me. I then took every precaution to see that he didn't have any more planes guarding him. I could see none, so I immediately prepared for a duel with life and death.

I dove nose down for as much as 3000 feet, at an enormous speed, and came up behind and fired about 20 shots at him. He fired at me, but without doing any damage. I pulled a few more really exciting acrobatics which are used in combats, and then managed to get directly above him.

I was only a few hundred feet above him, but stayed there only a few seconds, in order to get my plane into a position to attack him from directly above. He kept spiralling to the right and I did the same. Then like a shot out of a gun I dove head first directly for him, at the same time firing my gun like mad.

I just skimmed him and banked to the left. While I was turning to the left I found him still turning to the right, and spinning round like a top, going like mad to his doom.

His motor was smoking all the time, but did not go into a blaze.

I got this big mass of an albatross with only one gun. An albatross carries from two to three men, and they carry from two to four guns.

I Am to Be Decorated.

I am to be decorated with the War Cross and one palm and will get another stripe on my arm which will make me a sous-officer of the French army.

I was some entertained last night. Col. Michel of the United States army commander of aviation, was at the escadrille talking to the commandant about us Americans, and wanted to know what kind of pilots we were. I came in just at dark. They had already received the report from the front that I had brought down a Boche, so you can imagine the reception that I had. The French officers say I should have a good many medals for being an American volunteer before the war.

This noon again I was in a small combat, but one of my comrades brought the Boche down. About 20 minutes ago the artillery anti-aircraft guns brought another down about two miles from here. We watched him spinning to eternity out of the sky.

My Captain told me shortly before I began this letter that a new Spad of the latest type would land directly from the factory this afternoon—for me. So now I shall have the fastest and best war chassis machine made.

At four this afternoon I

CHILD GETS SICK WHEN CONSTIPATED LOOK AT TONGUE!

Hurry, mother! Remove poisons from little stomach, liver, bowels.

Give "California Syrup of Figs" if cross, bilious or feverish.

No matter what ails your child, a gentle, thorough laxative should always be the first treatment given.

If your little one is out-of-sorts, half sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, mother. See if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that the little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or has stomach ache, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless "fruit laxative," because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs;" then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."—ADV.

LETTERS FROM AN AMERICAN AIR FIGHTER IN FRANCE

to see if I can bring down a sausage balloon with seven men flying around me to prevent a Boche from attacking me while I am completing my mission. Big attack started by the French.

Gets New Plane for Deed.

Aug. 20, 1917. I have been presented with a new Spad combat biplane direct from the factory, one of the fastest and best machines yet built. I have 200 h. p. with a Hispano-Suiza motor of the latest type. I also have two new Vickers automatic machine guns mounted on her. Now, with the enormous speed that I have and two guns I hope to bring several down. I can mount to an almost unlimited height, but will not attempt to go higher than 22,000 feet. At that height I can drive onto any Boche around. If I go higher, I should have to carry up with me sufficient oxygen to last at least an hour.

I used this new Spad this morning on the great attack. The big offensive on the right and left banks of the Meuse began a little after daylight this morning. Three other machines and mine had to fly only 2000 feet above the battlefields and trenches. It was the most exciting flight I have ever had.

We had Boche shrapnel and anti-aircraft guns and tracing shells, rockets, etc., playing all around us for nearly two hours. An American by the name of Coatsworth from New York was brought down. Two Boche planes came shooting out of the sky and dove for him, for he was 100 meters above me and a little behind, guarding and protecting my movements. Well, they filled his machine full of explosive bullets, and put it out of flying order. But he landed without injury back of our lines. He received a slight wound in the hand.

"They Fought Like Tigers."

The other three of us then mixed up in a little fight with two Boche Rambler biplanes, but did not manage to bring them down. They fought like tigers but were driven back within their own lines.

We played with death for nearly two hours. We were to "machine gun" the trenches, drop bombs—for which we had but little room—and shoot rockets. We had certain times to do these things, according to what movements were being made on the battlefields by the infantry.

I cannot tell you how we knew the different moves, where the different branches of the army lay, and just where the officers were. Well, the French have moved ahead a whole lot, and taken many prisoners, including a number of officers.

I saw about 300 Boche prisoners that were taken this morning. I was able to furnish much information regarding the different moves, etc.

Now for some more good news. I shall leave the escadrille here at the front the 20th day of September for Paris. I shall be in Paris two or three days, and will then leave for Bordeaux. I shall get certain military papers signed, and will take the first steamer from Bordeaux to New York. If nothing happens, I shall be home early in October.

(Since his last letter, the newspapers have informed Mrs. Rhino that her gallant son has brought down his second Boche plane, for which he has received his second war palm.)

Beautiful Hair Tinting

Nothing so robs a woman of her good looks and attractiveness as gray, streaked or faded hair. And there is no more reason or sense in tolerating unattractive hair than there is in wearing unbecoming gowns.

The one hair stain that stands supreme is "Brownatone." It is simple and easy to use. No mixing. Just comb or brush it into your hair. It cannot be detected, will not rub or wash off, acts instantly and is absolutely harmless.

"Brownatone" will give any shade desired from light golden brown to black.

Your druggist sells "Brownatone" or will get it for you. A sample and a booklet will be mailed you upon receipt of 10 cents, and your orders will be filled direct from our laboratories if you prefer. Mention shade desired.

Two sizes—25c and $1.00.

Insist on "Brownatone" at your hairdresser's.

PAY WHEN CURED
FISTULA—FISSURE

A FEW REASONS WHY YOU SHOULD TAKE MY TREATMENT FOR PILES—FISTULA OR FISSURE AND NOT EXPERIMENT LONGER WITH UNCERTAINTIES

BECAUSE the number of years (more than thirty-three) that I have devoted especially to the study and treatment of these diseases enables me to administer the successful treatment.

BECAUSE this treatment effects sure, complete, thorough and permanent cures.

BECAUSE cures are guaranteed under this treatment.

BECAUSE this treatment has been tried by hundreds and hundreds of men and women and proved successful after all other previous treatments failed.

BECAUSE this treatment is backed up by a legal guarantee that assures the permanency of the cures.

BECAUSE it does not fail to cure as the various salves, ointments, suppositories and such home treatments that you have tried so long.

BECAUSE there is no such thing as a successful home treatment in the form of ointments, salves, suppositories, etc.

BECAUSE your health is being undermined and the foundation laid for serious complications and probably chronic invalidism by neglecting this treatment.

BECAUSE your discomfort and inconvenience will become greater the longer you put this treatment off.

BECAUSE it will cost you more to be cured if you wait until your case becomes complicated.

BECAUSE this treatment does not keep one from his usual duties long, and in many cases where the patient lives in the city, only a few minutes are required each day to come and have me give the treatment.

BECAUSE my charges are reasonable considering the result of my treatment, entire freedom from the disease and permanency of the cure.

BECAUSE it is far better to have a physician treat you whose experience in this special branch of medicine is large and exclusive than to have one treat you who only treats such cases occasionally.

BECAUSE I can prove these and many other such statements as to the merits of my treatment—permanency of my cures—satisfactory results, etc.

BECAUSE I do prove them by giving statements from those who have actually experienced my treatment—statements that can be investigated — statements from former patients who are willing to tell other sufferers about their condition before and after taking my treatment in order to show the wisdom of taking this treatment before they spend a lot of money unnecessarily for home treatments and treatments from inexperienced persons that never cure diseases of this character.

Send for my free book for Men and Women. They contain more reasons why you should take this treatment and be cured of your affliction of Piles—Fistula and Fissure.

MEN—I published a special 304-page book which I will send to you free of charge upon request.

WOMEN—I publish a special 100-page book which I will send to you free of charge upon request.

Consultation by mail free. Consultation and examination at my office, free.

Write to me or call and let me tell you more about this treatment—time required to cure your case—charges, etc.

M. NEY SMITH, M. D.
(Specialist).

Mr. Aug. Vogt Cured of Piles. Lost No Time From Work While Taking Treatment.

Eureka, Mo., Sept. 15, 1914.

Dear Dr. Smith:

I am entirely cured of bleeding Piles and glad to say you were certainly successful in your treatment in my case.

I received your treatment last spring, a year ago. I had been troubled with Piles about six years before I went to you. Had been treated by other physicians, but received no benefit. I am glad to say that you did all you promised to do for me. The morning after I took the first treatment I went to work and worked every day. Your treatment did not interfere with my usual duties. Thanking you very much for what you have done for me, I am your friend,

Aug. Vogt

Read Mr. A. B. Smith's Letter Telling of His Cure of Piles and Fistula.

Granite City, Ill., Sept. 23, 1916.

Dr. M. Ney Smith, St. Louis, Mo.:

My Dear Doctor—The great relief and satisfaction that I am experiencing since your treatment on me prompts me to write this letter, which you may show to anyone who is in doubt of your ability to cure Piles and Fistula.

I had the Piles for the past twenty-five years and Fistula for the past five years. I tried every patent cure and treatment I ever heard of before I went to you. I took your treatment at your office, and now feel twenty years younger than I did three months ago.

I am foreman of the carpenter department of the Granite City Steel Works, have held this position for nearly twenty years, and a member of the Granite City Building and Loan Association, in the capacity of a director for the past eighteen years, which has a capital stock of $150,000; am also a member of the I. O. O. F. Lodge, Modern Woodmen Lodge, Royal Arcanum, and anyone addressing me regarding your treatment will receive an answer. All of these organizations know what my condition was before I went to you for treatment.

I highly recommend your treatment to any sufferer from these troubles and will gladly inform anyone about your treatment if they write me and inclose a stamped envelope for reply.

Thanking you for the relief and kind attention given me while under your treatment at your office, and wishing you continued success, I am,

CANADA MAKES MEAT SAVING

Hotels and Restaurants Contribute to Economy.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—More than 1600 hotels and restaurants in Canada, by institution of meatless days, have reduced consumption of bacon 51 per cent, and beef 40 per cent, as compared with the preceding months. They also have made considerable economies in wheat and flour.

The Food Controller of Canada, according to advices to the food administration here, has announced that after Nov. 1 the net profits of Canadian millers will be limited to a maximum average of 25 cents per barrel of flour, the by-products to go to the mill.

AMERICA REVOKES PASSPORT GIVEN TO W. J. ORTHWEIN

Wealthy Former St. Louisan Deprived of Credentials for Pro-German Activities and Utterances.

NOW IN SWITZERLAND

Family Intimate With Imperial Household Can't Cross a Frontier Now.

The American passport of William J. Orthwein, wealthy former St. Louisan, has been revoked because of "improper conduct," in making pro-German utterances and participating in such activities. Washington officials refuse to divulge the particular provocation for revoking the instrument.

Orthwein is now at St. Moritz, Switzerland, where he and his family have spent much of their time for the last 17 years. Annulment of the passport withdraws from him the protection of the United States Government and makes it necessary for him to remain in Switzerland, because he cannot cross European frontiers without a passport.

Mr. and Mrs. Orthwein and their daughter, Alma, have attained considerable prominence in Europe, moving in German and Russian royal circles. The Grand Duke of Saxe-Weimar visited them at St. Moritz and went bobsledding with Orthwein and they were entertained at Marienbad by Prince Adalbert, the third son of the Kaiser. It was announced that the Prince was wooing Miss Orthwein and was planning a visit with them when they returned to St. Louis. Miss Orthwein in an interview at Munich denied the rumors.

Orthwein, in a letter to a St. Louis friend in October, 1914, wrote:

"I do not understand why the American people do not realize that a series of defeats which has led the German army to Paris in so amazingly short a time indicates that the most infamous series of systematic lying has been imposed upon them. This same noble campaign has also in the same manner misrepresented the causes and the responsibility for the war. I consider that the more news we get the more convincing is the evidence that there is only one cause for this war, viz., English jealousy of Germany's progress. I attribute it entirely to the British Government, which I have always heard execrated, during the past several years, by every decent Britisher I have met, and they are many."

Orthwein is a brother of Ralph H. Orthwein of 6190 Washington boulevard, Mrs. Frank Everts of 3405 Hawthorne boulevard and Max R. Orthwein of 1827 South Compton avenue. His last trip to St. Louis was made in February, 1910, when he visited his wife's sister, Mrs. Frank E. Nulsen, at 3417 Longfellow boulevard. Mrs. Orthwein's maiden name was Miss Alma Estenhain.

Orthwein's St. Louis interests are managed by Everts, who has an office in the Gay Building at Third and Pine streets.

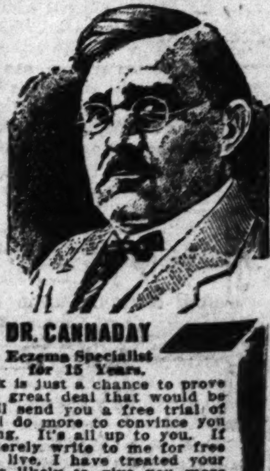
ECZEMA

Also Called Tetter, Salt Rheum, Pruritus, Milk Crust, Water Poison, Weeping Skin, Etc.



DR. CANNADAY

Eczema Specialist for 15 Years.

For fifteen years I have been treating one disease alone—ECZEMA. I have handled over one million cases. I do not pretend to know it all, but I am convinced the disease is due to an excess of acid in the blood, and closely related to rheumatism and cancer. This acid must be removed.

Eczema is called by some people Itch, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Pruritus, Milk Crust, Weeping Skin, etc. I am fully convinced Eczema is a curable disease, and when I say it can be cured, I mean just what I say—C-U-R-E-D, and not merely patched up for a while to return worse than before. It makes no difference what other doctors have told you, or what all you have tried, all I ask is just a chance to prove to you that this vast experience has taught me a great deal that would be of help to you. If you will write me today I will send you a free trial of my mild, soothing, guaranteed treatment that will do more to convince you than I or anyone else could in a month's preaching. It's all up to you. If you suffer any more with eczema and refuse to merely write to me for free trial, just blame yourself. No matter where you live, I have treated your neighbors. Merely dropping me a postal today is likely to give you more real comfort in a week than you ever expected to enjoy again. Do it right now—your very life may be at stake.

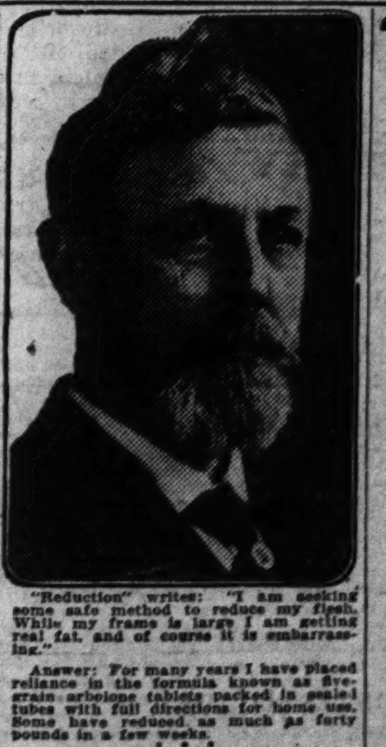
The Doctor's Advice

by Dr. Lewis Baker



The questions answered below are general in character, the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers will apply in any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice, free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Bldg., College-Elwood streets, Dayton, Ohio, enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only initials or fictitious names will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

"Reduction" writes: "I am seeking some safe method to reduce my flesh. While my frame is large I am getting real fat, and of course it is embarrassing."

Answer: For many years I have placed reliance in the formula known as five-grain arbolone tablets packed in sealed tubes with full directions for home use. Some have reduced as much as forty pounds in a few weeks.

C. O. C. asks: "I am constipated, tongue coated, have headache, dizzy spells and indigestion sometimes. Please advise?"

Answer: I advise that you begin using three-grain sulpherb tablets (not sulphur). These tablets are laxative, act on the liver, kidneys and bowels and tend to keep the blood pure by arousing the eliminative functions. Relief should follow quickly.

"Grateful" asks: "About a year ago I was afflicted with a bad case of dandruff. I used plain yellow minyol, and three treatments cured me. Now I want to know if I can increase my weight about 30 pounds?"

* * *

Answer: I have very frequently advised thin, anaemic, bloodless people to use three-grain hypo-nuclane tablets at meal times. They assist digestion, increase the nutritive processes and give strength and flesh to such people. Several months' treatment is essential to produce results.

"Secretary" writes: "I have pains in my spine and frightful headache in back of head, fainting spells, twitching and trembling, nervousness, sleeplessness, loss of appetite and strength, and in fact am a 'has been' when it comes to performing accustomed work and duties."

Answer: In all such cases the assimilative functions have not kept pace with waste functions, and a powerful harmless tonic treatment is needed. I find three-grain cadomene tablets unexcelled and astonishingly beneficial in such cases, and advise them for you.

"Laura" says: "Some time ago I contracted a very severe cold and cough. I have tried many remedies, but they do not seem to help me at all. I wish you would advise me what to do."

Answer: What you need is a laxative cough syrup—one that will drive the cold from your system. The following prescription will check your cold and cough: Get a 2½-oz. package of concentrated essence mentho-laxene and make according to directions on the bottle. Take a teaspoonful every hour or two or until your cold is better. This will relieve you in a very few days.

M. J. B. asks: "My hair is too oily and my scalp itches with dandruff, and of late it is combing out too much. What is a good treatment?"

Answer: Obtain plain yellow minyol from your druggist in 4-oz. jars and apply as per directions. This cleans, purifies, cools and invigorates the hair and scalp, thus stopping the death of the hair. Dandruff and itching are at once relieved. Men and women all over the country now use it regularly.

NOTE: For many years Dr. Baker has been giving free advice and prescriptions to millions of people through the press columns and doubtless has helped in relieving illness and distress more than any single individual in the world's history. Thousands have written him expressions of gratitude and confidence similar to the following:

DR. LEWIS BAKER, DEAR SIR: We have used three of the medicines you advise—the double four, the essence mentho-laxene and the rheumatism prescriptions—and I want to say they all worked like a charm. They are the best I have ever used, and I feel I could not keep house without them. I am very grateful and pleased to recommend any of these medicines prescribed. Very truly yours,

THE ART OF REPRODUCING SOUND IS NOT NEW

All Talking Machines on the Market Reproduce Sound.

THE PROBLEM WAS TO INVENT A PHONOGRAPH

Which would not alter the original tone of the artist or instrument.

IN OTHER WORDS RE-CREATE SOUND

Manufacturers of sound-reproducing machines considered this IMPOSSIBLE because all the overtones had to be recorded.

AFTER FOUR YEARS' RESEARCH EDISON SOLVED THE PROBLEM

Today the New Edison Brings Into Your Home the Artist's Tone

A New Thought—Think it Over Very Carefully. The Edison has no tone.

The perfect Phonograph should have no tone of its own in order to bear comparison with the original in a way that baffles detection of the living voice from the Re-Created voice. Only the New Edison sustains this marvelous test. City Physicians Explain Why They Prescribe Nuxated Iron

To Make Beautiful, Healthy Women and Strong Vigorous Men

NOW BEING USED BY OVER THREE MILLION PEOPLE ANNUALLY

Nuxated Iron (5gr)
Sig- Two after meals
3 times a day
King M.D.

New York, N. Y.—It is conservatively estimated that over three million people annually in this country alone are taking Nuxated Iron. Such astonishing results have been reported from its use both by doctors and laymen that a number of physicians in various parts of the country have been asked to explain why they prescribe it so extensively and why it apparently produces so much better results than were obtained from the old forms of inorganic iron.

Extracts from some of the letters received are given below:

Dr. Ferdinand King, a New York Physician and Medical Author, says: "There can be no sturdy iron men without iron. Pallor means anaemia. Anaemia means iron deficiency. The skin of anaemic men and women is pale; the flesh flabby; the muscles lack tone; the brain fags and the memory fails, and they often become weak, nervous, irritable, despondent and melancholy. When the iron goes from the blood of women the roses go from their cheeks.

"In the most common foods of America, the starches, sugars, table syrups, candies, polished rice, white bread, soda crackers, biscuits, macaroni, spaghetti, tapioca, sago, farina, degerminated cornmeal, no longer is iron to be found. Refining processes have removed the iron of Mother Earth from these impoverished foods, and silly methods of home cookery, by throwing down the waste-pipe the water in which our vegetables are cooked, are responsible for another grave iron loss.

"Therefore, if you wish to preserve your youthful vim and vigor to a ripe old age, you must supply the iron deficiency in your food by using some form of organic iron, just as you would use salt when your food has not enough salt."

Dr. A. J. Newman, late Police Surgeon of the City of Chicago and former House Surgeon, Jefferson Park Hospital, Chicago, in commenting on Nuxated Iron, says: "It has been my particular duty during the past six years to assist in keeping Chicago's five thousand bluecoats in good health and perfect fighting trim so that they would be physically equipped to withstand all manner of storms and the ravages of nature's elements.

"Recently I was prompted through an endorsement of Nuxated Iron by Dr. Schuyler C. Jaques, Visiting Surgeon of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York, to give it a trial. This remedy has proven through my own tests of it to excel any preparation I have ever used for creating red blood, building up the nerves, strengthening the muscles and correcting digestive disorders."

Dr. E. Sauer, a Boston physician, who has studied widely both in this country and in great European Medical Institutions, says: "As I have said a hundred times over, organic iron is the greatest of all strength-builders. If people would only take Nuxated Iron when they feel weak or rundown, instead of dosing themselves with habit-forming drugs, stimulants and alcoholic beverages, I am convinced that in this way they could ward off disease, preventing it becoming organic in thousands of cases, and thereby the lives of thousands might be saved who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, kidney, liver, heart trouble and other dangerous maladies. The real and true cause which started their diseases was nothing more nor less than a weakened condition brought on by lack of iron in the blood.

"Not long ago a man came to me who was nearly half a century old and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with a blood pressure of a boy of 20 and as full of vigor, vim and vitality as a young man; in fact, a young man he really was, notwithstanding his age. The secret, he said, was taking iron—Nuxated Iron had filled him with renewed life. At 30 he was in bad health; at 46 he was careworn and nearly all in; now at 50, after taking Nuxated Iron, a miracle of vitality and his face beaming with the buoyancy of youth.

"Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good, and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while double their strength and endurance and entirely rid themselves of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form; and this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. The iron demanded by Mother Nature for the red coloring matter in the blood of her children is, alas! not that kind of iron. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. Many an athlete and prize fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray; while many another has gone down to inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron."

Dr. Schuyler C. Jaques, Visiting Surgeon of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York City, said: "I have never before given out any medical information or advice for publication, as I ordinarily do not believe in it. But in the case of Nuxated Iron I feel I would be remiss in my duty not to mention it. I have taken it myself and given it to my patients with most surprising and satisfactory results. And those who wish quickly to increase their strength, power and endurance will find it a most remarkable and wonderfully effective remedy."

Dr. N. H. Hornstine, for 10 years in the Department of Public Health and Charities of Philadelphia, said: "After carefully examining the formula of Nuxated Iron I realized that here at last was organic iron—the only kind I could conscientiously recommend, prepared in such a way with other ingredients as to be easily assimilated and calculated to act as a quick revitalizer of the blood and a true strength-builder. Its administration in a number of stubborn cases where other tonics had utterly failed only served to convince me absolutely of the remarkable and unusual power of Nuxated Iron. When I personally took it I found the rapidity with which my energy and endurance increased most surprising. In my opinion, the widespread use of Nuxated Iron is bound to make a nation of stronger men, lovelier women and healthier children."

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians in such a great variety of cases, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians both in Europe and America. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 100 per cent or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in 10 days' time. It is dispensed in this city by Judge & Dolph Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Johnson Bros.' Drug Co., Enderle Drug Co., Pauley Drug Co., Keiffer Drug Co. and all good druggists.—ADVERTISEMENT.

8 PER CENT COST ADDED TO TRAVEL BY NEW WAR TAX

Only Commuters Will Escape Burden on Tickets Effective November 1.

FREIGHT PAYS 3 PER CENT

Railroads Will Collect Amounts for Government at Time Transportation Is Sold.

When the new Government war tax on transportation charges becomes effective, Nov. 1, every traveler and shipper in the United States, with but few exceptions, will meet with an increase of 8 per cent in passenger rates and an advance of 3 per cent in freight charges. In addition a tax of 10 per cent has been imposed on all luxuries enjoyed by the traveling public, such as sleeping and observation car accommodations.

Suburban commuters alone escape the provisions of the bill as a result of a clause which exempts from taxation commutation tickets for trips of 40 miles or less and which limits taxable tickets to a valuation of more than 35 cents.

The 3 per cent tax on freight charges, however, offers no exemption either as to amount or distance except on shipments for the United States Government, the States, and on export and import business. Circus and theatrical trains are excluded because they are affected by other provisions of the revenue bill.

While the Government holds the carriers responsible for the collection of the tax, the purchasers of transportation service are held liable by the bill for the tax. As a result, the tax will be collected by the railway ticket agent at the time of the sale of transportation.

Traveling Cost Increases.

In this way the St. Louisan who now journeys to Chicago for $6.97 in a chair car will have to pay $7.53 for the trip after Nov. 1, paying a war tax of 56 cents. The same trip now, made in a Pullman car upper berth, costs an additional $1.70. After Nov. 1 it will cost $1.87 extra. A lower berth to Chicago, now worth $2, will cost $2.20.

A trip to New York now costs $24.75, with $6 additional for a lower berth. After Nov. 1 it will cost $27.73 and $6.60 for the berth. These are one-way rates.

Drawing room accommodations from St. Louis to New York now cost $21. When the tax bill becomes effective, they will cost $23.10.

From St. Louis to Philadelphia, one can ride in a chair car for $22.75 at present. Under the provisions of the tax law, the same trip will cost $24.57, including a war tax of $1.82. A lower berth on this trip now costs $5.50. It will be worth $6.05 Nov. 1.

Freight Rates to Go Up.

St. Louis cigar men, who now can get a shipment of cigars weighing 2000 pounds transported here from New York for $21.10, will have to pay $21.73 to have the "smokes" brought here from the same place after Nov. 1. The above is a typical instance of how the war tax will affect shipping. In this case the war tax of 3 per cent amounts to 63 cents and is applied on a class of freight commanding what is known as "first class rates."

One railroad alone estimates that it will collect from $2,000,000 to $2,500,000 a year for the Government as a result of the freight and passenger taxes. The figures are based on the business done by the road last year.

The tax on shipments will be handled by the railroads in the following way: On prepaid freight, the shipper will be furnished a receipt for his war tax on the bill of lading; on freight sent "collect," the tax will be put on the consignee's freight bill.

DENIES POLES ARE STARVING

German Administration in Warsaw Contradicts Claim of Food Shortage.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 13. — The German administration of Warsaw has issued a denial of statements that famine conditions prevail in Poland. It asserts there is an abundance of food in the rural districts and that the people in the cities are nourished adequately.

These statements contradict those made by a representative of the Warsaw Town Council who is in Copenhagen endeavoring to arrange to send food by way of Denmark and also denies statements by the secretary of the Danish relief organization who recently returned from Poland. Both give appalling pictures of conditions there, particularly in regard to the high mortality due to under-nutrition in crowded Warsaw. They say people are dropping dead of starvation in the streets daily. A similar report as to conditions in Vilna was made in a memorandum recently drawn up for Socialists in the Reichstag. Poland is still compelled to fed the army of occupation from its home supplies.

APPLICATION FOR ANOTHER M. K. & T. RECEIVER DENIED

Judge Hook in Opinion Says Court Will See That Property Is Handled Properly.

Judge Hook, in an opinion handed down here yesterday in the United States Court of Appeals, denied the application of Speyer & Co., New York brokers, for appointment of an additional receiver for the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railroad. The petitioner claimed that such an appointment was necessary to safeguard the property of the railroad.

Under the ruling the property will continue to be administered by Charles E. Schaff as receiver.

Judge Hook declared the courts could be depended upon to see that the railroad property was handled properly.

Galesburg Citizens Organize to Prevent Coming of Strike Breakers.

GALESBURG, Ill., Oct. 13.—Forty employes of the Abingdon Sanitary Co. went on a strike today because the company did not allow a 10 per cent monthly bonus. The company is said to have planned to bring in strike breakers, but citizens have organized to keep them out.

COMBING WON'T RID HAIR OF DANDRUFF

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.—ADV.

DISTRICT BOARD REVERSES SELF ON TWO EXEMPTIONS

Lower Board's Ruling in Cases of Abbink and Flottemesch Finally Is Sustained.

WIEGAND APPEAL STILL UP

"So Important" That Return of Chairman Spencer Tomorrow Is Awaited.

The District Appeals Board, in the Boatmen's Bank Building, which recently reversed the decision of the local boards in granting exemption to John Abbink of Webster Groves, and John C. Flottemesch of 1416A Newhouse avenue, yesterday reversed itself and affirmed the decision of the lower board.

Flottemesch is one of the few men who married after the declaration of war and asked to be exempted from service. He was married on May 22. He filed an affidavit stating that he had taken out a marriage license on April 5, but that his prospective bride asked him to wait, as she wanted to be married on the anniversary of her mother's marriage, May 22. He also filed a copy of the license.

Abbink was allowed exemption by a local board on the ground that he has a dependent sister in a hospital at Cedar Grove, Wis. The District Board reversed the local board, and Abbink later successfully filed additional affidavits.

The case of George G. Wiegand of 5582 Berlin avenue, who is claiming exemption on the ground that he has a dependent wife, although he was married on April 18, after the declaration of war, will be considered tomorrow. L. Ray Carter, secretary of the District Board, said that the reason the case was not decided yesterday was because it was "so important" that the members thought it wise to await the return of Chairman Spencer, so that the entire board could act on the case. Wiegand's father, a wealthy manufacturer, has said that he "is not in a position to assume the responsibility" of caring for the younger Mrs. Wiegand, should her husband be called away. Wiegand's case is similar to many cases that have come before the board which were not accorded the attention of Wiegand's claim.

Coercion Plea Fails.

Dominico Emma of 804 Wash street, who was allowed exemption Oct. 8 by the District Board when he made an affidavit that he had been coerced into taking out his first naturalization papers by the secretary of the Fourth Ward board, was denied exemption by the District Board yesterday. He said the secretary told him he would be deported in 90 days if he did not take out his papers. He said he never intended to become a citizen.

After Emma's claim first had been allowed, the chairman of the Fourth Ward board filed an affidavit denying every allegation. He asserted that Emma, when he appeared for physical examination, expressed a desire to become a citizen and fight for the United States, and asked to be directed to the naturalization office.

The board had expected to have passed on every claim and appeal and every Government appeal by last night, but several wards had failed to send the necessary papers in the Government appeals and the board could not do this. In Wards 7, 8, 9, 12 and 13 Government appeals have not been acted upon. The District Board expects to complete its work on the first draft by Wednesday or Thursday.

The district board yesterday reversed the decision of local boards in 22 cases where men had been exempted. More than 300 cases were affirmed. Twenty of the reversals were where the men had married after the declaration of war. Several of the men stated that their wives were soon to become mothers.

The following exemptions granted by the local boards were revoked:

To Remove First Signs of Old Age

"The infallible first sign of age is the sagging cheek muscles," says Mme. Cavalieri, whose fame as a beauty culturist is scarcely less than that of a songstress. "These are more difficult and serious to treat than wrinkles," she continues. "The sagging muscles indicate they have grown too weak to remain in place; they must be assisted, strengthened."

The best way to strengthen them is by bathing the face in a lotion made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel. This creates a freer circulation to the parts, besides causing muscles and skin to contract. Saxolite, procurable at every drug store, has long been known by complexion specialists to possess remarkable tonic and astringent properties, valuable in treating flabby tissue and wrinkles. —ADV.

CLEVELAND HIGH GIRL WINS POEM CONTEST

Miss Margaret DeLaughter, 15 Years Old, Awarded First Prize in Magazine Competition.

Miss Margaret DeLaughter, 15-year-old daughter of Mrs. Nellie M. DeLaughter, librarian of Carondelet Branch of the Public Library, was awarded the gold badge, first prize, in the October poem contest of the St. Nicholas Magazine. She also won the silver badge for a poem in St. Nicholas for July.

"The Harvest Moon," for which Miss DeLaughter was awarded the gold badge, follows:

The endless chain of centuries drags by;
Time's mysteries unfold themselves, and I,
Poised like a flaring torch-light in the sky,
Watch through the ages, wise and still and old.
And while the somber night grows wan and cold,
The silent stars are left to mourn and pray,
Where Death, the stern, sad angel, held his sway
Above the battlefield, on hovering wings;
Brooding awhile before he fled away.
Alas, the tales that I could tell, of years
When, for the greed and pride of tyrant kings,
Men fought and died, and women's bitter tears
Were mingled with their blood; they call it war,
And death for honor's sake; but oh, to me
Since earth began, the fearful sights I see
Are wanton crimes and horror—northing more.
Those world-old tales are easily forgot—
If I might speak;—but it is better not.

Miss DeLaughter's prize poem in the July St. Nicholas follows:

FROM SEA TO SEA

The Earth is wrapped in silence strangely deep,
And full of throbbing pain.
The midnight breezes moan and know no sleep;
But all their grief is vain.
The voices of past ages echo clear,
And call from sea to sea,
Borne on the wings of time, their cry of fear
Sighs through eternity.

The earth is wrapped in sunshine softly bright;
Yet, with the dawning day,
Is seen again the torrent of the fight
Along its bloody way.
But voices of the future never cease
To call from sea to sea;
Borne on the wings of time, their song of peace
Rings through eternity.

A condition of the contest was that the poems should conform to the titles, which were announced in advance by the magazine. Considering this restriction, the work of the young poet is the more remarkable.

Miss DeLaughter is a student at Grover Cleveland High School and lives with her mother at 6447 Virginia avenue. She is a Camp Fire girl, and her choice of recreation, aside from writing poetry, inclines to outdoor exercise.

CUBAN RED CROSS TO SEND HOSPITAL UNIT TO FRANCE

American Co-operation Helps Plan Calling for $1,000,000 Fund and Equipment of 100 Beds.

HAVANA, Oct. 12.—The Cuban Red Cross Society, of which Mme. Mariana Menocal, wife of the President of Cuba, is chairman, has begun the work of equipping a 100-bed hospital unit, manned by Cuban physicians and nurses, for active service in France. The enterprise will be financed by a fund of $1,000,000, which is to be raised by Cuban society women. Announcement of the plans followed a meeting in the presidential palace, presided over by the wife of the President.

Co-operation between the Cuban and American Red Cross officials has helped make this Cuban unit possible.

More than $100,000 was in the hands of the Red Cross officials before the canvass for the million-dollar fund was started. Each sugar "ingenia," or plantation mill, in Cuba has been asked to set aside $1000 for the Red Cross. A national Red Cross "tag day" also has been planned. In the old Havana postoffice a complete Red Cross workshop is in operation with electrically operated sewing machines, donated by Mme. Menacol and Senora Blanca de Marti, wife of the Cuban Minister of War and Navy.

The Red Cross flag in this city has become almost as familiar as the national colors. Instruction in the making of Red Cross material is being supervised by Mrs. Carlton R. Kear, wife of the United States naval attache here, and Mrs. W. G. Ames of the Havana branch of the American Red Cross.

Four Oil Companies Grant Raise.

SHREVEPORT, La., Oct. 13.—Four oil companies, operating in the Louisiana oil fields, have announced increases in the wages of their oil field workers. The Texas Company and Gulf Refining Co. have granted increases of 20 per cent over old wages, effective Nov. 1. The Standard Oil Co. and the Producers' Oil Co. have announced a 10 per cent raise.

During the first nine months of 1917 the Post-Dispatch printed 14,375 Musical Want Ads—534 more than the THREE nearest St. Louis newspapers combined.

POLISH FLAG TO FLY SOON ON FRENCH FRONT

Independent Unit Being Organized by Polish Soldiers in Allied Armies.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

FRENCH FRONT IN FRANCE, Sept. 25.—A new national flag shortly is to be unfolded on the French front—that of Poland. The silver eagle on a maroon field is to take its place beside the French tricolor, the Stars and Stripes, the Union Jack and the battle flags of the other allies and beneath its folds will fight Polish volunteers from all parts of the world including thousands from the United States.

An autonomous Polish army is already in course of organization on French soil and its ranks have been opened to Polish citizens who have wandered abroad in search of freedom from the oppression to which the Polish nation has been subjected so long.

This force is to be entirely independent of any other army, all its officers and men being of Polish birth or descent. The nucleus of the new army is composed of Poles who have served in the French army since the beginning of hostilities. In Paris alone 500 enlisted at the first call, Toutouise furnished another 450; Abbeyville, 300; Douai, 300, and Marseilles 100 besides many who joined in other cities.

All grades of society are represented among these Polish volunteers. In the ranks nobles have fought side by side with artisans, men from the liberal professions with farm laborers, and boys not yet 16, shoulder to shoulder with gray-haired veterans 60 years old.

Some of them have served in special Polish companies of the Foreign Legion; others were dispersed among their French comrades in line regiments. Everywhere they have gained by their bravery throughout the three years fighting the appreciation of their chiefs. The Polish volunteers always have been willing to undertake the most onerous duties and most perilous tasks. Losses in their ranks appeared to have such a favorable effect on recruiting that it was decided recently to give the Poles an organization of their own and all soldiers of Polish nationality serving in France were assembled in one camp in preparation for the formation of regular army units of all arms.

Much encouragement was given to the movement by reports from America that Poles residing there had expressed their willingness to join the ranks of the new army and it is hoped to obtain many recruits from that source.

CLASS SOUGHT FOR SCHOOL FOR RELIEF OF SOLDIERS' FAMILIES

Appeal for Students for Red Cross Home Service Institute Made by Director.

An appeal for students for the Red Cross Home Service Institute, a school for instruction in relief work among families of soldiers who have gone to the front, was made yesterday by Alfred Fairbank, Division Director, Civilian Relief of the American Red Cross, to the Red Cross chapters of Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma. The institute will be limited to 25 students.

According to Dr. George B. Mangold, who will be the instructor of the school, each student will be required to spend 25 hours a week in actual relief work for six weeks. This work will be done in connection with the established social agencies of the city.

Many families of soldiers are destitute, and with the increasing number of such families comes the necessity that many persons receive intelligent instruction in methods of relief work. The course will start Wednesday.

"ROPING" IN OKLAHOMA TO END

Contest as a Sport Barred by Gov. Williams.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., Oct. 13.—Roping contests and old-time buffalo hunts as sport or exhibitions are to be prohibited in Oklahoma, where only a few years ago the boundless plains formed the playground of the yelling cowboy, the broncho and the bison. Gov. Williams, following similar action in preventing a buffalo hunt in Woodward County, has ordered the Prosecuting Attorney of Osage County to prohibit a proposed roping contest on the strength of an opinion by Attorney-General Freeling.

Quoting from Mr. Freeling's opinion, the Governor wrote:

"The day of the yelling cowboy and the boundless plain is gone. The lariat is almost a curiosity to the children of this day. Conditions are such that these things are no longer necessary. The plains are fenced up, the cattle are kept at home and domesticated; the broncho has been bred into a decent horse; the six-shooter has gone with the jangling bells and savage yells of the cowboy, to be heard no more. Even as sport, much less as a necessity, the roper has departed from our civilization."

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair.

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients for 50 cents a large bottle, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.—ADV.

DID YOU KNOW that the "Birth of a Nation" Photo Play has earned 1000% already and still earning big? It is said "Neptune's Daughter" earned 1200% and "Traffic in Souls" over 2000%. "Quo Vadis," "Spoilers," "Crisis," "Civilization" and others have made their owners independently wealthy.

The only "Photo Play" that the Public was permitted to invest in was the "Million Dollar Mystery," which returned 700% inside of a few months. All other productions were financed by the owners, who made so much money that they kept it to themselves.

NOW—Here comes another Master production, the largest and most spectacular of them all. The new, 12-reel Million-Dollar sensational creation, called the "Birth of a Race," which experts who know say will beat all records as a big, quick money maker.

The Birth of a Race

is being made by an immense producing organization which has Never Produced a Failure, and the sale of the stock is in the hands of a stock and bond brokerage house which, in its 17 years of business life, has Never Lost a Dollar for a Client.

If the "Birth of a Race" returns as much as "Birth of a Nation," every $100 you invest will return $1000. If as much as "Traffic in Souls," every $100 will give you $2000, every $1000, $20,000. Write for full details.

CAPT. D. H. KANE NEAR DEATH

BOSTON, Oct. 13.—Surgeons at the city hospital said today there was little possibility of the recovery of Capt. Daniel H. Kane of the Quartermaster's Depot in the Department of the Northeast, who shot himself yesterday. Capt. Kane is a son of the late Admiral Theodore Kane and a nephew of the late Admiral Stephen L Luce. His son, John V. H. Kane, is a naval ensign now on sea duty, and his brother, Col. T. Porter Kane, of the Marine Corps, is in Washington.

Col. George McK. Williamson, in charge of the depot, said Capt. Kane had become worn out from overwork and that a week's leave of absence from which he returned last Monday apparently had failed to relieve his nervous condition.

NO ACID STOMACH, NO SOURNESS, GAS, OR ANY INDIGESTION

In five minutes your sick, sour upset stomach will feel fine.

"Pape's Diapepsin" neutralizes acids in stomach and starts digestion.

Time it! Pape's Diapepsin will sweeten a sour, gassy or out-of-order stomach within five minutes

If your meals don't fit comfortably, or what you eat lies like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heart-burn, that is usually a sign of acidity of the stomach.

Get from your pharmacist a fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a dose just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching or undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heart-burn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, nausea, debilitating headaches or dizziness. This will all go, and, besides, there will be no sour food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odors.

Pape's Diapepsin helps to neutralize the excessive acid in the stomach which is causing the food fermentation and preventing proper digestion.

Relief in five minutes is waiting for you at any drug store.

These large fifty-cent cases contain enough "Pape's Diapepsin" to usually keep the entire family free from stomach acidity and its symptoms of indigestion, dyspepsia, sourness, gases, heartburn and headache, for many months. It belongs in your home.—ADV.

CAPITOL BOARD REMITS $100,000 IN PENALTIES

State Did oNt Suffer by Delay in Completing Building, Commission Holds.

CONTRACTORS ABSOLVED

Stone Controversy, Weather Conditions and Strikes Prevented Construction.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON, CITY, Oct. 13.—The State Capitol Commission, which has had complete charge of the construction of the new State Capitol, today made public the fact that it had remitted to the John Gill & Son's Co., the Capitol contractors, penalties of nearly $100,000 for their failure to complete the building by July 1, 1916, the contract time.

The commission, in a resolution, holds that the State has not suffered by the delay and that because of the failure of the Legislature to authorize the purchase of furniture for the building, it could not have been used before the present time. The controversy two years ago over the kind of stone to be used, weather conditions and strikes are also given as reasons why the contractors should not be held to account for the delay.

Under the contract the building was to have been completed by July 1, 1916, at a cost of $2,387,000, and for every day after July 1, 1916, that the building was uncompleted the contractor should be penalized $250.

In the resolution absolving the contractors, the commission said: "Since the acceptances of the proposal of John Gill & Son's Co. to erect the building at $2,387,000 there have been added over $500,000 in extras having been ordered a year after the building was begun, and some since July 1, 1916, thereby entailing this large addition to his contract without having advised him thereof when his proposal was submitted.

Stone Controversy Caused Delay.

"Some six or eight months' delay was occasioned over a controversy touching the quality of stone to be used in the building, part of which delay was on account of the specifications concerning the future seams in Carthage stone being so drastic as to render them impossible of fulfillment, for which reason, as well as for other reasons, it became necessary to modify and supplement the contract of June 30, 1914, nearly eight months after the contract had been let.

"Several months' delay has been caused on account of weather and strikes and other causes over which the contractor had no control.

"By a decision of the Supreme Court of Missouri, rendered in 1915, it was declared that the State Capitol Commission Board was not authorized to purchase the furniture for the capitol building, for which reason authority for purchase was delayed until given by act of the Legislature April 1, 1917, thereby making it impossible even up to that date to let the contracts for said furniture.

"By the unpreparedness of the State to provide furniture for said building to this date, and the impossibility to satisfactorily occupy it without said furniture, the State has suffered no loss by the contractor's failure to finish the building that it would not have suffered had it been completed July 1, 1916.

Work Done Efficiently.

"The contractor, after he was enabled to go ahead with his work, performed it in an excellent and efficient manner, and in less time than any capitol building of equal size has been erected in any state, the period from the laying of the corner stone to the completion of the structure being but two years and one month.

"The building has been erected within the money appropriated by the people and notwithstanding the great rise in prices and consequent loss of money to the contractor and nearly all the subcontractors, at a lower price by fully one million dollars than has been the cost of any capitol building of equal size, and while it has cost less than $3,500,000 it could not be built today for $5,000,000.

"We ourselves are now satisfied that the limit originally designated for the completion of the building fixed too limited a period for the execution of the work of such magnitude and value even in the minimum scheme, as is evident in that no other state capitol building of such size and quality has been constructed within even twice such a length of time. The state capitol of Minnesota was 14 years in building, the capitol of New York 33 years, the capitol of Wisconsin over 12 years, the capitol of Illinois 25 years. The Missouri building is equal if not superior in architecture to any of them, and is of such monumental character as to have required the greatest care, skill and technical treatment in construction."

The building virtually is complete and tomorrow the State departments will move into it. It is not yet furnished, though most of the floor coverings and draperies are in place. Furniture from the temporary capitol will be used until the furniture contracted for is delivered.

Many organs take part in assimilation of food, and a number are active in eliminating those portions of the food which are not taken into the blood for the upbuilding of the body. Of the eliminative organs, the liver and the kidneys are of major importance, and are most likely to be overworked and become diseased. When such is the case, various troubles of a digestive and eliminative character occur, and such troubles are so frequent and so common that it is absolutely necessary to find some relief. Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy was compounded over 40 years ago to help equalize the work of both kidneys and liver. How successful it has been is evidenced by its widespread sale and its value is attested by an immense number of appreciative users who through these many years have put it to the severest tests with the most satisfactory results.

3 MORE WHITE MEN GO TO TRIAL IN RIOT CASES TOMORROW

Shoemaker, Driver and Chauffeur Charged With Part in Killing Two Negroes.

Three white men will be placed on trial in the Belleville Circuit Court tomorrow, charged with the murder of two negroes and one white man in the East St. Louis race riot of July 2.

The defendants are Harry Robinson, a shoemaker; John Dow, an ice wagon driver, and Charles Hanna, a chauffeur. Testimony will be offered to show that they took a leading part in the lawlessness at Illinois and Collinsville avenues, where a mob, late in the evening, occurred.

This corner is several blocks north of Broadway and Fourth street, where a mob, late in the evening, aftter shooting and beating several negroes to death, was stopped by militiamen in the act of dragging a negro my a rope tied to his neck. This negro, Scott Clark, afterward died, and Herbert Wood and Leo Keane, two of those who held the rope, were convicted Friday of murder and sentenced to prison terms of 14 years each.

At Collinsville and Illinois avenues two St. Louis negroes, one of them only 17 years old, were dragged from a street car and shot and beaten to death. The negroes, Edward Cook and his stepson, Luirzza Beard, were on their way to St. Louis, on a through car from Alton, and had never been in East St. Louis before. One of the bullets fired at negroes at that time killed William Keyser, a white hardware merchant.

Don't hurt a bit! Cincinnati man discovers drug that works miracles—No humbug!

Your high heels have put corns on your toes and calluses on your feet, but why care now?

This tiny bottle holds an almost magic fluid. A genius in Cincinnati discovered this ether compound and named it freezone. Small bottles of freezone like here shown can be had at any drug store for a few cents. Don't limp or twist your face, but get a bottle of freezone and apply a few drops on your tender, aching corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears and shortly you will find the corn or callus so shriveled and loose that you can lift it off with the fingers.

Just think! You get rid of a hard corn, soft corn or a corn between the toes, as well as hardened calluses without suffering one particle. Freezone is magic!—ADV.

AMMONIA PIPE BURSTS; 13 HURT

Packing Plant Employes Injured So Seriously Some May Die.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 13.—Thirteen employes of the Wilson & Co. packing plant, Kansas City, Kan., were injured, some so seriously that death may result, when a six-inch pipe conveying ammonia to the refrigerating room exploded today.

Every window pane in the building was broken and the shock was felt for several blocks in the vicinity of the plant. The top floor of the building caught fire, but the flames were soon extinguished.

FRETFUL BABIES NEED A LAXATIVE

When your baby is cross and fretful the chances are it is constipated and that a mild laxative is all that is necessary to make it comfortable and happy. Inactive bowels are the cause of as much discomfort to children as to older people, and unless the condition is promptly relieved is very apt to develop serious illness.

For children there is nothing that will act more easily than the combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin that is sold in drug stores under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It does not gripe and is free from opiate or narcotic drugs, is pleasant to the taste, and positively effective; children like it and take it readily.

If you have never tried this simple, inexpensive remedy, get a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin from your druggist and have it in the house to use the next time any of the children seem out of sorts. A trial bottle can be obtained, free of charge, by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 456 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois.

AMERICANS ABROAD NOW ARE TRAINING ON THEIR OWN HOOK

French Instructors Have Marched Away and No More Poilus Will Replace Them.

By THOMAS MARVIN JOHNSON,
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1917.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Oct. 13.—Today marks an epoch in the evolution of the American army in France. For the first time since its arrival, the first contingent is going it alone. The division of French infantry which took up the training of the Americans where the chasseurs left off have marched away and no more French troops will replace them. Beginning today the further training of this contingent will be conducted by its own officers, Americans teaching Americans.

Under this supervision the American troops will complete a carefully mapped out plan of training according to the principles laid down by Gen. Pershing's staff after much study, embodying the distinctly American system. French infantrymen have given invaluable instruction in various phases of trench warfare and artillery work. Their excellent staff has toiled unceasingly to prepare various problems of trench warfare for battalions and regiments of Americans, making their criticisms on the field and adding invaluable suggestions. American officers are loud in their praise of their teachers.

The Americans are sorry to see their friends go. The villages where the Americans are billeted present today a different sight from any since their arrival; there is scarcely a French soldier to be seen in the streets. Save for the French signs in the shops they are practically American villages now, the only other inhabitants being old men, women and children.

The officers who are undertaking the responsibility of training on their own hook have not only gained experience from French instruction in the field but from their own school which now has been transformed from a few tents and a building to rows of wooden barracks used for sleeping or instruction in all the various intricacies of modern warfare.

Besides the tents there are long vistas of target ranges and practice trenches for there has been a constant influx of officers arriving from all parts of France and also many men fresh from the United States.

Experiments are being conducted by the board of officers of this school for the proposed American trench helmet, which in appearance is a combination of the French, British and German helmets with a special visor of steel network intended to prevent the wearer from being blinded by fragments of shell, rock or dirt. The school also has received its first lot of famous Lewis guns, the automatic rifles used by the British with such deadly effect long before the Americans adopted it, though it was an American invention. The officers are enthusiastic over the work of this gun.

GERMANY, IN REPLY TO SWEDEN, DEPLORED LUXBURG DISPATCHES

Gives Assurances That Incidents to Disturb Friendly Relations Will Not Occur Again.

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 13.—The Swedish Foreign Office has received the German reply to its inquiry regarding the action of Count Karl von Luxburg while he was German Minister to Argentina, in sending messages through the Swedish legation regarding the "sinking without trace" of Argentinian vessels. Germany expressed regrets last month and promised a fuller statement later. The answer now forwarded confirms the arrival in Berlin of the Luxburg cablegrams as published, although one of them was mutilated at an essential point.

The German Government states it is unable to make a declaration regarding the authenticity of the dispatches as no confirmatory correspondence has taken place with Von Luxburg. The telegrams are said to have had no effect on the submarine war. The Government deplores the fact that they and that Count von L
ployed the facilities exte
Swedish authorities in a which might have been as abuse of them.

Assurance is given that calculated to disturb the frie lutions between Germany and S den will not occur again.

GIRLS! BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR WITH "DANDERINE"

Get a 25 Cent Bottle! Freshen Your Scalp! Stop Falling Hair! Remove Dandruff! Grow Lots of Wavy, Glossy, Beautiful Hair—You Can!

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die, then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and 10 minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?—ADV.

WHITE SOX BEAT GIANTS, 8 TO 5, BY STARTLING RALLY

American League Champions Regain Lead in World Series by Winning Fifth Game, Overtaking New York by Scoring Seven Runs in Three Innings.

27,000 PERSONS SEE THE STRUGGLE

Twenty-Five Players Take Part in Spectacular Contest, the Winners Using Four Pitchers Against Two Who Work for Losers.

CHICAGO, Oct. 13.—In a game that thrilled and enthralled some 27,000 spectators this afternoon, the Chicago Americans scrambled into the world's series lead again by defeating the New York Nationals 8 to 5 and swinging to the fore three games to two. It was a contest that ran the gamut of baseball from sensational and brilliant to mediocre, but never during the two hours and 37 minutes of battle did it lose its intense hold on the spectators, and at its conclusion the fans were almost as exhausted as the players. For more than two hours, adherents of the Sox roared and cheered without intermission while the players, once the Chicago team took the lead, became frantic with joy and performed antics in front of their dugout that would have caused a college cheer leader to despair.

For the first time during the present struggle for championship honors of the baseball year, the game developed both concerted and sustained rooting, and so keen was the rivalry between the two combinations that it appeared as though the participants would allow their feelings to get the better of their judgment.

Just a Game of Baseball.

While the enthusiasm and thrills enveloped the contest with the glamour that had been entirely missing in the preceding games, the fifth meeting of the White Sox and the Giants will not go down in world series history as a diamond battle of either outstanding skill or baseball perfection. It abounded with errors of both omission and commission and was marred by misplays. All this was forgotten, however, when the American League commission finally wrested the lead from its rival and gained a position of advantage nearly as commanding as the two straight victories at the opening of the series.

The two clubs tonight again started to the Polo Grounds at New York, where the sixth game will be played Monday and the seventh, if necessary, Tuesday, the Giants having won the toss and the privilege of naming the place of the deciding contest, should each team win three games. While the players of both teams have ceased to participate in the financial proceeds of the contest, the rivalry is none the less keen, for there is more than a thousand dollars between the individual shares that will fall to the winning and the losing combinations. The club owners and the National Commission profited handsomely, however, as the result of today's receipts for the official attendance was 27,323 and the gate receipts $69,403. Of this sum the two clubs received $31,231.35 each and the National Commission $6940.36.

Twenty-five Players Participate.

In many respects today's game developed features which have been foreign to previous diamond battles of the present series. Twenty-five players appeared in the lineup of the American and the National league pennant winners. After having gone 24 innings without scoring a run against the Giants, the Sox turned and piled up eight tallies while the losers collected five, making a total of 13, more than half as many as the entire scoring of the two teams in the first four clashes.

In making these 13 runs, the batters piled up an aggregate of 26 hits and nine fielding errors. Seventy-seven batters faced seven pitchers and while there were unlimited thrills and tense situations, there was no one player who could claim the spotlight in this melange of hits, errors, fielding flashes and sprints from base to base.

A perfect autumn day greeted the players as they stepped on the diamond for the opening of the game. It was clear and just a trifle cold, but the fans did not appear to notice this. Here and there were vacant spaces in both stands and bleachers, and there were no crowds on the buildings overlooking Comiskey Park, but the noise of the rooting fans for the first time in the series

TIRPITZ SAYS ENGLAND IS IN COMPARATIVELY GOOD POSITION

Predicts, However, That U-Boat Warfare Will Alter Situation in a Few Months.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 13.—Admiral von Tirpitz, former Minister of the German Imperial Navy, interviewed by the Brunswick Landes Zeitung, is quoted as saying:

"We can continue confidently to expect a final triumph over England as long as we continue to sink vessels faster than she constructs them. A submarine war success cannot be expected immediately, however, but if we pursue our aim firmly we shall find after some months that our position for negotiations with England will be quite different.

"England desires negotiations now while her position is comparatively favorable. The decisive factors are the shipping losses suffered by the entente, and by neutrals who expose themselves to our U-boat war.

"No definite time can be fixed for our success. Economically and as regards raw materials, our position today is stronger than that of France or Italy. How far England will be able to make her supplies last cannot be predicted.

"But the decisive factor is that while we supply four-fifths of our economic needs from our own productions, England has to fetch four-fifths of hers from overseas.

"We are now at the fateful hour of our existence. Germany cannot maintain her position as a world Power against England unless her position is founded on might."

DEWEY'S WIDOW TOUCHED BY ST. LOUIS TRIBUTE TO ADMIRAL

Acknowledgment Made in Letter to Principal of School Named in His Honor.

The text of a letter written by Admiral Dewey's widow, expressing appreciation that the Board of Education had named a new school after the famous sea-fighter, was made public yesterday. It was written from her home in Washington, D. C., to Miss Mary A. Thompson, principal of the school, and was as follows:

"I am greatly touched by the Board of Education having named a public school 'The George Dewey School.' Perhaps no tribute was ever more justly made, because school children never had a more sympathetic admirer and friend than George Dewey, the Admiral of the Navy.

"The children all over Washington knew him, and with their keen glances caught sight of him, walking, driving or motoring, at once, and saluted, which he returned scrupulously always.

"Tell them he always deferred to authority; that he always spoke the truth; that he was gentle to everyone; that he never let himself be afraid—he knew what danger was, but it never stopped him; and that in his home he was without a fault, and as lovable as a child. Let them be like him.

"I am, dear Miss Thompson, very truly,

"Mildred McLean Dewey,
"(Mrs. George Dewey.)"

The cornerstone of the new school, at Central avenue and Clayton road, was laid last week with appropriate ceremonies. The school children in that neighborhood are now housed in eleven portable buildings.

ADMIRAL MAYO CONFERS WITH SECRETARY DANIELS

Statement to Be Made in Few Days Regarding Conditions in American and Allied Navies.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—Admiral Mayo, Commander in Chief of the Atlantic Fleet, paid his respects to Secretary of the Navy Daniels this afternoon and made a brief report concerning his conferences in Europe with British and French authorities.

He and Admiral Benson, Chief of Naval Operations, held a detailed conference with Secretary Daniels at his home tonight. The Secretary within a few days will issue a statement regarding the conditions as Admiral Mayo found them in the American, British and French navies in the war zone.

That important naval developments are looked for is accepted here as a certainty. It is well known that for some time a sentiment has been developing among American naval officers in favor of a more vigorous campaign to wipe out German submarines and their bases.

9000 BUSHELS OF WHEAT IS FOUND STORED IN ST. LOUIS

Local Representative of Food Administration Orders the Grain Released.

FARMER WAS AMAZED

Finally Consented to Sale by Government, Though Consent Was Not Necessary.

Nine thousand bushels of wheat, valued at approximately $19,500 under the Government's price, was in a St. Louis grain elevator while the millers were seeking more grain to steady the price of flour. Its owner reposed on his farm, in St. Louis County, and entertained visions of fancy prices when the speculators took hold at the end of the crop, as in former years, but he was rudely awakened by the Food Administration Grain Corporation, of which Edward M. Flesh is in charge in the St. Louis district, comprising 12 Middle West states.

In relating the details of the incident, disclosing the effectiveness of the Hoover administration's operations, Flesh told a Post-Dispatch reporter last night that he had peremptorily ordered the farmer's wheat released Oct. 1, after it had been in storage only 30 days.

"Farmer Was Amazed."

"The farmer, amazed at this unusual proceeding," related Flesh, "demanded to know why such action was being taken, and he was promptly informed that the country was at war and that the food administration law required that wheat should be held in storage no longer than 30 days and that the Government proposed to sell it after that time for the farmer at prices fixed by the food administration.

"But he was unmoved by this; he announced he would haul the wheat back to his farm, and hold it there until the demand became so great that prices would advance, thus getting around the law.

"I pointed out that he could not lawfully do this, as the wheat had been in an elevator licensed by the Government and could be taken by the Government and sold. Furthermore, I explained, the grain exchanges were no longer speculating in wheat and one price, fixed by the Government, would prevail throughout the winter—$2.18 a bushel for No. 1 red winter wheat, and $2.15 for No. 2.

Finally Consented.

"The farmer then reluctantly gave his consent to the sale of his wheat. Consent, however, was not needed, but it was sought that he would feel that no injustice was being done him by the Government, and the wheat was sold at the Food Administration price. It then dawned on him that the $125 carrying charges which he had paid the elevator for one month's storage would have been saved had he sold the wheat Sept. 1."

Flesh added that many farmers were under the erroneous impression that higher prices would prevail if they hoarded their wheat. He pointed out that those who did so gained nothing and incurred the loss of carrying charges.

Since the Food Administration assumed control of wheat, Sept. 1, Flesh has obtained in St. Louis 2,000,000 bushels of wheat which he has released to millers at $2.15 and $2.18 a bushel.

QUESTION OF OVERSEAS VOTING

Army Officials Inclined to Frown on Difficult Problem.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—The War Department, at the request of State officials, is considering the practicability of extending to the troops in France the same privileges as to voting or otherwise continuing their participation in the political life of the country that are to be granted to soldiers training in the United States. The question presents many difficulties.

It has been held that the troops in France are on American soil, within the purpose of the law. The army officials feel that it would be carrying the effort to protect civilian rights to an extreme to attempt to poll a vote of an enemy in the trenches.

GERMANS ACTIVE IN ARGENTINE

Propaganda Expected to Result in Grave Disorders.

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 13.—There has been a noteworthy recrudescence of German activity in the form om pro-neutrality propaganda, coupled with a press campaign with the object of creating Anglo-Argentine, Brazil-Argentine, Rruguay-Argentine discord.

The combination, coinciding as it does with the strike movement, forcibly suggests a North American analogy and revives the theory of Von Papen's presence here. It is stated that Luxburg's other telegrams, so far not published, admit a design to bring Argentine and South Brazil under German influence. Grave disorders are anticipated next week and alarming rumors are current, especially regarding cabinet resignations.

GERMAN TROOPS LAND ON ISLANDS IN GULF OF RIGA

Russian Shore Batteries Silenced by Teuton Dreadnoughts, Petrograd Announces.

MAINLAND IS NEAR

Movement Possibly Is Forerunner of German Dash to Capital.

Germany's most striking military move since the attack which resulted in the capture of Riga started Friday on this same Russian front, when German troops landed on Oesel and Dago Islands, at the mouth of the Gulf of Riga.

Heavy units of the main German battle fleet brought up to assist in this operation, some of the dreadnaughts appearing off the coast and covering the landing with their guns silencing the Russian shore batteries. Russian forces hampered the process, but considerable numbers of the Germans appear to have obtained a footing on the northwestern coast of Oesel Island and on the southern shores of Dago Island. On Oesel Island, where the Russians have extensive aviation bases and other military establishments, the garrison engaged the invaders.

Petrograd alludes to the German movement as a stubborn effort to clear the entrance of the Gulf of Riga, near the Courland mainland. Whether it is much more than this, possibly the forerunner of an ambitious push for Petrograd along the railway line up the Gulf of Finland coast, can hardly be determined so far.

Russian Winter Imminent.

The imminence of the early Russian winter season lends color to the assumption that even if the German high command is taking these steps as a preliminary to a march on Petrograd, it will hardly essay the campaign this year. It is pointed out, however, that the demoralized state of the Russian armies might make the operation a comparatively short and easy one now in comparison with the task a German army headed for Petrograd would have to face next spring if the Russian governmental plans for a regeneration of the army are carried through.

The more conservative view seems to be that the German effort is aimed at gaining complete control of the Gulf of Riga, so as to realize to the full the advantage gained last month by the capture of the city of Riga. This has given them first all of Courland, then a slice of Livonia, and now has planted them in an advantageous position off the coast of Esthonia, where they will constitute a constant threat to the right flank of the whole Russian front, now somewhat loosely anchored on the shores of the Gulf of Riga, some distance to the southwest.

Flanders a Sea of Mud.

The heavy rain in Flanders has turned the plains into such a sea of mud that neither of the hostile armies seems able to move. Whether the weather and the condition of the ground were the sole reasons which impelled the Germans to refrain from meeting the British advance with speedy counter attacks, however, is considered doubtful in view of the many corroborative reports of the lowered state of the German army morale. Field Marshal Haig, in any event, was left on the night of his advance in undisputed possession of the valuable ground won.

On the French front the Germans contented themselves with bombardments in the Verdun region, where there has been heavy infantry fighting recently, turning their main attention to the Aisne front and launching a series of attacks along the eastern end of the Chemin-des-Dames, between Hurtebise and Chevreaux. The effort was a violent one, but was checked by the French. The Crown Prince's troops got into the French lines at only one point and were speedily ejected.

Russian Official.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 13. — The Germans landed detachments yesterday on the coast of the Gulf of Tagalah, on the north of Oesel Island and near the village of Serro, on the southern part of Dago Island, in the Gulf of Riga, the War Office announces. The Russian coast batteries were silenced by German dreadnoughts.

The text reads:

"In the Baltic, in the region of the Gulf of Riga, the enemy made several air raids. On Wednesday nine enemy aircraft dropped 23 bombs in the region of Cerel. One transport steamer was slightly damaged. Our airmen by a daring attack dispersed the enemy and drove two of them in to the sea.

"The enemy is working stubbornly to clear the entranee to the Gulf of Riga, near the Courtland coast. Yesterday, under cover of naval forces several times superior to our defending detachments, the enemy landed detachments on the island of Oesel. Another detachment was landed near the village of Serro on the Southern part of the Island of Dago. Coast batteries were silenced by the fire of

AUGUST A. BUSCH PUTS $1,000,000 IN LIBERTY BONDS

He Now Has $2,000,000 Worth, and Is Largest Individual Holder in District.

TWO FOR $150,000

Other Large Subscriptions to Loan Announced—Total for Week $10,000,000.

An individual subscription for $1,000,000 of the second issue of Liberty Loan bonds, the largest so far received here, was made yesterday by August A. Busch, brewer, through the St. Louis Union Trust Co.

This subscription, combined with his purchase last June of a million dollars of Liberty bonds, makes Busch, with $2,000,000, the largest individual holder of the bonds in the Eighth Federal Reserve District.

Following the announcement of his subscription, Busch said that he was trying to do his part in supporting the best interests of the city, state and nation. He considers it the best investment he ever made, he said.

Two other individual subscriptions, each for $150,000, were made yesterday by Benjamin Gratz of 5551 Lindell boulevard, a capitalist, and by Clarence H. Howard, president of the Commonwealth Steel Co. and former president of the Chamber of Commerce. An additional purchase of $117,000 of bonds was made Friday by the Commonwealth Steel Co.

Other large subscribers to the Liberty Loan and the amounts of their purchasers as announced yesterday are I. H. Cohn of the National Steel Co., $100,000; Dr. T. M. Sayman, $25,000; F. A. Goodrich, lumberman, $50,000; Southern Coal and Coke Co., $25,000, and the United Railways Savings and Loan Association, $40,000.

An anonymous subscriber bought $1000 worth of the bonds through the St. Louis Union Bank, paying for them with $10 gold pieces. The money, bankers pointed out, evidently represented the savings of a considerable time, as banks have not been paying out gold recently.

Despite the size and number of bond purchases made yesterday, the second week of the campaign failed to end satisfactorily, in the opinion of bankers and business men, members of the local Liberty Bond Organization.

The total sales for the week are estimated at $10,000,000, bringing the total for the two weeks since the campaign began to $20,000,000. This represents less than one-third of the maximum quota for St. Louis—$68,000,000. Reports from various points in the Eighth Federal Reserve District, including Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Arkansas, Tennessee and Missouri, indicated the bond sales did not exceed one-third of the District's maximum quota—$200,000,000.

Disappointed at Response.

"We are frankly disappointed at the response made during the two weeks just ended," said Tom W. Bennett, active leader in the local campaign, "but we look forward to increased sales this week and next week, when the campaign closes. The public is just becoming awakened to the serious necessity of buying these bonds and to the penalty that the failure of the loan would bring."

A mass meeting will be held Wednesday night at the Missouri Athletic Association in the interest of the Liberty loan. Dr. John Wesley Hill, chancellor of Lincoln Memorial Institute of New York, and Augustus Thomas, playwright, will speak. Congressman Jacob S. Fassett of New York and W. E. Lancaster of Quincy, Ill., will speak in various Missouri towns on behalf of the bonds during the coming week.

St. Louis women, members of the Women's Liberty Loan Organization, who have been active in the downtown department stores, are arranging for the closing two weeks of the campaign. School teachers throughout the city will be enlisted, and in this way the women expect to reach hundreds of homes otherwise unapproachable.

K. C. STOCKYARDS SET A RECORD

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 13.—The Kansas City stockyards established a world's record for cattle receipts in the week which has just ended, according to an announcement made by officials. The receipts for the week totalled 100,504 head of cattle and 10,690 calves.

The world's previous record was 95,524 head, made at the Chicago stockyards in 1891. The best previous record for the Kansas City is 95,298 head.

AUSTRIAN NAVY LOSING SPIRIT

LONDON, Oct. 13.—The Daily News' Rome correspondent on Thursday said: "From sources likely to be well informed, I learn there is abundant evidence of growing discontent and loss of fighting spirit in the Austrian navy.

"In some cases it is said commanders cannot rely on execution of their orders, though the sailors have not yet dared to imitate their German fellows and break into open mutiny. The principal cause of discontent is said to be insufficient feeding of the men."

POST-DISPATCH NEWSBOY KILLED IN FRANCE

ANDREW M'ALLISTER.

FORMER ST. LOUIS NEWSBOY KILLED IN ACTION IN FLANDERS

Andrew McAllister Sold the Post-Dispatch at Broadway and Chouteau Avenue.

Andrew McAllister, formerly a Post-Dispatch newsboy at Broadway and Chouteau avenue, was killed in action Feb. 25 on the Flanders front, according to a letter received by Joseph O. Mestres, 1019 South Thirteenth street, from a sister-in-law of McAllister. He was a Sergeant in the Ninth Battalion of the Royal Irish Rifles and was 23 years old.

McAllister was born in Ireland and came to the United States several years ago. For two years he sold the Post-Dispatch, and four years ago returned to Ireland. He enlisted at the first call for volunteers, and had been in active service since the first year of the war.

PERSHING REPEATS PLEA FOR RIFLE TRAINING OVER HERE

Says It Is Difficult to Obtain Sites for Target Shooting in France.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—Gen. Pershing again has strongly urged that all members of infantry units to be sent across the Atlantic be trained in markmanship before they sail.

The Anglo-French armies appreciate now, a cablegram from him says, their deficiency in small arms training. He adds that it is difficult to obtain sites for target ranges in France when the crops are not off the ground.

Gen. Pershing lays great emphasis upon his insistence that the grounding of every American soldier in the "School of the Soldier" should be more thorough. Among the points he makes are:

"Officers and men should observe the most military manner, that of rigid position, when rendering salutes and when at attention.

Although a prompt military salute may not be well understood by Americans, even men in the service, its real object is to reveal the true sodlier by an aggressive attitude of mind and body.

The proper kind of pride as well as the superior fighting spirit, will be greatly augmented by the closet adherence to this principle, and besides it is taken to indicate alertness, readiness and loyalty."

DOCTOR RECOGNIZES DYING BOY, TAKEN TO HIS OFFICE, AS NEPHEW

Lad Dies After Being Struck by Automobile on Thurman Boulevard.

A boy, dying from injuries caused by an automobile, who was taken yesterday afternoon to the office of Dr. George O. Wilhite, 3903A De Tonty street, was recognized by the physician as his nephew, Elwood Wilhite, 6 years old, son of Addison N. Wilhite, 4049 McRee avenue.

The child died in the physician's office. He was injured on Thurman boulevard near McRee avenue by an automobile driven by Arthur E. Kopp of 4053 De Tonty street.

Kopp, who picked him up and drove to Dr. Wilhite's office, said the boy ran out of a grocery store into the path of the machine so suddenly that he was unable to stop. Kopp was arrested.

CAN'T TALK TO SALOON MEN

Bishop Quayle Forced to Decline Invitation to Address Them.

Bishop Quayle of the Methodist Episcopal Church, who was invited to address a meeting of the Liquor Dealers' Benevolent Association this afternoon, after he had said in a recent sermon that he had never been invited to speak at a meeting of saloon keepers, although he had a prayer ready for such an occasion, declined the first invitation extended him.

In a letter to John Pensa, president of the Liquor Dealers' Association, the Bishop explained that dedication sermons which he is scheduled to preach today in two Illinois towns necessitated his declining the invitation. He added that he would be glad to avail himself of an opportunity to talk to the saloon men at a later date.

MORGENTHAU REVEALS HOW THE KAISER FIXED DATE FOR WAR TO BEGIN

American Ambassador to Turkey Tells of Decision Reached Long Before Hostilities Were Declared.

FINANCIERS WERE GIVEN TIME TO ARRANGE LOANS

Even in May of 1914 the Austrian Emperor Said Conflict Was Inevitable---Dream of World Domination Obsessed Prussian Ruler Ever Since He Ascended Throne.

BY HENRY MORGENTHAU
Former American Ambassador to Turkey.

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.

This war is no accident. Neither did it come about through the temporary break down of European diplomacy. It was carefully planned and deliberately executed in cold blood. The spirit and motive behind it were the spirit and motives that brought about the war between Prussia and Denmark, the war between Prussia and Austria and the war between Prussia and France. It was undertaken in the furtherance of a definite program of Prussian imperialism.

Since my return from France, where I visited the front and had many frank conferences with French statesmen and Generals, and with British commanders as well, it has been more and more impressed on me that every American who has had opportunities to peep behind the scenes and see for himself how this terrible tragedy was staged, owes it to his fellow countrymen to give them all the information in his possession which will enable them to visualize the menace that has been hanging over the great republic and still hangs over it because of this Prussian mania for world power. The premeditation is now proved, and any American who withholds evidence becomes an accessory after the fact to Germany's crime.

Whenever the question of peace is raised, the Kaiser solemnly asserted that he did not will this war, but that with the help of the good German God, he will see it through to the end. He did will this war, and he brought it about when it suited his purpose, and his preparations. The Servian incident was more than an excuse. It was an opportunity.

Saw Austrian Emperor.

On Aug. 18, 1914, as American Ambassador at Constantinople, I called on the Marquis of Pallavicini, the Austro-Hungarian Ambassador, to congratulate him on the Emperor's eighty-fourth birthday. After exchanging the usual diplomatic compliments suitable to such an occasion, he spoke of the condition of the Emperor's health and his great physical and mental activity, in spite of the strain to which he was subjected. The conversation then turned to the war, which was in its third week, and his excellency told me that when he visited the Emperor in May his imperial majesty had said that war was inevitable because of conditions in the Balkans.

The Austrian Crown Prince was murdered at Sarajevo on June 28, yet weeks before that the Austrian Emperor had confided to his Ambassador to Turkey that war was inevitable.

A still more remarkable confirmation came to me from Baron Wangenheim, the German Ambassador at Constantinople. In an outburst of enthusiasm after the arrival of the Goebel and the Bremau in the Dardanelles, having directed their movements by wireless while they were endeavoring to escape from the British fleet, the German Ambassador informed me that a conference had been held in Berlin in the early part of July, at which the date of the war was fixed.

This conference was presided over by the Kaiser. The Baron Wangenheim was present to report on conditions in Turkey. Moltke, the Chief of Staff, was there and so was Grand Admiral von Tirpitz. With them were the leaders of German finance, the directors of the railroads and the captains of industry whose aid was essential to the Kaiser in putting his vast military machine into operation. Each was asked if he was ready for war. All replied in the affirmative except the financiers, who insisted that they must have two weeks in which to sell foreign securities and arrange their loans.

Careful to Avoid Suspicion.

At the time this conference was held, nobody outside the inner circle of the Berlin and Vienna Governments dreamed of war as a result of the Sarajevo assassinations. They took good care that no suspicion should be aroused. The Kaiser went straight away to Norway on his yacht. The Chancellor left Berlin for a rest.

The diplomatic corps had no intimation of the impending calamity, and the British Ambassador went away, leaving the embassy to the Charge d'Affaires. The same drug was used in Vienna, and even when the blow fell the Russian Ambassador was absent from his post on vacation.

As the British White Book shows, it was not until July 20 that Sir Edward Grey, the British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, asked the German Ambassador in London whether he had any news of what was going on in Vienna in regard to Serbia. Many days before the British Foreign Secretary asked this question, war had been formally decide dupon in Berlin and Vienna and everything was being made ready to raise the curtain upon the most ghastly drama of history. From the date of this conference the German financiers were busy with their part while the army marked time. All the great stock exchanges experienced an acute financial depression as German-owned stocks were quietly pushed into the market. In New York, as I found afterward, there were astonishing slumps in quotations. Between July 18 and July 25, which was two days before the ultimatum was sent to Serbia, Union Pacific dropped from 154½ to 125¼, Baltimore & Ohio went from 90¼ to 78¼ and United States Steel slumped with the railroad stocks.

No Explanation Offered.

No adequate explanation was offered, and in the absence of anything better, there were bitter complaints against the Simmons-Underwood tariff as the source of all economic evil. The tariff had as little to do with it as the Federal Reserve act, which was not yet enacted into law. There was financial depression and a general decline in market quotations because the German financiers were carrying out their part of the Kaiser's war plans.

It was not to me alone that Baron Wangenheim told the story of this Berlin conference. Only recently the Marquis Garroni, the Italian Ambassador at Constantinople, announced that Baron Wangenheim told the same thing to him, Italy at that time being a member of the Triple Alliance. My diary shows that the conversation with the German Ambassador took place Aug. 26. This was about six weeks after the fateful council in Berlin in which the Kaiser gave civilization over to fire and sword, and all the details of the meeting were still fresh in Baron Wangenheim's mind.

The decision for war which the Austrian Emperor had confided to his Ambassador to Turkey in May and which the Kaiser fully revealed to his lieutenants in July, was the culmination of plans that had been under way for 25 years. Just as Bismarck had plotted and contrived to unite the German states by war and to create an empire dominated by Prussia, so the Kaiser had brooded over his own dream of making Germany the master state of the world.

Plotted for Twenty-five Years.

Throughout all his policies for a quarter of a century runs this Weltmacht motif, like the motif of a Wagnerian opera. Everything that was done or left undone had its inspiration in this single purpose. Year in and year out, the Kaiser brooded over this ambition, in which he was the central figure of a stupendous moving picture, directing and controlling the destinies of the world.

When he came to the throne he found a mighty military machine already constructed for his use. It was not enough. It was necessary to create a mighty industrial, financial and transportation machine as well, and to build a navy that could mobilize this power for use anywhere on the globe.

The Kiel Canal was a war measure. Government aid to German industries was a war measure. Government regulation and stimulation of agriculture was a war measure. The German railroad systems were developed with an eye single to moving vast armies to the east and the west. Everything that could contribute to the winning of a war was encouraged by the Government. Krupp's was made almost a national institution under the personal patronage of the Kaiser, who, by the way, was one of its stockholders.

A Nation of Experts.

Just as the army was in charge of military experts, so German finance, Germany industry, German administration were all turned over to experts. It was a nation of experts, with boundless ambition and infinite arrogance, but with the narrow vision of experts.

To create his new war machine the Kaiser made Germany a great materialistic empire. He found a disciplined and docile people, and he proceeded to mold them to his new scheme of world domination. Everything that was characteristic of the old Germany—the Germany of '48—was eventually smothered and stifled.

The old idealism, the old philosophy, the old religion, the old freedom and passion for education, all disappeared. The state, the church, the schools, the universities, art, literature and music were shaped to the Kaiser's will, as the army, the navy, the finances, the industries and agriculture were shaped.

The Kaiser became the head of a new Prussian system, erected upon the foundations of the system that Frederick the Great had created out of his genius, and war remained as ever the chief industry of Prussia.

Out of pursuance of the war plans of the Kaiser and the Pan-Germans who inspired him and probably used him as the agent of their ambitions, the world was besieged by armies of Prussian spies, advancing Prussian interests and doing Prussia's work everywhere. Not a nation escaped this infamous invasion.

Spies Sent Broadcast.

The Kaiser brother, Prince Henry, was sent to the United States, ostensibly to assist in the launching of the imperial yacht; in reality to rekindle among Americans of German descent their vaterland's Liebe and organizing them into societies that could be directed from Berlin to suit the exigencies of the imperial policy.

At least 80,000 Germans were turned loose upon Spain and probably a quarter of a million upon England. France was overrun with them. There was no occupation, calling or industry in which they did not make their way. They swarmed over South America, over the near East and the far East, and all of them were card indexed for the use of Berlin. Nothing was overlooked.

Nothing is more characteristic of the Prussian methods than the manner in which they obtained possession of Turkey. After the Sultan was deposed the Young Truks were in hard straits to maintain themselves. Throughout the Moslem world they were generally under suspicion as Free Masons and Atheists. The European capitals were generally skeptical. In England a Liberal Government was in power and it was not disposed to take on any Turkish complications.

Turks Distrusted France.

The Turks, as a whole, were distrustful of the French because of Syria and frankly antagonistic to Russia. That was Germany's opportunity. German military experts were sent to explain to the Turks how their disasters had come about in the two Balkan wars, and how similar disasters might be avoided in the future by proper co-ordination of military and transportation resources. Germany was willing to spend money in gambling that the Young Turks could retain control of the Government and the Young Turks were glad to be gambled on.

Slowly, but surely, Germany pushed itself into Turkish affairs until it became the predominating partner. Berlin had made itself indispensable to the men in control of the Turkish Government, and when the war came Turkey was a German pawn.

The Turks did not always submit gracefully. There were many protests against German pretentions, but in the end the Kaiser always prevailed. It had not been the original intention of Berlin to bring Turkey into the war—Germany had other plans. But the arrival of the Goeben and the Breslau in the Dardanelles changed the situation. There was no desire on the part of the Young Turks to enter upon a fresh war, but by that time they were helplessly enmeshed in the German net.

Germany Was Master.

So completely was the German Government the master of the situation that even after Turkey's entrance in the war became inevitable the Turkish Government was held back until the Germans had completed one of the most powerful wireless stations in the world with which to direct operations from Constantinople.

Turkey was vital to Pan-Germanism. It was an essential part of the Mittel Europa program and when the Kaiser was ready to strike, Turkey was already a vassal of Germany to be used as Berlin saw fit, either neutral or belligerent, but always in Germany's interest.

It came about that most of Germany's carefully laid schemes in other countries went wrong and the money invested turned out to be a total loss, but the Turkish investment paid dividends from the start.

In respect to Turkey alone were the German calculations correct, and without the control of Turkey Germany could not have carried on the war.

For 20 years Germany has been the I. W. W. of the nations. Wherever there was trouble, the Kaiser was there adding to the difficulties of a peaceful settlement and watching for his opportunity to set the war machine in operation.

The German policy resembles nothing else so much as the policy of the I. W. W. leaders in hastening to every town in which there were labor disputes to take charge of the strike, encourage lawlessness, promote sabotage and preach the doctrine of rule or ruin.

Took Sides With Spain.

In the Spanish-America War the Kaiser was notoriously on the side of Spain, in the belief that Spain could humble the pride of the United States. In the South African War he was all for Kruger and the Boers, in the hope that England would be beaten and her prestige in Africa and Asia forever weakened. He intrigued with the Czar against Japan. He intrigued in every South American country against the United States. Baron Ishii, the head of the Japanese Commission to the United States has publicly declared in his speeches that the anti-American agitation in Japan and the anti-Japanese agitation in the United States, which have so menaced the relations between the two countries for a dozen years, were the result of German plots; and nobody now doubts the truth of this charge.

It explains what was hitherto unexplainable, just as the German conspiracies in Mexico enable us to understand why Mexico distrusted the United States in the face of the most overwhelming evidence of wholly benevolent intentions on our part.

Much of this intrigue may appear to have been almost purposeless in its malice so far as the interests of Germany were concerned, but the Kaiser was always looking ahead to the day when the imperial war eagles would be unloosed, and the more international misunderstandings there were the more certain Germany would be of success in carrying out its program of world domination.

Machinations in Ireland.

The attitude of Germany toward the nations in general was not unlike its attitude toward the Irish question just before the beginning of the war. Both factions in Ireland were supplied with guns and ammunition from Germany brought over in German ships. Berlin cared nothing for home rule or for Ulster's objection to home rule, but it cared a great deal for a civil war in Ireland that would cripple Great Britain's hands when the great day dawned and the new Attilla set forth at the head of his hordes.

As I have already said, it was not by accident that the war came, and it was not by chance that it came in 1914. In all his calculations, the Kaiser had overlooked one factor—that of human nature. He had not perceived that his own people might fail him in the critical moment and that the control of the great machine which he had constructed might be challenged before he could set it in motion.

Baron Wangenheim confided to me that there would have been war at the time of the Algeciras conference, but Germany was not ready. No matter how elaborate the preparations had been, there was always something lacking, so Germany proceeded to get ready with a new army bill and a new budget which imposed a capital tax that all the world now recognizes as a war tax. The amazing thing is that it was not so recognized at the time.

The new army estimates would have expired in 1915. The Social Democratic movement was gaining enormously in strength throughout Germany. Before the Kaiser was fairly ready for his great exploit in Weltmacht he was threatened with a social revolution at home, due to the heavy burdens the German people were carrying, the spread of democratic doctrines and the growing resistance of the working classes to arbitrary government. If things drifted until it was necessary to renew the army appropriations the Social Democrats might be able to hold up the estimates and force sweeping reforms that would practically put them in control of the Reichstag and perhaps end forever the Kaiser's dream of world domination.

Kaiser Welcomed Chance.

It was vital that the war should come before this issue was joined at home, and hence the murders at Sarajevo were little less than a Godsend to the German autocracy. They gave the Kaiser the excuse he needed and they provided the opportunity to maneuver Russia into a position in which war could be represented to the German people as one of self-defense. The Berlin conference put the finishing touches on the program. The German financiers finished their task and the trap was sprung.

There can be only one end to this struggle, and that is the complete destruction of kaiserism and absolutism. Among the great statesmen of the world, President Wilson was the first to see that without this elimination of kaiserism and absolutism no durable peace was possible. To make peace on any other terms is to make a truce and give Germany time to prepare for a fresh attack.

As Baron Wangenheim once hopefully remarked, the next time Germany would be even more farsighted and would have at least a five-year supply of cotton and copper when war was declared. That is unquestionably what will happen unless the nations that are now fighting autocracy make the results of this war so decisive that the Prussian system can never be re-established.

The Germans must be beaten at their own game. The Prussian system was created by military prestige, it rests upon military prestige and it will collapse when that military prestige is destroyed. The German people accepted it because it had made them rich and powerful. They will abandon it when it leaves them impoverished and defeated. There is nothing miraculous or invincible about this military system. It is merely the product of experts who have devoted all their energies to it.

Germany studied for decades how to create armies and make war but the allies in three years have learned all that Germany ever knew and more. Everything that Germany has done in a military way we can do. The German has no special genius for war, as events have proved, although he made war his trade.

In France I saw how three American regular army officers, one of them a medical man, allotted to each American regiment of engineers, created an astonishingly efficient military unit in a remarkably short space of time. That is what we must be ready to do with five million men, if necessary, cost what it may. No matter how heavy the expense may be, it will be light in comparison with the price the United States would have to pay if Germany won the war.

The Kaiser's Threat.

The great majority of Americans seem to have little realization of how close we stood to the bring of a precipice. It was no idle threat that the Kaiser muttered when he told Ambassador Gerard in October, 1916, that when this war was over he intended to stand no more nonsense from the Americans.

If Germany were victorious and Great Britain and France were crushed, the United States would have been attacked on the pretext that it had supplied the allies with money and munitions and be compelled to pay an indemnity that would make Germany the richest nation in the world in spite of her enormous losses. I have heard this indemnity mentioned at $50,000,000,000 or 200,000,000,000 marks.

There is not the slightest doubt in my mind that this is what the Kaiser would have done if the allies had been defeated. Indeed, the humbling and crippling of the United States were no less essential to the Kaiser's ambition to create a master state than the humbling and crippling of Great Britain. Here were unlimited riches in the hands of 100,000,000 people who had not had the courage to defend themselves. They had made billions out of the war, why not take it away from them and put the German empire back on its feet?

When a Senator like La Follette asserts that we had only a technical grievance against Germany, the men who applaud him for assailing the President's policy are blind and deaf and dumb to the calamity which was hanging over the country.

America Saved the Allies.

It is freely admitted by French and British statesmen that the cause of the allies was saved by our intervention. There can be no doubt of it. But if we had not intervened our honor and our wealth alike would have been lost to us. We should have had to fight in the end against military odds that had broken England and France, and we should have paid in indemnities far more than this war can ever cost us.

What is worse still, our money and our shame would have imposed absolutism upon the world for generations to come, and this terrible struggle for emancipation would have been bequeathed to our children's children.

I have seen this war from both sides and I know that unless Kaiserism is destroyed democracy will be destroyed. We cannot live in the same world with the kind of a Germany that Prussian militarism has created and that the Kaiser is directing.

A War of Independence.

Let there be no mistake about it, we are fighting a new war of independence, and it is as truly a war of independence as that which our ancestors fought under Washington from 1776 to 1783. We are fighting a new war against slavery. It is a different kind of slavery from that from which Lincoln emancipated the republic, but slavery it is—the slavery of white to white, which the military caste of Prussia has sought to impose upon all civilization.

Under Wilson we are battling in a new war for emancipation, and there can be no terms but unconditional surrender on the part of Kaiserism and absolution. Anything short of that is a victory for Germany. Anything less than the complete triumph of the forces of democracy, in which the United States is now the leader, will bequeath to the next generation the heritage of another conflict more terrible still than that which is drenching the world in blood.

It was Bernhardi who formulated the battlecry of Kaiserism as it seized this word—Weltmacht Oderniedergang — World Master or Downfall. It must be the downfall. Wilhelm II decreed the war.

In the providence of God the American people, under Woodrow Wilson, together with their allies, can decree peace and there must be no compromise. Absolutism must be destroyed, root and branch. Only then can the world have a new birth of freedom.

PARTIAL DELIVERIES OF COAL MADE TO OFFSET SHORTAGE

Coal is so scarce in St. Louis that dealers are unable to come anywhere near filling orders. They are endeavoring to meet the situation by taking the orders in rotation and delivering only such quantities as will meet present requirements.

Some dealers, inclide to optimism, say that although the coal is coming slowly from the mines, there will be enough for the city's requirements if all are patient and content to take a little at a time. Others, more pessimistic, predict increasing shortage. It is stated that at 10 a. m. yesterday, at the Sixteenth street yard, where there is normally at the least 20 or 25 cars of coal, there was only one carload of screenings

Prices have advanced, under the leeway allowed by the Government's regulation, and there are reports that some dealers are demanding more than the Government prices. The prices prevailing yesterday were $5 to $5.25 for Carterville, $4.50 to $4.75 for Mt. Olive, and $4.25 for Standard. The latter is still well within the Government price and may advance to $4.75.

It is understood, as E. J. Wallace, secretary of the St. Louis Coal Club, predicted on his return from Washington, that there will be an advance in the mine prices to equalize the increase which has been granted to the miners, and that will mean a further increase in the retail price.

GERMAN LIBERALS UNITED AGAINST THE GOVERNMENT

Democratic Forces Brought Together by Crisis Caused by Capelle Incident.

THE HAGUE, Oct. 13.—A neutral observer who was present in the Reichstag during the excitement after Admiral von Capelle had accused certain Socialists of being implicated in the naval mutiny says that the Minister of Marine might have been forgiven but Chancellor Michaelis and Vice Chancellor Helfferich made a bad matter so much worse as to fairly compromise the Government and reopen a crisis that had been latent since June.

Again the majority of the nation and the Parliament is standing up against the Chancellor, but whereas in July the majority was composed of elements that were homogeneous, now for the first time since the war broke out the German Government has united against itself all Liberal Democratic forces.

Foreign Minister Kuhelmann was the only member of the Government rising to the situation.

He is reported to have said that his most difficult task would be to convince Germany it should give back to France certain districts of Alsace-Lorraine, about which in 1871 Bismarck and Von Moltke differed as he believed this was the only way to live in peace with France. But though probably this is his conviction, he abandoned it at once when he saw the unity of front toward the enemy could be saved by no other means.

Talking with people of all classes one gets the impression that the nation, though longing tremendously for peace, will stand for the war as long as the allies show unwillingness to guarantee the integrity of the central empires and restore to Germany her colonies and desist from economic boycott.

There is not much talk now about the success of the submarine war. Only U-boat fanatics believe that this will bring peace. Dreams of world domination have long since been given up. Now the ambition is to restore the German trade broken by the war and beat England in the world markets.

What is surprising is the serene calmness with which the public takes allied successes about Ypres. The confidence in Hindenburg is still unshaken, though the importance of the possession of the Flemish coast during the war is strongly felt.

During the first nine months of 1917 the Post-Dispatch printed 69,994 Room and Board Want Ads —10,705 more than the THREE nearest St. Louis newspapers combined.

GERMAN TROOPS LAND ON ISLANDS IN THE GULF OF RIGA

enemy dreadnaughts. Enemy activities have been rendered difficult, however, by moles which we constructed and owing to bad visibility.

"The garrison of Oesel is engaged in fighting the enemy forces which have been landed and all measures have been taken against these invaders.

"In the Black Sea yesterday an enemy submarine bombarded the port of Taupse and discharged 20 shells. Our coast batteries opened fire supported by rifle fire and the submarine quickly disappeared."

Oesel and Dago Islands are at the entrance to the Gulf of Riga and provide easy acess to the mainland over small intermediate islands. They are off the coast of the Russian province of Esthonia. Dago Island is about 200 miles from Petrograd. Its position derives additional importance for the fact that it is almost at the mouth of the Gulf of Finland, at the head of which is Kronstadt, which defends Petrograd.

Oesel Island is nearly 100 miles north of Riga which the Germans captured recently. The landing of German troops in Esthonia would threaten the outflanking of the Russian line and probably compel a retreat on a wide section of the front if indeed it did not open the way to Petrograd itself. A railway line follows the coast all the way from Hapsal, opposite Dago Island, to Petrograd.

French Official.

PARIS, Oct. 13.—German forces last night made several attacks on French positions north of the river Aisne. The official statement issued this afternoon by the War Office says that all the assaults were repulsed.

The announcement says:

"North of the Aisne the Germans during the night delivered several attacks in the sector between Hurtebise and Chevreaux. Notwithstanding the violence of his efforts the enemy was able only to gain a footing momentarily in our advanced line at one point. West of Hurtebise monument and south of La Royere we dispersed German detachments which attempted to approach our lines.

"On the right bank of the Muese (Verdun front), there was heavy artillery fighting near Chaume wood."

British Official.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—"There was a heavy rain throughout the night, which is still continuing," says today's official statement. "No counter atacks by the enemy have developed thus far on the batle front. On the rest of the British front there is nothing to report."

The official statement issued last night concerning yesterday's attack said:

"Notwithstanding the heavy rain which fell during the night, our troops suceeded in launching an attack at 5:25 o'clock this morning. Progress was made along the entire front from the Ypres-Roulers railway on the south to our junction with the French on the northern edge of the Houtholst forest.

"On the whole of this front a large number of defended localities, fortified farmers, woods and concrete strong points were captured by us, together with a number of prisoners. The fighting was especially severe on the slopes of Quin ridge west of Passchendaele and on the main ridge itself south of that village.

French Official.

PARIS, Oct. 13.—The official communication issued by the War Office tonight reads:

"The two artillerys were active in the regions of Craonne and Laffaux in Champagne, in the sector of Mont Sansnom and on the right bank of the Meuse in the region of Samogneux, Hill 344 and the Bois le Chaum.

British Flank German Line of Retreat in East Africa.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—Occupation by British troops of an important junction point flanking the German line of retreat in German East Africa is announced in an official statement today, which reads:

"In the Mbemkuru Valley area on Thursday our right column, advancing from Kilwa, having moved south, west up the valley to Mlemba and thence southeast, occupied Ruponda, an important junction of the tracks at the northwestern end of the Muera Plateau and on the flank of the line of retreat by the enemy's main body, whose rear guard is being pressed by the British moving south from Nahungo. The rapidity of our advance apparently surprised the enemy, who was making for Ruponda.

"In the western area a strong enemy detachment has been dislodged from positions overlooking the Lawega River drift near Opondas, 35 miles south of Mahange, and it retired six miles in a northeasterly direction."

New Position for C. G. Cobb.

C. G. Cobb, formerly of the Vandeventer Bank and the American Trust Co., has been elected assistant farm loan officer of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., according to an announcement made by the company yesterday.

RINER GOT ORDER FOR STATE COAL AFTER INDICTMENT

Secretary Sullivan Says He Gave It Because Fuel Was Needed in Hurry.

UNLOADING IS STOPPED

Secretary of State Also Gave Order Found to Be Short, It Is Learned.

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 13.—Eleven indictments were returned by the special grand jury here before it recessed yesterday until Nov. 5, it became known today.

Dr. J. C. Welch, former prison physician, who resigned and was indicted after the Post-Dispatch discovered and exposed the fact that he had solicited and accepted a bribe, was indicted again on a similar charge. John W. Riner, local coal dealer, already under three indictments for taking coal from State cars, also was indicted again.

The other nine indictments are against men who have not been indicted before, and their names will not be available until they are arrested.

The report was handed to Judge Slate yesterday about 2 p. m. Slate placed it carefully in his pocket. Later when newspaper men called at the clerk's office, Circuit Clerk Pettit said he had not received the report. Not a capias was issued until this morning.

Comment Caused by Delay.

Considerable comment was caused by the fact that the warrants were not issued until today, although Judge Slate has been insistent that every precautiong be taken to prevent the possible escape of indicted men.

The new indictment against Riner is for a delivery of short weights to the new State heating plant. Riner sent the State a bill for 155,000 pounds of coal. The last load, according to the bill, was delivered Sept. 8, three days before the Post-Dispatch published the first exposure of the coal scandals here. An automatic weighing device at the heating plant shows that the coal weighed only 110,103 pounds. The coal was billed at $4.75 a ton. The difference of nearly 22½ tons amounted to $106.87, and Riner is charged with having attempted to defraud the State of that amount.

The grand jury yesterday took a recess until Nov. 5, with the proviso that if Judge Slate cannot be here by that date, the jury will meet later. Judge Slate said he had important cases to hear in other parts of his circuit and that if he was unable to return Nov. 5 he would be back as soon thereafter as possible.

Investigations Not Completed.

Assistant Attorney-General Howell addressed the Court, saying:

"There is some very important work yet before the jury. Only a part of the evidence has been secured in certain investigations under way. These I consider of great importance. If the Court returns here Nov. 5 there will be but 12 working days until the tenure of the jury automatically expires, for the term of court will end Nov. 17. If the jury is not enabled to finish its work, another jury would have to start from the first again and entail needless costs. I hope that arrangements may be made under which the work of the jury can be finished at this term of court."

LAW GIVES SLATE POWER TO APPOINT A SPECIAL JUDGE

Disappointment Felt Over Action of Jefferson City Jurist in Adjourning Court.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 13.—Keen disappointment is felt in those official circles in Jefferson City which are uninfluenced by the efforts to stop the grand jury investigation of graft by persons in official position, over the circumstances that led Circuit Judge J. G. Slate to adjourn his court three weeks or more, thus preventing the jury from conducting its investigations during that time.

In announcing the temporary adjournment Judge Slate said he expected to be back in Jefferson City by Nov. 5. The grand jury cannot be in session on days when the court is not.

Judge Slate said that it was necessary for him to go to Cooper County and Moniteau County, in his judicial circuit, to hold court. He spoke at considerable length on the necessity of conducting several murder trials and looking after court business in those counties, and announced those as his reasons for temporarily adjourning his court in Jefferson City.

A Post-Dispatch reporter, without indicating an application to the adjournment of the Cole County Circuit Court today, asked Attorney-General McAllister whether under the law a Circuit Judge, having more than one county in his circuit, could call a special judge to sit in one county while he held court in another, and whether it would be legal for two circuit courts to be in session in the same circuit at the same time. The Attorney-General said he knew nothing in the law which would prevent such action, and that two circuit courts could be in session, though of course the same judge could not preside over both.

Three Ways to Hold Court.

Under the law there are three ways in which a court may be in session without the regularly elected judge presiding. One is for the regular judge to call in some other circuit judge to preside in his absence. Another is for five or more attorneys of the bar of the county in question to elect a judge to preside in the absence of the regular judge, and the third is for the parties to any legal proceeding agreeing upon a judge to sit in the absence of the regular judge.

It was pointed out here today that Judge Tinker, presiding at the Keet baby kidnaping trial in Marshfield, a few days ago asked Circuit Judge Arch Johnson to go to Hickory County Monday and open court there for him in case the kidnaping trial was not completed by that time. Thus there will be two circuit courts in Judge Tinker's circuit in session at the same time.

Attorney-General McAllister refused to comment on the action of Judge Slate and Assistant Attorney-General Howell, who has been in charge of the graft investigation before the grand jury, refused to estimate the length of time it will take to complete the investigation. He said that the work of collecting evidence in such an investigation was very slow.

In court yesterday afternoon Howell attempted to obtain from Judge Slate a definite statement as to when he would return, but was unsuccessful. The Judge said he did not know exactly when he would return. The Judge will be in Jefferson City, Oct. 20, to hear contempt proceedings against Ralph E. Stout, managing editor of the Kansas City Star, and Charles E. Heberhart, managing editor of the St. Louis Republic, for publications growing out of the graft investigation. Stout is cited for contempt for printing an editorial which Judge Slate considered objectionable, and Heberhart is cited for printing a news story containing the names of men indicted before the indictments actually had been returned into court. After hearing the contempt cases Judge Slate is expected to return to one of the other counties of his circuit.

Much Evidence Presented.

It is known here that a great mass of evidence, involving men higher up in State official life, has been presented to the Attorney-General, and that through lack of time it has not been reached. It is considered very doubtful if much of this evidence can be presented to the grand jury, even if it reconvenes Nov. 5, as it then will have only 12 days to work before the term of court ends.

This evidence involves at least two elective State officials of the present and the preceding State administration, and several minor officers of both, and is closely allied with evidence on which indictments already have been returned and made public.

If the grand jury does not have an opportunity to go into this investigation, it is felt in Jefferson City it will have failed in probably the most important part of its work.

AGED PATRIARCH OF SYRIAN MARONITES EXILED BY TURKS

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—Information that Elias Howayek, the aged patriarch of the Syrian Christian tribe of Maronites, had been removed from his palace at Mount Lebanon, by the Turks and exiled to a destination unknown to his people, was received today by Al Hoda, a Syrian newspaper here.

The advices, received by mail from Rome, said that Pope Benedict had interceded with the Turkish Government on behalf of Howayek. The Maronites comprise the Catholic branch of the Syrian race. For ages the Maronites have withstood invasion by the Turkish race. Before the war, the Patriarch, who is 87 years old, enjoyed the protection of the Entente Powers. Since the first of this year he has been a virtual prisoner in his palace, with his privileges abrogated.

The information that Howayek now has been exiled is interpreted by Syrians here as meaning that the power of the Maronites has at last been broken down by the Turks. Fears were expressed today that news would come soon of wholesale persecution and death inflicted by the Turks, similar to the slaughter of Armenians.

Model Whom Police Believed to Be Dead a Robust Prisoner

MISS GRAYCE MAUDEAN JONES.

'GIRL OF MANY HATS AND GOWNS' AGAIN ARRESTED

Detectives Investigating Thefts From Washington Avenue Store Surprised at Trail's End.

Detectives investigating the theft of numerous garments from a Washington avenue clothing house got a surprise yesterday afternoon when the trail led them to a young woman rooming at 4957A Washington boulevard. They recognized her as Miss Grayce Maudean Jones, known to the police three years ago as "the girl of many hats and gowns."

She was then under arrest here on complaint of an Iowa jeweler, and was, when the police last took note of her, a patient at the city hospital, apparently afflicted incurably with spinal tuberculosis.

The detectives could scarcely believe that the healthy young woman whom they placed under arrest was the patient they had last seen in the hospital. But she confirmed their identification, and explained that surgeons at the Barnes Hospital had cured her by transplanting a piece of bone from her leg. She is 26 years old and the daughter of the Rev. L. W. Jones, a Methodist circuit rider of Stansberry, Mo.

In her room were found two coats, 11 evening and afternoon gowns and a length of plush, valued in all at about $500, which, according to the police, she confessed having stolen from the W. M. Sternberg Garment Co., 716 Washington avenue. She had been employed there since August as a model and saleswoman. She explained that she got the articles out of the store undetected by pinning them inside her skirt.

Miss Jones' lavish wardrobe, compraising scores of hats and gowns and an imposing array of shoes, attracted attention when she was arrested here in February, 1914, on a warrant charging her with being a fugitive from justice. Emil Leffert, a jeweler of Council Bluffs, Io., complained that she had left that State with $1200 worth of jewelry which had not been paid for.

Her explanation was that she left Iowa to avoid testifying in a divorce suit, and that the man in the case had promised to pay all her debts, including the cost of the jewelry. She restored them to Leffert and the prosecution was dropped. She had been a guest at the Planters Hotel under the name of Josephine Gray. Later she sued Leffert for $20,000, alleging false arrest.

Warrants charging her with theft will be applied for tomorrow.

GOVERNOR SAID TO BE TRYING TO CONTROL STATE COMMITTEE

Efforts to Elect Ben G. Brinkman of St. Louis as Democratic Chairman Reported.

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 13.—Friends of Gov. Gardner, according to a rumor which has gained wide circulation among Democratic politicians, have begun a quiet effort to control the Democratic State Committee and elect Ben G. Brinkman of 3641 Flora boulevard, St. Louis, as chairman of the committee to succeed James Cowgill of Kansas City, who has announced his intention of resigning because of his recent appointment as a member of the Board of Election Commissioners of Kansas City.

Although officially the Governor is not in politics, it is reported that R. Perry Spencer, one of his managers in the last campaign, is actively working to line up members of the committee for Brinkman, who is a close friend of the Governor and whose hand held the purse string in the 1916 State campaign.

The prediction among politicians is that if the Governor has dipped into the State Committee election he will not be successful. Members of the committee have been working some time to line up a majority of the members for Ben Neale, a lawyer of Greenfield, and they are said to have been successful.

JEFFERSON CITY JURY HANDS DOWN 11 INDICTMENTS

One Is Against Former Prison Physician and Another Against Coal Dealer.

RECESS IS TAKEN

Judge Slate Expects to Return From Other Parts of Circuit by Nov. 5.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 13.—It became known here today that the special grand jury returned 11 indictments yesterday before it recessed until Nov. 5.

If the Court returns here Nov. 5 there will be but 12 working days until the tenure of the jury automatically expires, for the term of court will end Nov. 17. If this jury is not enabled to finish its work, another jury would have to start from the first again and entail needless costs. I hope that arrangements may be made under which the work of the jury can be finished at this term of court."

BIG GERMAN LOSSES IN WEST ADMITTED BY BERLIN WRITER

Says Military Authorities Have Abandoned Rule of Not Referring to Them.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 13.—An unmistakable intimation of great losses suffered by the Germans in their attempts to stem the British attacks is contained in the latest comment of Lieutenant-General von Ardenne, military critic of the Tageblatt of Berlin, on the Flanders campaign. He refers to the German losses at Mars-la-Tour and Gravelotte in the Franco-Prussian War, averaging five-sixths of the officers and one-third of the men of the guard and Brandenburg regiments engaged, as classic examples in German military history of extraordinary casualties suffered without affecting the morale of the troops.

The General then says these losses often are far exceeded in the present war, and that in the third Flanders battle they have been so great as to induce the military authorities to abandon the usual rule of not referring to them, feeling that the sacrifices of Prince Rupprecht's troops have been such as to entitle them to extraordinary thanks of the fatherland.

Gen. Ardenne pays a grudging and belated tribute to the achievements of the British tanks which, according to his verdict, though quick victims to the German field artillery under good visibility, are able to deliver a most effective enfilading fire from their machine guns whenever they are able to approach the infantry lines under cover of a curtain of smoke or gas waves, and are not to be taken lightly.

MEXICANS LOVE UNITED STATES, OBREGON SAYS

Former Carranza War Minister Honor Guest at Chamber of Commerce Dinner.

Gen. Alvaro Obregon, who fought for constitutional Government in Mexico and won it, at the loss of his right arm, declared, at a dinner given by the Foreign Trade Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce at the Planters Hotel last night, that the constitutional Government opens its arms to all sons of America who desire to work with the Mexicans in developing the natural riches of the country, within the rights and liberties which the laws of Mexico extend.

Edward Hidden, extending the welcome of the municipality, said the General's visit to this country meant larger, truer and more enduring relations between the two republics.

Gen. Obregon, speaking through Maj. H. W. Miller, U. S. A., as interpreter, said in part:

Here Only as Private Citizen.

"I am here only in the capacity of a Mexican citizen, not in any official capacity or on a secret mission of any kind. The Constitutional Government of Mexico opens its arms to all the sons of America who may desire to work with us in developing the natural riches of Mexico, within the rights and liberties which our laws extend. This truth is little known because the revolution temporarily interrupted particular interests and Mexicans and foreigners spent a great deal of money in spreading calumnies and making us appear as a country without law. Since the present Constitutional Government was established our foreign affairs have been improving and men interested in our wealth and development are returning.

"Efforts have also been made to have it appear that our Government is antagonistic to the United States. This is belied by the fact that all Mexicans desiring a vacation or recreation visit the United States. All Americans who are willing to respect our laws are satisfied with the treatment they receive in our country. All our people, from the highest official to the lowliest citizen, have great love for the United States."

Maj. Miller and Mateo Ortez, Mexican Consul here, also spoke.

Visits Aviation Field.

Gen. Obregon and his party were taken yesterday to visit Scott Field, the Belleville aviation camp. They were met on the Belleville plaza by Mayor Duvall and a group of city and civic officials, who formed his escort to the camp. There he renewed acquaintance with Maj. George E. A. Reinberg, whom he met a year ago on the Mexican border. He declined with thanks an invitation to go on a flight.

This is the General's first visit to the United States. He has just finished writing the story of his life, which is shortly to be published in English and Spanish. The party departed after last night's dinner for Buffalo, Niagara Falls and New York. Later he will call on Secretary of State Lansing at Washington.

The General is no longer a fighting man, having resigned as Carranza's Minister of War. He has gone back to his farm and is also in the commission business, handling the bean crops of the farmers of Southern Sonora and Northern Sinaloa.

Lawyer's Wife Expresses Surprise Over His Dropping of Case.

Clarence F. Krone, lawyer and former State Senator, yesterday voluntarily dismissed his divorce suit against Mrs. Kate E. Krone of 511 North Newstead avenue. The case was filed several weeks ago and was pending in Judge Jones' court.

Mrs. Krone told a Post-Dispatch reporter that there had been no reconciliation, and she expressed surprise that the case had been dropped. She said she had intended to resist it, but on account of lack of funds she could not employ a lawyer. The Krones formerly lived at 3507 Pestalozzi street.

Success for Union Government in Canada Assured.

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 13.—Success for union government under Premier Borden was assured today when F. B. Col. C. C. Ballantyne, whom Carvell succeeds, became Minister of Marine and Fisheries, the portfolio vacated by J. D. Hazen.

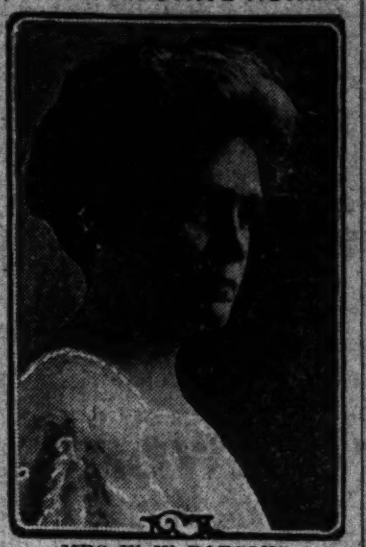
BRIDE OF PRESIDENT OF INDIANA STATE NORMAL



MRS. W. W. PARSONS.

FORMER SEMINARY PRINCIPAL BRIDE OF STATE NORMAL HEAD

Dr. W. W. Parson, 67, and Miss Martina Erickson, 47, Married at Chicago.

Miss Martina Erickson, who last Monday resigned as principal of Monticello Seminary at Godfrey, Ill., was married in Chicago yesterday to Dr. W. W. Parsons, president of the Indiana State Normal School at Terre Haute, Ind. She is 47 years old and he is 67. The ceremony was performed at Trinity Methodist Church, Bishop Charles P. Anderson officiating.

Miss Erickson, whose relatives live in Wisconsin, was the first dean for women employed at the Indiana Normal and held the position for several years, until four years ago, when she took the position at Godfrey. She was always a warm personal friend of the Parsons family, which until two years ago consisted of Mrs. Parsons and a son, both of whom died within a year, the son receiving his diplomas from Wabash College at the hands of President McIntosh on his death bed.

Dr. Parsons was known to have greatly admired Miss Erickson, yet the announcement of the engagement a few weeks ago came as a surprise.

Among the wedding guests were Miss Elizabeth Caldwell and C. A. Caldwell of Alton, president of the Board of Trustees of Monticello Seminary. Dr. Parsons was graduated with the first Indiana Normal class in 1872, and has been president 35 years.

WOMAN WHO KILLED HUSBAND ACQUITTED OF MURDER CHARGE

Neighbors Testify Man Once Was About to Shoot Wife When They Interfered.

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., Oct. 13.—The jury in the Thomason murder case, which went to the jury room at about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, returned at 10 o'clock this morning with a verdict acquitting Mrs. Edna Thomason of the charge on the grounds of self-defense. Mrs. Thomason was accused of having murdered her husband, Miles Thomason, foreman at a local printing establishment, at their home, Aug. 10, 1916.

Mr. and Mrs. Alva Cooper, who lived near the Thomason home, testified that on several occasions Thomason had threatened the life of the defendant and on one occasion was about to shoot her when they interfered.

At the last trial the jury remained out 48 hours without reaching an agreement.

SOLDAN DRILLS TO BE RESUMED

Military drill and instruction will be started by students of Soldan High School, Oct. 15, with temporary officers from last year and those elected at the close of the term in command. The training, at least for a time, will be in sole charge of student officers, because of the calling to active service of Sergt. McGowan, who had charge of the work last year.

Lack of equipment this year caused the delay in starting active drilling.

A New Conception in Automobile Efficiency—Performance—Satisfaction

The standards you accepted yesterday become obsolete today. This is the history of progress. The past builds for the future and the new, in real developments, comes from the assembly of the separate units of the past.

You have accepted the gasoline motor for the automobile—it has given unrestricted range of operation. You have accepted the electrical units to start and light your car for these added to convenience.

You have accepted the electrical control of speed range in the electric gear shift for this has brought you simplicity and freedom from confusion.

And these separate units of progress of yesterday are combined in Woods Dual Power Motor Cars to give you a gasoline car, electrically controlled, the assembly of proved units of separate purpose into one unit of indisputable service value.

You have the power and mileage range of the gasoline car under electric control—without gear shift—you have the instant availability of the electric motor without necessity for interruption in service for charging batteries.

The electric unit that starts the gasoline engine will itself propel the car over a wide touring range at a speed as high as it is desirable to travel in traffic—and this same unit lights your car—controls the magnetic brake and governs the speed range—while keeping the storage batteries charged at all times.

This application of the combined forces of electricity and gasoline into one motive unit is the greatest single development you will see in motor car design.

We will be glad to give you a demonstration at your convenience.

LAUNDRY CLOSED BY WAR CALL

Two Edwardsville Chinese Respond When Draft Law Is Explained.

A call for service in the national army, received yesterday by Hong Lee, 28 years old, and Jon Lee, 29, Chinese, resulted in closing the doors of Edwardsville's Chinese laundry.

The Lees, who operated the laundry, did not register until after the Edwardsville Exemption Board indulged in a lengthy explanation of the draft law for their benefit, although both were born in the United States. After registering them, the board certified their cases to the Federal District Attorney at Springfield, and as a result the laundrymen will depart within a few days for Camp Taylor, Ky.

TARDY RESPONSE TO LIBERTY LOAN CAUSES CONCERN

With Half of Campaign Gone, Country Has Subscribed Only $600,000,000.

NEW IMPETUS NEEDED

Startling Factor to Be Introduced Into Campaign, Probably Within 24 Hours.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—The tardiness of the country in responding to the second Liberty loan is causing deep concern to officials here. President Wilson and his Cabinet are watching the campaign with great interest.

With half of the campaign gone, treasury officials estimated tonight that not more than $600,000,000 had been subscribed. It has become apparent that a new and tremendous impetus must be given to the campaign if the subscription is to approximate $5,000,000,000.

The whole weight of the administration is to be used for the rest of the campaign and efforts of dimensions unapproached heretofore are to be made during the two weeks that remain before the closing of the second books.

A new factor calculated to hearten the host of workers and to galvanize the country into a realization that the most strenuous efforts will be made will be introduced into the campaign probably within 24 hours. Notwithstanding the splendid reception given Secretary McAdoo in the West, the efforts of thousands of workers and the most highly organized publicity campaign ever known in the country, the daily average of subscriptions has fallen far below what officials had hoped for. The time has come, officials feel, when the people of the country must be made to realize that they must subscribe without delay to the full limit of their means.

From President Wilson down, officials are understood to be united in the belief.

"Unofficial" Estimates Concluded.

The $600,000,000 estimate of the treasury takes into consideration all the optimistic "unofficial" estimates from the various reserve districts and that sum is only 12 per cent of the amount desired.

This would leave $4,400,000,000 to be raised within the next 12 working days, an average of $367,000,000 a day if the $5,000,000,000 goal is to be attained, and $2,400,000,000, an average of $200,000,000 a day, if only the minimum of $3,000,000,000 is subscribed.

"Neither the average daily minimum or maximum quotas for the second Liberty Bond sale," reads the treasury announcement, "had been attained tonight, when the first half of the great drive came to a close."

Unofficial estimates of subscriptions from five reserve banks showed a total of $523,000,000 subscribed. These banks and the estimated amounts of their subscriptions were: New York, $325,000,000; Cleveland, $65,000,000; Boston, $59,192,000; Chicago, $44,005,000, and San Francisco, $30,196,950.

Report From New England.

"These unofficial reports," the statement continues, "came from New England: Massachusetts, $36,580,000; Connecticut, $8,200,000; Rhode Island, $8,082,000; Maine, $2,700,000; New Hampshire, $1,800,000; Vermont, $1,760,000.

"The average subscription in the Chicago district is $1000. These details accompany Chicago's report: Cook County, $23,387,000; Illinois, outside of Cook County, $3,420,000; Indiana, $4,645,400; Iowa, $2,475,200; Michigan, $5,701,600, and Wisconsin, $3,370,500."

Mayor Presents Boy Scout Bond Sellers With Medals.

Bronze Government medals were distributed to 125 St. Louis boy scouts yesterday, in the Mayor's office, as a reward for their services during the first Liberty Bond Loan campaign, when $768,528 worth of Liberty Bonds were sold through their efforts.

Each boy receiving a medal is credited with having sold 10 or more bonds. All but seven of the 132 canvassers of the St. Louis Boy Scouts Division sold 10 each. John Wallace, 13, son of H. B. Wallace, 4976 Berlin avenue, made the highest record, selling 139 bonds. George and Erwin Niedringhaus, twin 14-year-old sons of George W. Niedringhaus, 3745 Lindell boulevard, sold 91 and 85 bonds respectively. Theodore Entz, son of Theodore B. Entz, 5642 Kingsbury place, sold 88. East St. Louis was represented by Bartley Schmitt, 14, and David Weissman, 15.

Before presenting the boys with the medals Mayor Kiel read a letter from Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo commending them for their work and stating that the scouts of the country sold $25,338,250 worth of the bonds to 139,645 persons.

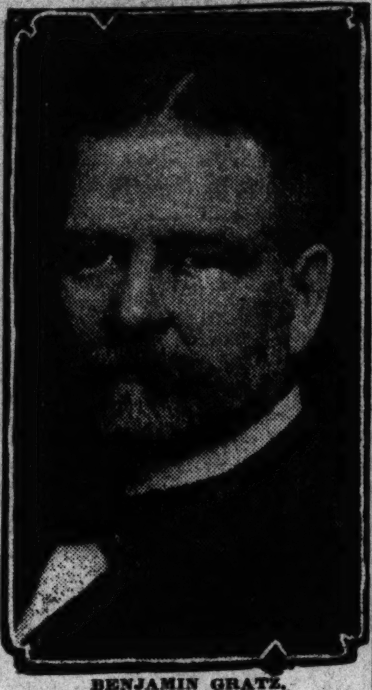
Men Going to Front Must Have Every Support, Benj. Gratz Says

THE POST-DISPATCH herewith prints the sixth of a series of interviews with wealthy St. Louisans, pointing out the wisdom of purchasing Liberty Bonds for investment, aside from patriotic duty.

Benjamin Gratz of 5551 Lindell boulevard, capitalist, and member of the firm of Warren Jones & Gratz, has made a personal subscription for $150,000 worth of the Liberty Loan bonds.

By BENJAMIN GRATZ.



BENJAMIN GRATZ.

I subscribed for $150,000 worth of the second Liberty Loan Bonds because I think if there is anything good in this world as an investment, it is the bonds of the United States Government. Now, the only way to keep these bonds good is to buy them. If the people of this country want to let Germany win this war, my advice to them would be: Don't buy them.

President Wilson's course has enlarged the outlook of man as nothing has done since the Declaration of Independence, and I am prepared to back him up to the extent of my last dollar if it is necessary to do so.

Our boys are now going abroad to fight, and they are certainly entitled to and must have all the support we can give them from home, whether we are persons of large or small means. To persons of moderate means these bonds are doubly attractive, because they are exempt from taxation up to $5000.

LAST OF NATIONAL GUARD UNITS IS AT CAMP DONIPHAN

Col. Linxwiler of Sixth Missouri Infantry Will Command New Regiment.

CAMP DONIPHAN, Ok., Oct. 13.—The arrival of the Third Missouri Infantry from Kansas City this afternoon brought the last of the national guard units to Camp Doniphan. Col. Linxwiler of the Sixth Missouri Infantry, with which the Third will be combined to form the 140th Infantry, will command the new regiment. Col. Philip J. Kealy of the Third Regiment will be transferred to the depot brigade.

The thousand drafted men from Camp Funston, who will arrive Monday will be scattered among the different organizations of the division in the effort to avoid large numbers of comparatively green men in any single unit. The majority of the conscripts will be sent to the depot brigade, in command of Brigadier-General Clark.

No Officers to Be Demoted.

No officers losing their commands in the reorganization will be demoted or discharged according to a statement of the Adjutant-General to the commander of Camp Doniphan. The statement follows:

"It is regretted that it has been necessary to break up the national guard regiments, but there was no other way if the officers and men belonging to them were to become a part of the new division. If these divisions, which have been designated to go to France at an early date, are to be composed of trained officers and men, the necessity of breaking up some of the regiments to obtain them becomes apparent.

"As a result of the reorganization some of the officers, particularly in the higher grades, have become surplus, but there are plenty of places for them. It is not the intention to demote or discharge any, but to give all commands or duties commensurate with their rank in the division of which their regiments were a part.

All Will Be Assigned.

"When the division goes to France, they will be attached to organiations or assigned to appropriate duties by the War Department or division commander. Neither is it the intention that noncommissioned officers shall be demoted or released, but all will be given duties appropriate to their grades."

Among those transferred to the depot brigade, as a result of the reorganization, are: Col. Philip J. Kealy, Third Missouri Infantry; Lieutenant-Colonels E. J. McMahon, Fifth Missouri Infantry; Paul Tucker, Second Missouri Infantry; Majors Carl L. Ristine, Sixth Missouri Infantry; William T. Morgan, Sixth Missouri Infantry; James E. Reiger, Fourth Missouri Infantry Frank R. Carmack, First Missouri Infantry; Joseph J. Koch, First Missouri Infantry; Fred L. Lemon, Second Kansas Infantry; Samuel G. Clark, First Kansas Infantry.

48 Captains Transferred.

Forty-eight company captains, who lost their commands in the reorganization, are transferred to the depot brigade. Among these are: John B. Hundley, Fifth Missouri Infantry; William P. Sanders, Fifth Missouri Infantry; Rodney J. Ludlow, Fifth Missouri Infantry; Walton S. Fitzroy, Fifth Missouri; Edwin M. Todd, First Missouri; Harry E. Sugden, First Missouri; Dwight F. Davis, Fifth Missouri; John F. Oberwinder, Fifth Missouri; John S. Pearson, First Missouri Infantry; Hugh McK. Jones, Fifth Missouri Infantry.

Maj. James L. Barngrove and Capt. William E. McGaughey of the Fifth Missouri Infantry have been transferred to the munition train Harold Reader, formerly chaplain of the Fifth Missouri Infantry, will become chaplain of the 110th Engineers. Maj. Wm. S. Lawrence of the medical corps of the Fifth Missouri Infantry has been transferred to the ammunition train.

Attorney for Pierce Oil Corporation Has Thirteen Warrants Issued.

Warrants charging petit larceny, in the theft of gasoline or of money paid for gasoline, at filling stations of the Pierce Oil Corporation, were issued yesterday against for former employes of the station at Washington boulevard and Walton avenue.

Attorney George T. Priest, who presented the evidence to the Prosecuting Attorney, said the company had recently suffered losses from this cause which amounted, as he estimated, to 35,000 gallons of gasoline, or $7000 at the present price of 20 cents a gallon.

Priest refused, when questioned later by a Post-Dispatch reporter, to go into details as to the company's losses, and officials of the company were also unwilling to talk. The amounts involved in the warrants were all small, the largest being $3.01. Thirteen warrants were issued against the four men. Five are against Clarence W. Gisler of 2642 Rutger street, three against John M. Kinzer of 2810 North Broadway, three against James P. Broderick of 1144 Aubert avenue, and two against John C. Drain of 2603 Caroline street.

St. Clair County Men Pledged to Subscribe $1000 Each.

To start the subscriptions for [illegible]500,000 worth of Liberty bonds in St. Clair County, bankers conducting the campaign have pledged that each will personally take a $1000 bond. There are 18 banks in the county with a directorship of approximately 150 members, so this will mean that at least $150,000 will be taken by the bankers.

L. D. Turner, president of the Belleville Savings Bank, said he believed Belleville would oversubscribe its quota of $1,000,000. The Belleville campaign will open tomorrow.

FRENCH MERCHANT SAILORS PASS THROUGH ST. LOUIS

On Way to Seattle to Form a Crew of Vessel Bound for Japan.

Thirty-eight men and eight officers, members of the French merchant marine, passed through St. Louis yesterday on his way from New York to Seattle, where they will form the crew of a French ship bound for Japan.

Members of the party told a Post-Dispatch reporter that they had crossed the ocean 14 times since the war started and that they had been on two ships which were sunk.

They formed the crew of the "Netel" when it went down after a collision with another ship, July 20, and were on the ship Breton, bound for France from Algeria, when it was torpedoed by a German submarine, Aug. 8. Fishing vessels on both occasions rescued them.

RIFLE SHORTAGE DUE TO 'POLICY OF DAWDLE,' T. R. SAYS

Declares Country Relied for Two and a Half Years on Broomstick Preparedness.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 13.—The following editorial by Col. Theodore Roosevelt appears in the Kansas City Star today:

By THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

(Copyright, 1917, by the Kansas City Star. Reprinted in the Post-Dispatch by special arrangement with the Kansas City Star.)

The chief of the Ordnance Bureau of the Army, in commenting on the shortage of rifles, has said that it is of no consequence, because "every soldier will be supplied a rifle when he starts for France." Of course he will, otherwise he cannot start. One of the leading papers of New York backs up the statement by saying that the "drilling in the camps without rifles is ended now," and that "Gen. Crozier delayed the work so as to get rifles with the same ammunition our allies are using."

Neither statement is correct. The last is the reverse of truth. On Oct. 2 in one camp there was still only 100 rifles for 20,000 men, and other camps were scarcely better off, and the delay in getting rifles during the last eight months has been due primarily to the refusal of the Ordnance Department to get rifles using the ammunition of our allies. If during the two years preceding our entry into the war the Government factories had been run full speed we would have had over 2,000,000 of Springfield rifles instead of under 1,000,000.

Our shortage was due solely to our policy of dawdle. Our factories produced a mere dribble of rifles and no big field guns until the inevitable happened. War came. Having no rifles of our own for the new army, the War Department decided to adopt the English rifle, the Enfield, which was being built in this country at the rate of nearly 9000 a day in private plants, and by speeding them up the number could have been immediately increased to 14,000 a day. But the authorities insisted that the Enfields should be changed to take our ammunition, and that certain parts should be standardized and made interchangeable. As regards this excuse it is sufficient to point out that in the first place it was a very grave error while making the parts of our Enfields interchangeable at the same time to make their ammunition not interchangeable with that of the British Enfields, for the number of Springfields on hand was negligible compared to the millions of rifles we would ultimately need, and in the second place the delay even for this purpose was wholly inexcusable.

The German submarine note came on Jan. 31. An alert War Department would have had its rifle program minutely mapped out within two weeks. The delay in furnishing final specifications to the factories was such that they could not begin on the complete rifle until the latter part of August. Six months is a "perfectly endurable delay" only if we are content to accept the speed standards in war of Tiglath-pileser and Pharaoh Necho.

The United States must learn to adopt the war speed standards of the twentieth century, A. D., instead of those of the seventh century B. C. If in April we had been ready to proceed with the Enfield rifle we would now have about two million of the new rifles instead of about one-fiftieth of that number.

Gen. Crozier says that we have only had to wait "two or three months—a perfectly endurable delay." Surely if there is anything this war teaches it is the vital importance of time. Two or three months waiting in order to get a rifle which does not carry the ammunition of our allies represents not merely an undesirable delay but grave "wisdom."

Gen. Crowder handled the draft to perfection because he appreciated that the difference between the sending a telegram at 5 or at 4:45 might be of momentous consequence. Gen. Crozier has bungled the rifle situation because of the attitude which makes him regard two or three months as "a perfectly endurable delay." For two years and a half before entering the war we relied upon broomstick preparedness. For the first eight months of the war we have followed the same policy as regards the vital matter of rifles for our troops.

RAILWAYS WANT RATE RAISE

Eastern Line Executives to Present Case to Commission Wednesday.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—Eastern railroads have asked the Interstate Commerce Commission for a conference to discuss rates "not favorably acted upon in the recent decision on the 15 per cent advance rate case." The commission has designated next Wednesday as the time for the conference, which, it is thought, will be priminary to action looking toward financial relief of the roads.

The wording of the railroad executives' request for a conference indicates that they will ask for a further increase in rates on specific commodities. No statement of a definite proposal is contained in the request.

GIGANTIC REMODELING

PIANO SALE

A RECORD-BREAKING SALE THAT IS SAVING PIANO BUYERS THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS. ARE YOU GOING TO GET THE BENEFIT OF IT?

We are obliged to clear at least one floor in our building the first of the week so that the contractors can begin with the alterations. Hundreds of these beautiful Pianos that now occupy space on this floor must be sold or crowded into the limited space we have on the lower floors. Our marking crayon has been busy all day revising the already greatly reduced prices. WE ARE GOING TO MAKE A FINAL SWEEPING REDUCTION ON THESE PIANOS THAT WILL MOVE EVERY ONE OF THEM. These wonderful values will greatly exceed your own expectations. Please bear in mind that the pianos and player-pianos offered during this gigantic sale are not special sale pianos that are built to fit any special sales price, but every instrument on our floor comprises our regular stock of catalogue styles and the very latest product of our factory with the exception of a number of high-class used pianos that we have taken in exchange.

STARCK Pianos have been selected as the official piano by the Boston English Grand Opera Company, who open a 30-weeks' season at the STRAND THEATER in Chicago. These world-renowned artists have shown a pronounced preference for the celebrated STARCK Piano; why not have this kind of an instrument in your home, particularly since you can secure one during this great sale at prices no greater than you would be asked to pay for cheap, worthless instruments of doubtful parentage and no gaurantee of satisfactory service.

PIERSOL ADMITS PLAN TO KIDNAP MAN FOR REWARD

Defendant in Keet Baby Case on Witness Stand, Denies Guilt of Pending Charges.

STATE OFFERS REBUTTAL

Argument Limited to Three Hours on Each Side, to Be Heard Tomorrow.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

MARSHFIELD, Mo., Oct. 13.—In a detailed story that could not be shaken in two hours of severe grilling on cross-examination, Claude Piersol, 20 years old, today maintained his innocence of any connection with the kidnaping of baby Lloyd Keet; denied the varied German plots laid to him, and gave what he declared was the true version of a plan, in which he participated, to hold a Springfield man for a reward. The testimony of Piersol practically concluded his case in defense, but the rebuttal of the State prolonged the taking of testimony until 5 o'clock this afternoon. At that time Judge Skinker adjourned court until Monday, when he will instruct the jury and the attorneys will argue the case. The Court will grant each side three hours for argument.

Piersol's bearing on the witness stand was as calm and cool as that which he has maintained throughout the trial. He spoke in clear language and never hesitated in his answer. He spoke so rapidly at times that he had to be cautioned not to overtax the court stenographer, and he skillfully avoided many traps set for him. The court room was packed during his examination.

Case for the Defense.

The major part of the case for the defense was made today.

The handwriting expert was John M. Trendley of East St. Louis, who testified that the admittedly genuine letters of Piersol and the four ransom letters were not in the same handwriting, asserting that the ransom letters were not in disguised handwriting, because, he said, one using a disguised hand could not maintain an identical style throughout four letters written at different times.

The defense today showed that Holland Keet, father of the baby, received many other kidnaper letters besides the four the State contends were written by Piersol. When they put Keet on the stand he testified he received four such letters from St. Louis, some of them demanding ransom, before the baby's body was found. Keet said he had turned the letter over to the prosecuting officials, but they failed to produce them.

Several associates of Piersol and members of his family testified Piersol could not drive an automobile. This was intended to refute the testimony of Paul Lochmann, a caretaker at the Country Club, that on the night of the kidnaping, May 30, he saw Piersol drive an automobile up to the club shortly after Mr. and Mrs. Keet arrived there, and drive away again.

Relatives Try for Alibi.

The testimony of Piersol's mother and sister was directed toward an attempt to prove an alibi for Claude. Maud Piersol, the sister, asserted that when she returned from a theater about 11 o'clock the night of the kidnaping, Claude was in bed at home. She said she knew because she looked to see before locking the door, the last one in always locking the door. The next night, she testified, which was the first night Keet made an auto trip to try to recover the child by following the directions of the kidnapers, Claude was in bed when she came home at 11:30. She testified that she had planned to stay all night with a girl friend, but returned home when a storm threatened. She said she had told Claude he might sleep in her bed, and had to arouse him out of it when she returned.

The mother corroborated these statements and fixed the time of Claude's return the first night at about 10 o'clock and the second night about 9:30. She testified that during the time immediately preceding and after the kidnaping Claude never missed a meal at home and was never out unusually late at night. She and others testified that Claude was operated on in November of last year and that he had not been working because the doctor told him not to.

Piersol testified that in January he met at the Colonial Hotel, in Springfield, a man who said he was Patrick Riley, and showed what purported to be a United States Deputy Marshal's commission signed by Federal Judge Landis of Chicago. This man claimed to be in Springfield for the purpose of arresting a man on a Federal charge, for whom he said there was a reward of $1000. He represented to Piersol, according to the testimony, that he needed some help, and asked Piersol to assist and get two or three others. The arrest was to be accomplished quietly, so the police would have no hand in it, and the man would have to be held a day or two in some secret place. This man's name was given as Langford, Piersol said, but declared Riley never told him the nature of the charge against him.

Pointed Out Man Wanted.

One day, the witness continued, Riley took him down Elm street and pointed out the man they wanted as he came out of a house in the 400 block. This house, Piersol said, was next door to the home of C. A. Clement, the jeweler, whom Piersol and others are charged with attempting to kidnap. Piersol then named other men, including Dick Carter and Taylor Adams, whom he asked to go in to help get the man they wanted.

The witness then told of making five or six trips at night in an automobile to this house and waiting in front for the man to come out. They did not again see him, they said. He said Cletus Adams drove on two of these nights and Maxie Adams on two. He denied that he had ever gone to the Keet home with Dick Carter or that he said anything to Carter about kidnaping a baby.

The only time he was ever at the Keet home, he said, was on the afternoon of May 29, when he went out there in a delivery truck with Cletus Adams. Piersol testified he had been to the Crenshaw place, where the baby's body was found, only twice in his life, the last time between Christmas and New Year's last, when he and Cletus Adams and Dick Carter stopped to get a drink.

Piersol testified that in St. Louis he was kept 23 days in the police holdover and questioned eight to '0 times a day and often in the night by Chief Allender. He denied that he had ever made any admission of connection with the Keet kidnaping and that he had been a German spy. In explaining discrepancies between his testimony today and statements he made to Springfield, Kansas City and St. Louis authorities, Piersol asserted that he had been coerced into talking while held in the various jails.

In rebuttal the prosecution called Judges Farrington and Johnson of Springfield, who related the stories Piersol had told them of being commissioned a Captain by Germany. Chief of Detectives Allender of St. Louis, also called in rebuttal, testified that prisoners in the St. Louis holdover had nothing to sleep on but a board.

U. S. HAS EVIDENCE OF A NATION-WIDE MILK PRICE PLOT

Producers Said to Have Raised $5000 to Put "Friend" on Hoover Commission.

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—Evidence to prove a nation-wide plot by milk producers to raise the price of that commodity was presented to Federal authorities here today by Attorney-General Brundage of Illinois.

Ramifications of the alleged conspiracy, as indicated in Brundage's evidence, included the raising of a fund of $5000 to place a man friendly to the Dairymen's International League on the Hoover commisison, formed to fix a just price for milk. This was said to be done in Utica, N. Y., last July.

The evidence also showed an effort on the part of dairymen to see President Wilson on the price-fixing issue and to boycott dealers in Pittsburg and elsewhere who refused to enter the price-boosting agreement. The effort to see President Wilson failed.

E. D. Perrigo, assistant to Robert Childs, special United States Attorney-General, made the demand for the evidence upon Brundage, after learning that the documents in the latter's possession were of a more conclusive nature than any collected by State's Attorney Hoyne and other officials who are seeking indictments against local milk producers. Perrigo asked for the letter which told of the $5000 appropriation. It was said to have been written by President B. D. Cooper of the Dairymen's International League, to W. J. Kittle, secretary of the Milk Producers' Association, Chicago district, and related to the placing of a "friend" on the Hoover commission. Kittle is said to have replied that he deemed such action indiscreet and evidently no further move in that direction was taken.

The evidence at hand is said to show that the October price of milk in Chicago—13 cents—was the aftermath of a meeting of milk producers held here Sept. 21, last. Kittle's notice to the president of the association regarding this meeting says: "The months of November, December, January, February and March are to be adjusted later."

DETECTIVE MAKES A FEW 'PASSES

Negro Officer Wins $110 Before Raiding Game.

One of four negro detectives of the East St. Louis Police Department did not let business interfere with pleasure last night when he and his companions were assigned to raid a negro dice game in a basement beneath the barber shop of William Davis, Second street and St. Clair avenue.

The detective gained entrance to the game by disguising himself in overalls and jumper, smeared with lime and cement. He joined the gamblers at their pastime and succeeded in winning $110 before he announced to them his real mission. His fellow officers were waiting outside the shop. Nineteen negroes were arrested.

TRAVELING FOOD DEMONSTRATIONS BEGIN TOMORROW

Portable Kitchens Will Be Used to Show Housewives How to Conserve Wheat.

The Women's Central Committee on Food Conservation will tomorrow inaugurate a system of traveling demonstration kitchens with which to educate St. Louis housewives in the art of conserving the world's wheat supply by utilizing cornmeal and other foodstuffs in the making of substitutes for wheat bread.

The first of these traveling demonstration kitchens will start out from the Boatmen's Bank Building, headquarters of the Food Conservation Committee, at 2 p. m. It will consist of a complete portable kitchen, mounted on a motor truck, with a complement of four—a chauffeur, a bugler, a demonstrator and speaker, who will outline at each stopping place the necessity existing for the conservation of wheat and the economizing of bread, and the need of cooperation on the part of each individual with President Wilson's food conservation program and Food Administrator Hoover's recommendations towards carrying it out.

The truck kitchens will go from place to place through the city, halting in the markets, at street corners and elsewhere where a desirable audience can be congregated, and show, by actual demonstration, how Americans can, when need arises, live independent of wheat and the ordinary breads of today. Cornbread will be baked and rye and other forms of emergency war bread will be demonstrated.

Mrs. Frank Bielock, in charge of the routing of the kitchens, conferred yesterday with Director of Streets C. M. Talbert, who has placed the machinery of his office at the disposal of the women, to make easy their passage through the streets.

$9000 RAISED IN CAMPAIGN FOR BOOKS FOR SOLDIERS

The total contributions to the books-for-soldiers campaign, which closed last night, was about $9,000. The St. Louis War Library Council has $8,200 in cash and several teams and districts have not reported.

Four public schools will take up collections tomorrow. Individual solicitations will continue a few days in an effort to brng the fund up to $10,000.

The children of the public schools contributed $1,581.72, in the school collections Friday. The Rose Fanning School turned in the largest donations, a total of $67.22. The Farragut School was second with $66.22.

The Catalogue Department of the Public Library turned in $805, the largest collections of the library branches. The Carondelet district will turn in more than $1,000.

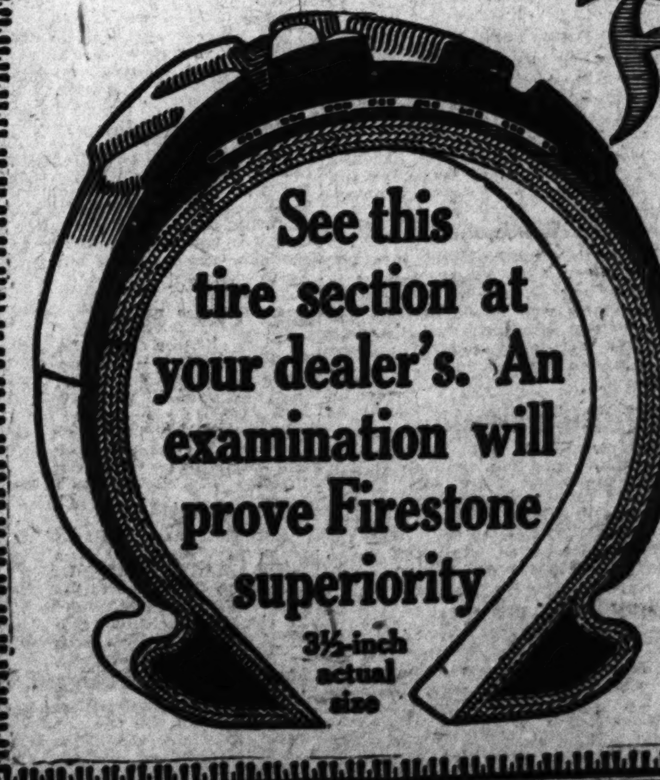
This is the record of Firestone SUPER CORD TIRES

TALK to the users of Firestone Super Cord Tires wherever you see them. They have a message worth many dollars to you. Lower cost per mile in tires and gasoline counts big these days, so here, there, everywhere Firestone Super Cords have become the goal of motorists.

These are Firestone Super Cord features that produce extraordinary performance. Numerous walls of stout cords. Pure gum separates cords and prevents friction. Extra thick cushion layer of pure gum under tread absorbs shocks and protects inner body of tire. Tough, thick, resilient tread.

Bead, which holds tire in rim, strongly reinforced, as is also the side wall. Hinge or bending point of tire thrown high where strain has least effect. Result, Most Miles per Dollar.

Another step forward in Firestone FABRIC TIRES



See this tire section at your dealer's. An examination will prove Firestone superiority
3½-inch actual size

THE outstanding feature of all Firestone accomplishments is continuous advancement. Firestone never stands still. Here are the definite improvements: Tougher Tread; More Cushion Stock; More Rubber Between Layers; Reinforcement in Side Wall.

See cross section of tire at your dealer's. A brief explanation will convince you that Firestone on Fabric as well as Cord Tires means Most Miles per Dollar.

That motorists find extra values in Firestone Tires is proved by the fact that our sales increased 72 per cent this year up to September 1st. Our total business this year will exceed $60,000,000.

PIKERS' OFFENSIVE STRENGTH CARRIES THEM TO VICTORY

Rutherford's Eleven, Weak on Defense, Opens Local Season by Taking 24 to 16 Contest From Lombard.

JACKSON OF VISITORS IS STAR OF BATTLE

Halfback Makes All Points Scored Against Locals—Attack of Washington Is Versatile, One Pass Netting Touchdown.

The Washington University football eleven opened its season on Francis Field yesterday afternoon by defeating Raymond Jackson and 10 other players representing Lombard College of Galesburg, Ill., 26 to 14. That score hardly does Jackson and his teammates justice for their work against the local varsity team, as it does not tell the true tale of the struggle.

The score does account for the three touchdowns, two goals after touchdowns and two field goals amassed by the Pikeway players and also of the two touchdowns and subsequent boots of the aforementioned Mr. Jackson; but that is all. One had to be there to know that Lombard made 16 first downs, while Washington forced the linesmen to move 11 times.

Maroons Best on Offense.

But in spite of its failure to make as many first downs, Washington did gain as much ground as its Illinois rivals. Lombard, or rather Jackson—gained irregularly in spurts which would net an onrush of about 50 yards and then eventuate in a halt. The maroon players were formidable offensively throughout. That it was variegated is evidenced in the fact that one of the successful forward passes resulted in a clean-cut touchdown, while the rest of the ground gained was split by straight football and the open game.

The bustling Benway at quarterback in his 1917 debut showed decided improvement over his form of last year. Benway ran the team flawlessly, returned punts in a manner to make Pikeway guards think of Dike Nipher, and took his turn at running with the ball. The backs all showed individual capability, but failed to shine especially in the formation of interference. The line needs development for under-fire play.

Washington scored early in the first period when Kling toed a kick from placement from the 30-yard line. He was enabled to do this after Rowan had intercepted a forward pass on his 35-yard line and ran to Lombard's 33-yard line. A Lombard penalty then advanced the ball five yards. Later in the period Kling tried to duplicate this feat but failed.

Some snappy running by Gil Meyer and Rowan in the second period carried the ball from near midfield to the Lombard 6-yard line, whence Berger carried the ball over on a third buck at the line. Kling kicked. Another touchdown was made in this period, after Lombard kicked to Benway on its 35-yard line. "Ben" wriggled 15 yards before being pulled down. Line smashes put the pigskin in the shadow of the post, whence Berger smashed center for the remaining distance. Captain Kling added the additional point, making the score 17 to 0.

The final Washington touchdown came as the direct result of a Lombard fumble. Neuberg, the vistors' safety man, fumbled Rowan's spiral and Bryant rushed down on the ball. The first pop out of the box, Kling was standing on the Illinoisans' goal line with arms outstretched for Rowan's pass. He scampered around the posts with the ball. No goal.

Enter Mr. Jackson.

Here is where Jackson, who had been persistently on the job, first did material damage to Washington. He almost single-handed carried the ball some 40 yards down the avenue to the Pikers' 7-yard line, whence he ripped a hole in the right side of the locals' line for the first touchdown. He then kicked goal.

Washington added three points in this period via the educated toe of Kling. This was also a placement kick and from almost the same spot as the first one. In the fourth period, Jackson intercepted a forward pass in his territory and raced to Washington's 12-yard line. He seemed goalward bound, until Meyer caught up with him and brought him down by a leaping tackle. In two plays Jackson was over the line and he added the last point by another kick.

Forward Passes Bring Yeatman 14 to 0 Victory

Resorting to aerial play, the Yeatman High School team defeated the Principia aggregation, 14 to 0, in a closely contested affair at High School Field yesterday. Although outweighing their opponents 10 pounds to the man, Yeatman used the passing game exclusively. Principia followed its opponents' style of play and likewise depended mostly upon passes to gain ground.

The two teams battled on an even basis the first quarter. Near the end of the initial period a long pass, Hausladen to Thursby for 25 yards, paved the way for a touchdown. The whistle intervened but on the first play of the second quarter Hausladen plunged through center for the first score. Winkleman missed goal.

The prize "bone of the afternoon's play was made in the early part of the second half. Winkleman on the kickoff, aided by the wind, booted the ball over Principia's goal line, and instead of touching the ball down and bringing it out to the 20-yard line, Tallmen attempted to run the kick back and as a result was downed behind his own goal for a safety.

Yeatman continuer its overhead game and during the middle of the third period succeeded in making another score. Hausladen to Thursby netted 30 yards and a touchdown. Winkleman again missed goal.

Thursby and Hausladen played the stellar roles for the Interscholastic team, while Murphy did the best work for Principia. The latter played a smashing game at left end, breaking up plays and making deadly tackles.

The lineup:

WHEREIN THE SCALPER IS GIVEN A NEAR KNOCKOUT

CHICAGO, Oct. 13.—Scalpers of world's series tickets got a severe jolt today after reaping a golden harvest during the first two games played in Chicago.

Box seats tickets purchased for $5 and which speculators sold for $25 and $30 for the first two games were disposed of today for $5 and $6. Cold weather and the two beatings the Sox got in New York somewhat dampened the spirit of the Chicagoans. Scalpers sold reserved seats in the grand stand today for $2 and $3.

Most Imperfect Day of Title Series Comes to an End With White Sox Again One Up

"Dope" Works Out on Both Russell and Sallee

Rariden's Failure to Throw to Second in Seventh Inning Turned Tide of Battle, Says Hugh Fullerton.

With Score Once Tied Chicagoans Rushed at McGraw's Faltering Clan Like a Set of Wild Men.

By Hugh S. Fullerton.

CHICAGO, Oct. 13.

BASEBALL'S championship vanished off the Chicago horizon today, reappeared and as the end of one of the most imperfect days in history came the White Sox were one up. They won 8 to 5, after a wild and wooly contest, which left the fans alternately cussing and cheering each team.

First the Sox exploded, exploded after a game effort to rally. Joy departed from the Stockyards and dope was smeared all over the horizon. It looked as if Rowland's judgment in sending "Reb" Russell to the slab had wrecked Chicago's hopes, that the game and set belonged to the Giants, for although Eddie Cicotte responded gallantly when called to the rescue, three hard games in a week proved too much. Under the spirited attack of the Giants, the White Sox broke in their defense, and broke badly, until the Giants assumed a lead that seemed safe, excepting to those who were watching closely the work of Sallee.

"Dope" Works Out Again.

The "dope" was that Sallee never could last out a game against the White Sox during the remainder of the series. The dope also was that the Giants would slough the life out of Reb Russell, and it was up to the dope to work out. It started working right off the reel, for Russell pitched to three men, passed one, allowed another to single, and then allowed Benny Kauff to double—a double which was almost a home run and which would have been a home run on the Polo Grounds. Thereupon Russell disappeared.

It would have been well for the hopes of the Giants had Sallee disappeared with him for he was not pitching well, was not effective, excepting with his brain work and his control, which was fair only in the spots when needed. Twice McGraw saw him going down for the last time and had other pitchers warmed up, but each time Sal grabbed the straws and dragged himself to the surface to regain breath.

Sallee Not in True Form.

Not at any time did he seem to be working well, nor did he appear to have the White Sox baffled as did Benton and Schupp, yet they could not get the right start. Even when they did get a start, they could not gain because the Giants would gain right back. Three times Gandil had been up without making a hit and had he delivered at any time the White Sox would have been back on earth and back in the hearts of their friends.

There was a battle going on down there on the field for the boys were getting excited calling each other names, and riding all the base runners. It being the official opening of the football season, the teams staged a kicking and tackling contest that rapidly bred disorder and real feeling. Several times they stuck out their jaws at each other and were mad. But while the indications were that something was going to happen to Sallee in a short time, McGraw, being a persistent and optimistic cuss, kept him in there because he realized that if Sallee got away with the game the Giants would have a soft time winning the championship.

Time for Closing Curtain.

Perhaps he banked on their luck for the day, the Giants having won the toss that settled the seventh game on New York, if any seventh game is necessary. The tipoff on Sallee was that Eddie Collins and Joe Jackson were hitting him hard. Whenever these two hit a left-handed pitcher hard, it is time for closing the curtains.

In the seventh the White Sox came rampaging from behind in one of those crashing matches that have made them famous. They mauled their way to within one run of a tie and it was up to someone to rescue him. No one did. The Sox had started one of their real bombardments, one of those rallies in which they have come from behind so often. They were crashing, and under the barrage and the bomb dropping the Giants broke even worse than the White Sox had done.

Before they got through, the infield was filled with shell craters, where various athletes had blown up and the White Sox, rampant and howling were the riders instead of the ridees. The Giants changed from heroes to "dubs' in a minute or two, raged and fought while the Sox accused them of blowing up. They blew up all right, just as the Sox did earlier in the game, but this time the "blow" was fatal.

Even Wolfgang Was Better?

Future generations may want to know what the trouble was. The trouble with the Sox was that Rowland sent Russell to the slab when all the dope indicated that someone else, even Mel Wolfgang was better. Yet he sent Reb in. When Reb beat his quick retreat he left an unfinished task that added too much to the strain on the already over-worked Cicotte and Eddie did not look to be the pitcher he was in his other two games.

That McGraw should have left Sallee in to be slaughtered indicates that McGraw either believed Sal too lucky to be whipped or else had a tremendous respect for the punch of the White Sox. There was never a time during the game that Sallee was safe, and the slaughter that came in the seventh and eighth might have as well happened in any other inning. McGraw was ready to yank him off the slab in the first if Joe Jackson had hit, but Joe flied out and McGraw hung on as long as possible.

Rariden's Play Turns Game.

But the one play that turned the game as it developed was made by Bill Rariden. It was a play of judgment. Whether or not Rariden had escaped with it, ball players will forever blame him for losing his nerve. There was a runner on first base and one on third. The score still was 5 to 4 in favor of the Giants and a pinch hitter was at bat. The runner on first was ordered to go to second and draw the throw and Rariden threw to the pitcher. The play in a thousand years was to shoot to second for neither runner was fast. Rariden played safety first. Sallee whirled and shot to second. The ball escaped and the tying run went over the plate.

From that instant the Giant case was hopeless. Once tied they were beaten, for the White Sox rushed to the assault like wild men. They had seen the game and probably the championship lost and had recovered it. They were not to be denied. The manner in which they attacked Sallee in the following inning was irresistable. They went over the top and around the end, and before they had gone far, Sallee was withdrawn and Perritt sent in to stop the slaughter. He stopped the White Sox with one more run, but the Giants were whipped.

It probably will go down in history as the worst, and yet the most exciting game played in a world's series. Each man was at the breaking point all the time. The dope indicated that the pitching days of this series are all over and that from now on will be the crashing era. But the crashing ought not to be resounding in the Monday's battle at New York, because McGraw will send Benton to the slab and Rowland probably will be forced to use Faber again.

Both Gasping for Breath.

Both teams were gasping for breath when they left for New York tonight. The White Sox are jubilantly confident, but Rowland is worried over the pitching problem. The players are angry and determined. The rough tactics of the Giants, which twice came near starting fights yesterday, are resented and no player with delicate nerves should apply for a job on either team.

The infield play yesterday was vicious, especially on the part of Herzog and Fletcher who blocked and interfered with every runner who rounded second and escaped unpenalized, although once they probably would have been penalized had not the ball gone to center and allowed the runners to go the limit anyhow.

As to the series it looks now as if the White Sox will grab it. They have the edge. They have the confidence. They admit Benton will be a tough nut to crack, but they say no pitcher ever has shut them out and escaped a beating the next time.

White Sox Lose Toss to Decide Site of Seventh Game of Series

Giants Gain Advantage of Playing Extra Contest on Home Grounds, Should It Be Necessary—Faber Only Hurler to Win Two Games—Holke Tries Crude Stuff on "Silk" O'Loughlin.

By John E. Wray.

Chicago, Oct. 13.

THE thirteenth day of the month promised to be unlucky for the White Sox when, at 1:30 p. m., this afternoon, representatives of the club lost the toss for the seventh and deciding game location choice—should one be necesary. It is now certain that if the Giants win the next fray, the hardest test of the series will have to be played by the Chicagoans away from home.

Off for New York.

Both teams left early this evening for the east, where the series will be resumed Monday. McGraw still had a distinct pitching advantage, inasmuch as his two winning twirlers are available. Benton will have had five days' rest and will no doubt be the one called upon by McGraw Monday.

Russell Is Heartbroken.

Rowland's pitching choice is a matter of conjecture. "Reb" Russell is beaten, and heartbroken as well. Whether he will be asked to come back or not is uncertain. His rout, however, may be considered like that of Schupp's first game—due to excitement.

Faber Gets 2 Victories.

Faber finished out the game in splendid shape, and the choice will rest between him and Cicotte. These two will be reserved to at least start the remaining two games, should two be needed. Faber gains credit for two world's series wins, thanks to two innings yesterday.

Empty Seats a-Plenty.

Two successive defeats and cold weather played havoc with the attendance today. The stands were not all filled though the vacancies were entirely in the bleacher and pavilions. The reserved sections appeared to have been all sold. Nevertheless, scalpers were unloading tickets at $2 each late in the forenoon.

Jim Thorpe, the Indian, broke into the box score and that was all. The moment Rowland shifted from a left to a right hand pitcher, in the first inning, Thorpe was out of the running and Robertson was substituted.

Robertson Is Hitting.

Robertson owes nobody an apology for his world's series showing. He made three hits yesterday and went to first his other time up on an error. This makes 10 hits in eighteen times at bat for this player in the big series.

The nearest approach to this record by a White Sox is the performance of Eddie Collins who has made eight hits in five games.

Cold Affects Sallee.

Slim Sallee doesn't like the cold. His collapse was chiefly responsible for the White Sox victory. While Sal was good, his defense was strong and his team gave him five runs. The average world's series game of the past has required but four runs by the victors.

Silk "Calls" Holke.

Holke pulled a queer one in the seventh and didn't make one bit of impression on Silk O'Loughlin. Fletcher had just doubled when Holke swung at a fast one. It glanced off his bat with an audible tap, but to the surprise of the crowd Holke immediately fell writhing to the ground. Imperturbably Silk jerked his thumb over his shoulder at the same time shouting: "foul strike."

Still Holke, now surrounded by his teammates lay prone on the ground. After a time he decided to rise and started to first base to take his place there. Silk motioned him to his place at the plate. Rubbing his head he went back to bat, his bluff called.

He's a Different Muggsy.

Holke acted it pretty well at that, and fooled some of the fans. McGraw several times toned his rampant Giants down, when they threatened to shock the National Commission by some rough riding exhibitions. We'll say McGraw is tamed.

MULFORD CAPTURES FIRST HONORS IN GRAND PRIX AUTO EVENT IN WINDY CITY

CHICAGO, Oct. 13.—Ralph Mulford captured first honors in the Grand Prix race meet at the Speedway today by winning the first 50-mile event, finishing second in another and third in the 20-mile dash.

The spectators were given a thrill in the final 50-mile event, when cars driven by Tom Milton and Tom Alley collided while speeding at the rate of more than 100 miles an hour. The accident occurred while they were rounding a corner. Neither was hurt except for a few minor bruises.

The big event of the day, scheduled for 100 miles, was cut to 50 because of the slim attendance. Probably 500 persons were in the grandstand and not more than 3000 in the entire park.

Coming from behind in the final lap, Mulford shot into the lead and won the first 50-mile race in a thrilling finish, with Pete Henderson and Tom Alley. The time was 28:18:17. Mulford averaged 106 miles an hour. Henderson took the second 50 mile spin in 28:30:05 with Mulford second. They were the only entrants to finish.

The first event at 20 miles went to Tom Alley in 11:22:10. Gaston Chevrolet finished second and Mulford third.

MINNESOTA RUNS OVER SOUTH DAKOTA STATE

MINEAPOLS, Minn., Oct. 13.—Minnesota overwhelmed South Dakota State College 64 to 0 in its initial game of the season, here today. The Gophers, playing mostly old-style football, circled the ends of plunged off tackle repeatedly for long gains. Arntson, Lanpi and Bierman were the star performers, each advancing the ball more than 30 yards on several ocasions. Only one forward pass of the four attempted by the Gophers was successful, a throw from Arnston to Flinn netting 25 yards.

COMISKEY HOPES SERIES WILL TERMINATE MONDAY

CHICAGO, Oct. 13.—Charles A. Comiskey, owner of the White Sox, said tonight that he hopes the series will wind up in New York Monday with Chicago the world's champions.

"The White Sox finally found themselves," said Comiskey, "and I look for them to win the championship."

Winning Pitcher of Wild Contest

URBAN FABER.

The right-hander went to the hill with the score tied at the start of the eighth inning and retired six Giants as fast as they came to the plate in the final two frames. The Sox scored three runs in the eighth thereby giving him the victory, his second of the series.

HERE ARE THE FIGURES ON PITCHING FEATS OF WHITE SOX AND GIANTS

CHICAGO, Oct. 13.—The quartet of Chicago pitchers pitched 127 balls in the nine halves of innings in whch they faced the Giants, while the pair of New York hurlers used 117 in the eight halves which they pitched. It was very nearly an even break in the matter of expending energy.

Forty-five balls were celled on the locals and 46 on the visitors. Thirty strikes accumulated to the credit of the winers and 25 to the losers of the game. The luck on foul strikes broke for the Chicago slabmen as Giant batsmen had 16 of these called on them while the White Sox yielded but six.

A summary of the work of the pitchers follows:

OHIO STATE RUNS OVER NORTHWESTERN IN BIG 9 FEATURE CONTEST, 40 TO 0

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 13.—Outclassing Northwestern University in every department of the game and presenting a stonewall defense Ohio State University, last year's Western Conference champions, today defeated the "Purple" warriors, in the first conference game of the former's schedule, 40 to 0.

The combined efforts of "Chick" Harley, all-American halfback, who performed at right half, and Stinchcomb at left, together with some fast work by the ends and tackles, worked the downfall of the Purple.

TRINITY IN A 9-9 TIE.

SIOUX CITY, Io., Oct. 13.—Trinity College's nine-point lead at the end of the third quarter in the gridiron battle here today was not large enough to land them a winner, the South Dakota Wesleyans tying it up in the last period of play.

ED COLLINS COMES THROUGH WITH HIT WHEN NEEDED MOST

With Result of Battle, and Possibly Series, Squarely Up to Him, He Drives J. Collins Over Plate.

By John E. Wray,

CHICAGO, Oct. 13.

"CLASS will tell," was the burden of the White Sox rooters' refrain as some 30,000 of them filed out from Comiskey Park here this afternoon, following the 8 to 5 victory of Rowland's heavy artillerymen over the Giants, in the fifth struggle for the world's championship.

And it was a remarkable story that "Class" had to relatefi inasmuch as the battle, as it unfolded, revealed a gameness, both collective and individual, on the part of the victors, the like of which is not on record in recent world's series history. It is a story of an uphill fight, fought and won under the worst conceivable handicaps.

Starting with the utter collapse of a first-string pitcher in the first inning and with a two-run handicap imposed by Russell's inability to control either the ball or his stage fright, the Sox blundered blindly through a maze of bad luck and worse playing, but seemingly hugging firmly the hope of getting to the enemy's pitching ere the ninth inning was over.

Tragedy of Inefficiency.

Their play, during this period, was a tragedy of inefficiency; and a recovery, to the stands, in the face of the peppery play and the smart hitting of the Giants, seemed as remote as Timbuctoo or the mythical Crocker land.

The team, thrown into the depths by the weak showing of its first pitcher, seemed at times on the verge of panic. In the course of the game, no less than six errors were officially made, along with others that the scorer mercifully censored out of the box score.

Up to the sixth inning the game was a horror, with the Giants seeming to stand out in absolute superiority, while the Sox resembled a lot of rank quitters.

That they regained their poise as they later did was sufficient proof that the club has no streak. On the contrary, the actions of the McGraw Prussians, when at last the White Sox put the pressure on them, indicates that the club is neither game nor sportsmanlike.

"Buck" Weaver Bumps Herzog.

When the Sox bats began to batter the defense of the enemy, out came Fletcher and Herzog with their little box of rough stuff. The first sign of it came in the fifth inning when Weaver, going from first to third on Schalk's single, found the basepath blocked by Herzog, who deliberately stood with his back to the runner, as the latter came thundering down the line. Nor did he budge. Weaver, with the right of way in his favor, crashed full steam into Herzog, sending him spinning, while the crowd roared "good boy," at Weaver, and "put him out" at Herzog. The umpires warned the Giant second sacker, while Weaver tore around and arrived safe at his destination, despite the palpable interference.

Again, following the seventh inning, when the good ship Sallee from Higginsport was almost sunk by the fire of the enemy, Fletcher ran up to Rowland and started something which included menacing gestures as well as words. Billy Evans hotfooted over from third base and pried them apart before hostilities could begin on a world's series field. What a scandal, it might have been.

Rowland's Men Battered Down Every Defense of Giants, Including Roughness

WITH the score tied the nagging reached its height, in the eighth inning and bitterness crept into every infield contact. But the big bats of the White Sox battered down all the defenses the enemy ever had, rough stuff included, and tore their nerve to shreds. Misplays, as raw as those the White Sox had perpetrated earlier in the game, showed that their nerve under fire was nothing to boast of, while they had no heart to bear their tribulations with good grace, as the Sox had done.

The terrific fire of the eighth inning which finished Sallee, and gave the Sox a lead of three runs utterly broke their spirit, and Faber, who went into the box for the Sox in the eighth inning, held them cowed and helpless to the end of the topsyturvey contest.

Squarely Up to Ed Collins.

Standing out from the mass of incidents which led up to the overthrow of the haughty Giants was the work and the figure of Eddie Collins, to whom the game was squarely put up in an unmistakable manner. Had he failed there is little doubt but the New Yorkers would have gained a toehold, on their waning nerve and might have held off defeat and disaster.

Collins was in the game up to his neck all through. Understand that he made three hits, scored two runs and drove in the count that won the game. But it was the circumstances which made the last achievement that lent so much glamor to his work and added to his previous reputation for being the best "money player" in major league baseball.

John Collins was first up in the eighth with the score tied. He followed up the assault on Sal, begun in the previous inning with a crashing single to right field. With only one run needed to win McMullon sacrificed like a reliable professional. That brought up Eddie Collins and set him face to face with the most important, the most responsible situation he had confronted in many a day, perhaps, and all his baseball career.

A Fine Situation.

Here was the situation:

The world's series was tied 2—2.

The game was tied 5—5.

The toss for the location of the seventh game, if one should be needed, had already been won by New York.

And $30,000, the difference between the winners' and the losers' share hinged on a victory in today's game for it is conceded that the Sox would have had scant hope, had the Giants won the fifth fray.

Thus, it was a $30,000 money punch that was demanded of Collins. It meant that his team had been saved $1200 apiece, or a fine chance at that sum.

Collins There With Hit.

The responsibility did not faze Collins, he took one ball and then, when the next one floated across right where he wanted it, hammered out the needed single—a clean resounding one. The blow that saved his team from hopeless disorganization and perhaps a considerable money loss.

The blow scored J. Collins with the winning run. It broke the backbone of Sallee and caused the Giant team to waver at once, their nerve gone and their defense and attack ruined.

Jackson, who had been hitting the ball hard during the day and who also totalled three safe hits, rifled one through second base on the hit-and-run and the downfall of the Giants was complete. The Giants began throwing the ball round and Collins scored on a wild throw. Felsch came to bat with the Sox two runs in the lead and weary, Sal threw one ball at Felsch and was yanked. He had been allowed to stay too long in the opinion of most grandstand managers.

Perritt took Sal's place just in time to have Felsch smash one to center, scoring Jackson who had edged around the bases on Zimmerman's previous wild throw.

That was the end of this weird game. The details can be read elsewhere in the Post-Dispatch, but when you finish reading them all, the more you will appreciate that it was Collins' response under the severest pressure that pleased the fans and probably saved his teammates a few farms in Indiana or elsewhere.

PEN FIELD WORK OF INDIANA TEAM BEATS ST. LOUIS U.

Billikens Never Get Beyond 25-Yard Line and Are Swamped by Hoosiers, 40-0.

GALLAGHER BREAKS NOSE

Tackle of Blue and White Is Injured While Making Line Buck During Contest.

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Oct. 13.—Brilliant open-field running featured the Indiana play in the game won from St. Louis University today, 40 to 0. The expected open attack of the Billikens failed to materialize, as Coach Rademacher's men used only one forward pass during the entire contest and that resulted in a gain of only one yard.

Early reports from St. Louis had reached the Indiana camp that the wearers of the blue and white were the best exponents of the open game in the Southwest, and for this reason Coach Stelhm had devoted nearly all of the week in building up a defense to stop this kind of play.

Indiana resorted to the pass four times for a total of 43 yards. One pass netted 34 yards as Risley fell across the goal line.

Howard Makes 45-Yard Run.

Just one minute after the initial kick off, Howard, full back of the Crimson eleven, eluded the entire visiting team and raced 45 yards for the first marker. Coach Stiehm's men kept up their whirlwind attack, piling up a total of 20 points in the first period.

The game then slowed up, as several substitues were sent in, and during the third period almost the entire second string eleven was playing. Coach Rademacher made only two changes in his lineup during the entire game and one of them was forced by the injury to right tackle Gallagher, who in making a line buck, broke his nose.

St. Louis' attack consisted principally in smashes at the line and attempted end runs, but little ground was gained and first down was made by the visitors only twice during the contest. The Billikens never came nearer the Hoosier goal than the 25-yard line.

After the game Coach Stiehm congratulated Rademacher on the fine sportsmanship and clean playing shown by his men. The victory made the third straight for Indiana this season.

McKINLEY HIGH WINNER OF EASY CONTEST WITH ST. LOUIS U. FRESHMEN

Sweeping its opponents off their feet with a rushing and smoothly directed attack, the strong McKinley High machine defeated the highly touted St. Louis University Freshmen on the University Campus yesterday morning 17 to 0. Forcing the university players to take to defensive playing throughout the fracas, the high school backs experienced little difficulty in advancing the ball. Siebert and Spieler skirted the ends for long gains, while George Thompson bucked the line for numerous gains.

The final period was marred by an infant free-for-all scramble on the part of the players, when one of the McKinley men and one of the St. Louis players had a mixup. The trouble was quieted by the referee and play resumed.

Only once did St. Louis advance the ball any creditable distance and then the ball was brought back on account of an offside play. Hart, the former C. B. C. star, broke through the line, was momentarily stopped by Siebert. Hart, however, shook him off and dashed 50 yards before he was downed, but one of his teammates was offside, nullifying his gain. Hart, Coone, Spieler and Siebert played exceptionally well.

The lineup:

25 Players Take Part in Most Spectacular Clash of Series

could be heard for blocks. Little time was lost in getting into action, and the Giants, first to bat, rolled up a two-run lead before the White Sox could check them.

Russell Departs Early.

Russell was given some encouraging applause as he walked to the rubber at the start of the game. He missed the outside corner of the plate four successive times and Burns walked. Herzog cracked the third pitch offered him for a single to right and Burns went to third. Kauff connected with the first one offered him and hit the right field fence, scoring Burns, putting Herzog on third and making second easily himself. That ended Russell's attempt to pitch a world series game and Cicotte took up the burden.

At this stage the White Sox showed some of their best defensive work. Zimmerman was "booed" when he faced Cicotte; but he cracked a hot grounder to Weaver. Buck bluffed a throw to first, then threw home and Herzog was caught on the line and chased down, Weaver to Schalk. Kauff took third and Zimmerman reached first. Fletcher bounced to McMullin and another run was cut off at the plate, Schalk again making the putout. Zimmerman moved to second and Fletcher rested on first.

Because Cicotte, a right hander, was pitching, Robertson batted in place of Thorpe, the Indian having been nominated to play right field when Russell was announced as the home hurler. Robertson justified the "dope' by singling to center, Zimmerman scoring and Fletcher moving to third and Robertson to second on the throw home. Holke tapped to Cicotte and was thrown out.

Sox Fight Hard.

The Sox made a determined bid to even up in their half. John Collins hit Sallee's first offering and flied to Zimmerman. McMullin waited and walked. E. Collins singled and after Jackson had flied to Burns, Felsch hit to short. McMullin running from second, side-stepped the ball and Fletcher fumbled, filling the bases. Gandil, however, popped to Holke.

Rariden opened the Giants' second attack with a sharp single past Eddie Collins. Sallee bunted hard to Gandil and forced his catcher at second, Weaver taking the throw. Burns fanned, missing a "shine ball" for the third one. Weaver missed Herzog's easy grounder and Sallee went to second. Kauff was an easy out on a grounder to E. Collins. In Chicago's half Fletcher threw out Weaver and Schalk. Cicotte walked but John Collins fouled to Rariden.

Zimmerman was greeted by the usual "boo' when he opened the New York third inning. He responded with a "Texas leaguer," which dropped safely in right center because the Sox fielders were playing far back for him. Cicotte caught Heine off first, but Weaver missed Gandil's throw and the runner scrambled back to first. On the next pitch Fletcher lined the ball over third base. McMullin made a startling one-handed catch and easily doubled Zimmerman off first. Robertson bounced a hit off Cicotte's glove. Holke gave him the hit-and-run signal but struck out. The Giants' right fielder, not knowing three were out, slid desperately into second base and when the Sox let Schalk's superfluous throw roll to the outfield, he set sail for the plate. Lobert, coaching at third, finally stopped Robertson and sent him out to right field.

Chicago Scores a Run.

Chicago scored its first run and again had a chance to tie the score in its half. After McMullin had flied to right, E. Collins walked. Jackson was impatient, hit the first pitch and flied to Robertson. Flesch then doubled to the left field wall, scoring E. Collins from first. Burns held this hit to a double by playing it safely and getting the rebound on the first bounce. Gandil was up in the pinch again, but flied to Kauff.

The White Sox loked like losers in the fourth. They made three errors and these mixed with a brace of hits, gave the Giants two more runs. Rariden again started the attack with a single, this one glancing off the handle of his bat into rightfield. Sallee sacrificed successfully to Gandil unassisted, putting Rariden on second. Burns drove the run home with a single to right. In his anxiety to get Rariden at the plate, John Collins fumbled the hit and then threw wide to second, Burns sliding safely into the middle sack. On Herzog's grounder Mcmullin ran in front of weaver and the shortstop missed the ball. This put Burns on third. Gandil then fumbled Kauff's bounder, Burns scoring and Herzog going to third. Zimmerman hit into a fast double play, McMullin to E. Collins to Gandil.

Sallee retired the home team on six pitched balls. Zimmerman threw out Weaver, Schalk grounded out to Holko unassisted, and Cicotte flied out to Burns.

Giants Active in Fifth.

The visitors threatened to score again in the fifth. Fletcher lined straight into Jackson's glove but Robertson put his third hit into right field. Holke flied to Weaver and then Robertson stole second, making the base when E. Collins fell as he ran to take Schalk's throw. Rariden, already having two hits to his credit, was passed and the strategy proved sound when Sallee fanned. The crowd cheered Cicotte, taking what comfort it could at this stage of the game from the little pitcher's gameness.

It was Felsch's turn to fail in the pinch in the home half. John Collins had fanned and McMullin had flied to Kauff, when E. Collins made his second hit, a single to left. Jackson knocked a curve back at Sallee so fast that the pitcher saved himself from injury only by a quick blocking of the ball. The crowd rooted for another long hit from Felsch, but the latter grounded the first ball to Sallee and was an easy out at first.

The Giants did nothing effective in the sixth. Burns flied to Jackson and Herzog grounded out, E. Collins to Gandill. Kauff dropped a single in front of Jackson and stole second. Zimmerman endured another chorus of "booes," they cracked a sharp grounder just inside second. Eddie Collins skidded over, made a fine stop and threw Zim out by a step.

Risberg Starts Rally.

Risberg was the hero of a Sox rally that followed. After Gandill had grounded out, pitcher to first, Weaver shot a single between Zimmerman and Fletcher. Schalk immediately drove a hit through Herzog and Weaver went to third, despite Fletcher's and Herzog's attempts to block him. Risberg, wearing a big patch over a boil on his neck, took Cicotte's turn at bat and singled to right, scoring Weaver and putting Schalk on second. John Collins' grounder down the first base line resulted in his retirement by Holke, but advanced both runners. With the tying runs on second and third, McMullin's best was an easy grounder to Herzog, who threw him out.

Claude Williams pitched for Chicago in the seventh and retired the side on strikes although a run was scored between the outs. Fletcher started with a double to left, Robertson popped a bunt to Williams, who sat down as he reached for the ball and dropped it. Fletcher held second, thinking the pop up would be caught. Holke tried to bunt, the ball glancing off his bat and hitting him about the left ear. He sank to the ground, but after the trainer had worked over him, he took a fresh bite of tobacco and fouled the next pitch. He held his head while Schalk was retrieving the ball. On the next offering he struck out. Rariden delivered his third hit, scoring Fletcher and sending Robertson to second. Sallee and Burns fanned.

Chicago's Big Inning.

Chicago made its big rally in its half. E. Collins popped to Fletcher, but Jackson and Felsch singled to left, Gandil hit the first pitch to deep right field, scoring both runners and reaching second. With the tying runs again in sight, Weaver hit five fouls and then grounded out, Fletcher to Holke, Gandil taking third. This brought up Schalk and the catcher looked so dangerous he was walked purposely. Lynn batted for Williams and as he misser his second strike, Schalk started for second. Rariden threw to Sallee, who held Gandil on third, then wheeled and shot to second. Herzog missed the throw and it went to center field. Gandil scored and on Kauff's throw to the plate Schalk went to third. On the next pitch Lynn fanned, retiring the side.

Faber pitched in the eighth and the Giants did nothing. Herzog struck out on three balls; Kauff hit the next one to Faber and was thrown out and John Collins made a nice catch of Zimmerman's fly.

The Sox rightfielder opened the home team's winning attack with a "Texas leaguer" to right, Robertson just touching the ball after a hard run. McMullin sacrificed, Zimmerman to Holke and Eddie Collins drove the winning run home with a single to center. The Chicago players and rooters danced with delight and roared again when on the hit and run Jackson hit to right, sending E. Collins to third, Jackson went to second on Robertson's throw to head off Collins and when Zimmerman shot wildly to Fletcher to catch Jackson the Chicago captain galloped home and Jackson took third. Sallee then was taken out and Perritt was called upon to pitch to the exhuberant Sox. Felsch greeted him with a single to center, scoring Jackson. Ganudil flied to Burns and Felsch was an easy out stealing, Rariden to Fletcher.

The crowd did not like the way Fletcher blocked and tagged Felsch and hissed the New York shortstop when he came to bat the the start of the ninth. He grounded to Weaver and was out at first. The crowd started to depart and there was a rush for the exits when Robertson put up an easy fly for Jackson. Those who remained saw Holke ground out, McMullin to Gandil, for the final play.

MISSOURI AGAIN DEFEATED, 7 TO 6, BY KANSAS AGGIES

Hamilton's Failure to Kick Goal After Touchdown Proves Fatal to Tigers.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Oct. 13.—Missouri Valley football started today when the Kansas Aggies defeated the University of Missouri Tigers, 7 to 6, on Rollins Field. Capt. Hamilton's failure to kick goal from touchdown lost for Missouri the chance to tie, the same as last year, when Capt. Lansing failed to kick goal and the Aggies defeated the Tigers by the same score.

The Aggies scored in the third period, when Hinds, the 137-pound halfback, went through Capt. Hamilton for a touchdown after the Aggies had advanced the ball from the center of the field by line plunges. Capt. Randels kicked goal. Slusher, left end, scored in the final quarter for the Tigers, on a 15-yard forward pass from Morris, quarterback.

The first half of the game was closely contested with the Aggies having the best of the conflict. Both sides made several fumbles during this period which gave numerous chances to score. The inability of Slusher to make long punts and make them stay in the territory is one reason for Missouri's poor showing.

The Aggies outplayed the Tigers in every department of the game. The Aggies made 156 yards by rushes, Missouri 76; the Aggies completed three forward passes for 38 yards while Missouri made 40 yards by this method in two attempts. Missouri made five attempts at the passing game, the last two being long ones.

The Tigers were penalized 40 yards. The Aggies lost no ground in this way. Missouri made 9 first downs, the Aggies 16. Missouri punts averaged 26 yards, those of the Aggies 38.

Missouri rooters had considered the Aggies one of their strongest rivals for the 1917 season. The team which played here today was a veteran team going against a practically green line. The Aggie plays were more finished, but at no time were the Tigers befuddled.

In several plays Missouri could have used the forward pass effectively, but the team today was a completely different one from that which defeated William Jewell last Saturday.

Edward Grogan, Washington freshman coach, was on Rollins Field today marking the Aggie and Missouri plays.

The lineup:

Missouri (6)	Position	Kansas Aggies (7)
Slusher	Left end	Randels

JIMMY MURPHY DEFEATS AZZINE IN 12 ROUNDS AT SOUTH BROADWAY CLUB

Jimmy Murphy, the little South Side bantamweight, defeated Jimmy Azzine of New York quite handily in their 12-round bout at the South Broadway Athletic Club last night. Azzine was made to order for Murphy and while he showed aggressiveness at all times, Murphy repeatedly beat him to the punch.

The boys collided in the seventh round with the result that a deep gash above Azzine's left eye was opened. Subsequently, the blood from this wound almost blinded the Gothamite, although he rallied appreciably in the eleventh and twelfth. He did not make nearly so good an impression, however, as he did against Harry Kabakoff two weeks ago.

Red Johnson's wild swings disturbed the atmosphere considerably in the semi-windup, but failed to deter Patsy Flannigan, the latter taking a hair line decision in eight rounds. Johnny Lucas was entirely too clever for Kid Polar in the six-round preliminary. About 500 persons witnessed the show. Jack White refereed.

Kirkwood 13, St. Charles 6.

A well played game on Edwards Field in Kirkwood, yesterday, resulted in a 13 to 6 victory for the Kirkwood High School eleven over the St. Charles High School team. The winners scored by touchdowns of Signor and Payne. Kirkwood slightly outweighed their opponents.

Misjudged Play Robs Western of Chance to Win

Mistake of Referee on "Dead" Ball Saves Soldan and Game Ends 7 to 7.

The failure of an official to see a play which ultimately had a direct bearing on the result, lost for Western Military Academy an opportunity to defeat Soldan High School at Francis Field, yesterday afternoon. The game, which was a keenly contested one, ended in a 7 to 7 draw.

The play occurred in the second period after Soldan had made an unsuccessful attempt to gain in midfield. Soldan punted into the cadet's territory and the ball hit a local player, then bounding on the field. According to the rules, the ball was "dead" as soon as it touched a Soldan man and should go into Western's posession at the point it became "dead." A Soldan man fell on it, however, and Referee Siler declared that Soldan should put it in play. He had believed that a Western player touched it. The play occurred on the Western 30-yard line.

Soldan then in the shadow of the Alton eleven's goal posts, tried to smash the line, but was thrown back. On the third attempt a forward pass, Grant to Bradley was successful for the required distance and the West End team took the lead. Capt. Schnaus kicked goal. Consequently it may be seen that instead of having an opportunity to kick out of danger, Western was placed on the defensive as a result of the misjudged play.

The lineups:

Soldan.	Position.	Western.
Searcy	Left end	Bryant-Drexel
Peters	Left tackle	Sutter
Haffner	Left guard	Kuntdz
Overstreet	Center	Kirkpatrick
Cann	Right guard	Avery
Schuster	Right tackle	Matson
Bradley	Right end	Lamer
Grant	Quarterback	Blanchard
French	Right half	Armstrong
Horn	Fullback	Barker

CENTRAL SURPRISES WITH 19 TO 0 VICTORY OVER ST. L. U. HIGH

Central sprang a surprise and triumphed over the High School Department of St. Louis University, 19 to 0, yesterday afternoon at Handlan's Park. Aided by spectacular plays by Wooods and Bremser, the Central High boys defeated their rivals by a much larger score than had been expected.

A play by Bremser following the kickoff, disheartened the University representatives and they never regained their composure. Bremser ran through the entire opposing team for a 75-yard gain and a touchdown. Woods missed the goal

MRS. CAULK WINS CITY GOLF TITLE IN CLOSE MATCH

Beats Favorite, Mrs. Edwards, One Up in 20 Holes at Midland Valley Club.

Mrs. J. R. Caulk, representing the Bellerive Country Club, yesterday morning defeated Mrs. A. N. Edwards of Algonquin, 1 up in 20 holes, thereby winning the Women's City Golf Championship over the links of Midland Valley. The victory of Mrs. Caulk came as a complete surprise, as Mrs. Edwards was a decided favorite.

The new title holder is a comparative newcomer in local golfing circles, having taken up the game only two years ago, while her opponent has twice held the city title, the last time being in 1915, while last year she lost to Mrs. John Atlee (nee Miss Laura Kaiser), in the finals.

The play of both contenders was ragged in spots yesterday. Mrs. Caulk, who earlier in the week won the driving contest, showed the most consistent driving, but her approaches were poor. Mrs. Edwards played brilliantly in spots.

When the turn was reached Mrs. Caulk was 1 up on her opponent. Mrs. Edwards squared the match on the sixteenth hole, and then the next three were evened. On the twentieth however, Mrs. Caulk went down in 5, while Mrs. Edwards needed a six and lost. It was the closest match witnessed in the finals of a woman's tournament in this city.

After the pair had halved the first hole, Mrs. Caulk went into the lead by taking Nos. 2 and 3. Mrs. Edwards, however, took the fourth and sixth, with No. 5 halved, and it was all even. Then Mrs. Caulk took the next two and Mrs. Edwards No. 9, which left Mrs. Caulk 1 up.

Coming in Mrs. Edwards braced, taking Nos. 10 and 12, and halving No. 11. This put her 1 up, but her lead was shortlived, as the new champion took the next and it was all square once more. Mrs. Caulk again took the lead on No. 15 only to lose it on 16. After that the pair battled on even terms, when Mrs. Caulk won the twentieth hole and the championship.

SPORT SALAD

BY J. E. Wray

The Waning Season.

THE well-known melancholy days,
Renowned in story and in song,
Are poised and hanging in the ways
All ready to be launched along.
The justly celebrated wren
Will beat it to a warmer clime;
The meadow lark and guinea hen
Will cease their early morning chime.

Old John Q. Frost will cast a chill
Upon the flowers and the grass;
And we will marvel at the bill
For coal, electric light and gas.
No longer on the village green
The lamb will gambol and cavort;
And many weeks shall intervene
Ere we return to summer sport.

The football season will begin
And greet us with the college yell;
Eftsoons the old familiar din
Will echo over dale and fell.
The center rush will buck the line
With customary dash and vim;
And risk a dislocated spine
Or eke a badly fractured limb.

The baseball players will depart
For their respective bailiwicks;
The festive football coach will start
To open up his bag of tricks.
The baseball fan will exercise
His right to sit around and talk;
The Hot Stove League will organize
And win the pennant in a walk.

Pitcher, Sherrod Smith—Brooklyn.
Pitcher, George Smith—Giants.
Catcher, Harry Smith—Cincinnati.
First base, Willard Smith—Pittsburg.
Second base, Carlisle Smith—Brooklyn.
Shortstop—Jimmy Smith—Giants.
Third base—Fred Smith—St. Paul-St. Louis.
Lelt field—Elmer Smith—Cleveland.
Center field—Jack Smith—Cardinals.

We had to put a catcher on first and shift some of the other boys around, but this is a team of all-around Smiths, who make good wherever you put 'em.

The safest way is to wait till the series is over before naming your babies.

Naming kids after baseball heroes is rough stuff, anyway. How would you like to go through life under the monaker of "Happy" Felsch Robinson?

Will Your Raincoat Stand This Test?

Let the thermometer judge whether you get maximum comfort from your raincoat. Hang up a thermometer in the back of an ordinary raincoat and wear it around for half an hour; then do the same with an AIR-IN coat and note the difference in temperature.

BOND CAMPAIGN HAS BEARING ON REALTY SITUATION

Mercantile Trust Reports That Cash Purchasers Are Getting the Bargains.

Commenting on the real estate situation, the Mercantile Trust Co.'s department report declares that the sharp competition of the quality of the second Liberty Loan has had a bearing on it, but that the tendency is toward putting real estate on a more solid basis than ever before.

Real estate offered "at the market" finds quick sale, but the market value does not always harmonize with the ideas of the owner; in any event the market is for the cash buyer and "all cash" are the magic words that finally decide the sale, and obtains the bargain in 90 out of 100 cases, the report says. The company announces the following sales:

Sold for Miss Elizabeth A. Walsh, three and three room flat, 4015-15A Botanical avenue, to John W. Reynolds.

John L. Weinrich purchased from Hug Enstrom the flat at 1402-02A Arlington. This is a corner lot in a thickly settled area and a good prospect as a future business corner.

The sale of 3660-62 Flad avenue is noted, although neither owner nor purchaser is desirous of being named.

5946-48 Hamilton terrace is reported sold to James Early for Mrs. Lillie Coleman. This is a first-class flat, convenient to Hempstead School, St. Barbara's Parochial School and not far from the civic center at Union and Cabanne.

The sale of 919 Pendleton avenue is reported for the account of a nonresident owner to the Alanson Realty Co., who will put it in repair and rent it.

The sale of 1944-6 Papin street, a four-family tenement, is reported for the account of Mrs. Lizzie Tully to a client of the John H. Pueser Realty Co. The property will be put in first-class condition.

5652-54 Vernon avenue, a hot-water heated five and six room flat, was sold for a client to J. J. Walsh.

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.

	Last Week.	Week Before.	Last Year.
Cattle	43,000	42,100	41,000
Hogs	38,000	31,400	42,000
Sheep	12,300	7,100	13,600

Last week's cattle receipts were in excess of the previous week, and it was a hard matter to effect sales at satisfactory prices. The market opened 25c lower, and closed with a further decline of 15c to 25c. It was clearly demonstrated that receipts are the governing factor.

Choice to prime beef steers are quoted at $15.50 to $17.50; good to choice, $12 to $15; medium to good, $9.50 to $11.50; common to medium, $8 to $9.50; common off-colored light killing steers, $7 to $8; good to choice stockers and feeders, $7.75 to $8.75; medium to good, $6.75 to $7.75; common to medium, $6 to $6.75; good to choice stock cows, $6.50 to $6.75; good to choice stock heifers, $7 to $7.50; choice to prime fat yearling butcher cattle, $14 to $16; good to choice, $11 to $14; medium to good, $8.50 to $11; common to medium, $7 to $8.50; choice to fancy heavy beef cows, $9 to $10.75; good to choice, $8 to $9; medium to good, $6.75 to $7.25; cutters, $5.75 to $6.75; canners, $5.25 to $5.75; good fat beef bulls, $8.50 to $10; heavy sausage bulls, $7 to $8, and light sausage bulls, $6 to $7.

Receipts of hogs were liberal, showing a material increase over any time in the past few weeks, and this was all that was necessary to give the buying interests the advantage they have been waiting for. The bad time started Thursday, and finished up Friday, with a decline of 75c to $1.25 per hundred. Yesterday's sales were about steady.

A week ago yesterday the top was $19.80, while the top for best hogs yesterday was $18.50, with choice hogs, 180 pounds up, selling from $18 to $18.50; 120 to 150 pound pigs, $16 to $16.75; lighter pigs, $14.50 to $15.75; best rough hogs, $17 to $17.25, and half-fat roughs, $12.50 to $14.

Shep receipts showed a material increase over the previous week, being nearly double the amount on sale, and as a result the lamb trade declined from 75c to $1 per hundred, while fat sheep closed a quarter lower. Good to choice lambs were quotable at $17 to $17.50; medium to good, $16 to $17; culls, $13.50; fat sheep, $11.25; choppers, $8; canners, $5 to $6, Angora goats, $7.25 to 8.25; hair goats, $7 to $7.75, and kids, $9 to $10.50.

They are backed by all the resources, all the land, all the buildings, all the mines, all the railroads and all the industries of America. And they're backed also by the loyalty of a hundred million people who love their country.

The United States is not asking you to give a penny. It is merely asking you to LOAN the Government your money. It gives you these Bonds as your security, the same as if you loaned your money to someone on his house and lot and took a mortgage for security.

Every loyal home in America must buy at least one of these bonds. It is expected that every home in America that does not shelter traitors or the Kaiser's spies will strain a point in order to secure as many of these bonds as that home possibly can take.

It is expected that every farmer, every storekeeper, every doctor, every lawyer, every minister, every business man, every workman, every salaried man and woman in the whole United States, will take as large a quantity of these Bonds as his or her income will permit.

No human being can tell how long this war will last. No human being can tell to what extent we'll have to go to KEEP AMERICA FREE. We only know that we're going to fight it through to the end, until the Kaiser has given up his mad ambition to rule the world, if it takes the last man and the last dollar that America has.

America has never submitted to tyranny yet and never will. No King or Kaiser shall ever tell free Americans what they shall or shall not do.

Go to Any Bank or Bond House and Get Your Liberty Bonds To-Day

If you can't buy a large one, buy a small one. If you can't pay all the money down, pay for your Bond in easy payments. But get your Bond, get it to-day if you can, and get as large a Bond as you can afford to take. Let's show the Kaiser that a HUNDRED MILLION AMERICANS are backing up their Government in this fight.

The New York reserve banks rediscounts have now, during the past weeks of coping with the money market's upward tendency and preparing for the war loan, been increased by $113,000,000.

Curb Market Irregular in the Week's Speculation.

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—The interests that had much to do with creating and maintaining markets for various groups of stocks on the Broad street curb, have apparently abandoned the war order stocks as important parts of that speculative field, and those issues were bought only in a listless manner all through last week.

Aetna explosives ranged around 4, sometimes selling below that price, and Wright-Martin Aircraft, which had sold as high as 17 in the summer, and recently had an upward movement to around 11, settled down to a trading range of slightly above 10 to 8.

Curtis Aeroplane seemed to have lost all its speculative following, and only a moderate amount of business was transacted in it from 37 to 35. The stories about Government contracts for aeroplane manufacture continued current and found plenty of believers, but they had lost their force as a market influence because advances previously based on this information had been effective only in permitting extensive liquidation of inside holdings.

A new security was traded in during the last half of the week, Inter Lube Chemical, for which there was a vigorous demand, causing the price to advance from 2⅛ to 3⅞. Air Reduction was an active feature, being traded in on a fairly large scale at 91 to 82, being followed by a rally of 84 on Thursday. All the oil stocks were influenced by the prevailing idea that the Government in its price fixing will go a long way to diminish profits on petroleum and it products.

The most active stock in this group was Midwest Refining, which fell from 147 to 131; Merritt sold down from 32 to 28¾, followed by a rally to 29⅛. The mining stocks were also heavy, although the losses in these issues were comparatively small. Mason Valley yielded from 5⅛ to 4¾ and United Verde, which was ex-dividend, sold down from 34⅝ to 31½. Magma ranged from 46 to 40 and back to 42. Emma Consolidated sold at ¾ and 9-16.

Chevrolet Motor, after declining to 75, rallied to 79¾ and United Motor, which dropped from 23¼ to 20¼, rallied to 21¼.

In the bond market the most important feature was the decline in Canadian Government 5s from 95⅝ to 93⅞c.

CROP ESTIMATE DROPS THE CORN MARKET 5 CENTS

Bears Have Good Inning on the Week's Trading; Oats Also Are Lower.

Corn Crop of Missouri Is a "Bumper."

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 13.—This semi-monthly crop report issued by the State Board of Agriculture says: "At the ending of the growing season the agricultural situation is found to be the best of the year, showing improvement in corn, further enlarged acreage of wheat planting, and increased supplies of both food and forage to help win the war. The report presents a final preliminary corn average of 36 bushels per acre on 7,900,000 acres, or a crop of 284,000,000 bushels. Condition of corn is 91.7 per cent. Missouri was the only corn state to improve in the past five weeks. Average quality of the crop is 94 per cent. Safe from frost on Oct. 1, 84 per cent, and today all is safe except replantings. The 1902 corn crop averaged 40 bushels, and 1917 is the heaviest in 15 years. Conditions measured by 529 official crop reporters indicate that more wheat is being sown in the corn fields than ever before in the history of this state.

Greatly enlarged estimates of the 1917 yield of corn, together with reports of Government pressure to establish a ratio of $1 a bushel for corn and $10 a cwt for hogs, led last week to some big setbacks in prices on the Merchants' Exchange here. Among the net losses were corn 5¼c to 6¼c, and oats ⅛c to ⅝c; Pork, $2.75 to $4.20; lard, $1.55 to $1.90, ribs, 25c to $2.12.

Government crop figures on corn surprised the trade by placing the total production this season 36,000 bu in excess of what leading private experts had indicated. The bearish effect of the reckoning proved mild, however, compared with the results which followed from attention to possibilities of Government action to curtail prices of corn and hogs, in conjunction with cotton oil seed and other food products.

Comparative steadiness was finally restored by reports that new regulations were not designed to interfere with operations on exchanges.

Liberal buying for export acted as a substantial prop for oats.

Flurried unloading of provision went day after day until the selling appeared at least temporarily to have worn itself out. The demoralization was due chiefly to the fact that $10 hogs would imply a cut of nearly 50 per cent in recent values of packinghouse products.

CORN IS OFF ONE CENT IN TRADING AT CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Oct. 13.—Downward sweeps of the grain and provision markets gave evidence today of increased impetus. Corn prices broke under heavy selling due chiefly to winter weather ideal for curing the crop and saving huge quantities that in the event of much warm wet weather would have been rendered almost useless. It was said also that rural holders, especially in the south were showing more disposition to sell.

Opening quotations, which ranged from unchanged figures to 1c lower with December $1.13⅞ to $1.14 and May $1.09 to $1.09¼ were followed by a sharp descent all around.

Oats at first displayed a little firmness but soon reflected the bearish changes in other staples.

Fresh attempts at wholesale liquidation in pork, lard and ribs, found no adequate buying demand. Pork suffered a smash of $2 a barrel. The rest of the list fared but slightly better.

Week-end covering by experts subsequently brought about a rally. The close was firm, but ¾c to 1¼c net lower at $1.12⅞ to $1.13 December and $1.09⅛ to $1.09¼ May.

Packers' buying caused something of a recovery in the late dealings.

London Review.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York Evening Post.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—Feeling here is divided between great optimism over the course of the military campaign, and belief that, nevertheless, the sternest trials of the war, both for soldiers and civilians, are approaching.

"In the best financial circles one meets the judgment that it would be difficult to exaggerate the importance of Haig's last victory in Flanders—whether in its military or moral aspect. Its bearing on the winter campaign is considered to be supremely important; of which the just proof is the greatly modified public declarations of the German officials.

But the city's general attitude may, nevertheless, be thus summed up; the end of the war is not yet in sight, because the military clique is still in full control. This being so, each allied victory will probably intensify Germany's war of frightfulness against civilians by submarines and from the air. For this reason, financial judgment is greatly reassured by the evidence that American loyalty and enthusiasm are being accompanied by record speed in your war preparations.

"In the best informed circles, it is thought, that the Russian situation has not yet changed for the better. There is still a feeling that the unfortunate country is a hotbed of German intrigue. Up to date, maturing interest on the Russian loans has been duly met, except for one coupon; which is delayed, but is expected to be paid shortly.

"The problem of the enormous currency inflation will undoubtedly take its most acute form, after the war is over, in Russia and Germany. Our bankers have reason to believe that Germany is nursing the curious idea that the depreciated mark will then occasion a great inflow of money from foreign countries. This state of mind is unimportant, except, perhaps, as reflecting the cynical mentality of present-day Germany.

"Notwithstanding the absence of large gold exports to you of late, there is nothing in recent developments to alter the general policy of a free movement of England's gold in your direction whenever needed. There is probably now a complete understanding betwen your Government and ours concerning neutrals; though the severity of recent restrictions, naturally occasions increased watching of the political possibilities involved.

Suggestions from your side that America may raise credits in neutral countries to control exchange rates is interesting and practical, but it scarcely touches the blockade question, which at the moment entirely dominates the neutral exchanges.

"Our short term war bonds are going satisfactorily."

BIG BEAR OIL CO.
Best Buy in Wyo.

Compare Big Bear with other companies and you will buy Big Bear stock at 12¼ cents a share. Why? Because Big Bear stock is full paid and nonassessable; incorporated in Wyoming for $500,000; because it holds 320 acres in the most sensational money-making oil field in the United States—the Big Muddy of Wyoming; because it is drilling two wells, both nearing the Oil Sands; because it has the casing to complete both of these wells; because it has in the bank $25,000 and has $25,000 coming in from parties who have bought stock on the monthly payment plan; because drillers and refinery men at Casper, Wyo., near our wells, have bought over $30,000 worth of Big Bear stock; because your money goes for actual work, no officer receiving any salary or commission; because this company is drilling in the Big Muddy field, where 95% of the wells drilled are producers, ranging from 100 barrels to 2000 barrels daily capacity; because one 500-barrel well would make this stock sell in the dollars, and, finally, because it is being financed by men whose integrity is unquestioned.

Because this stock is selling rapidly, we reserve the right to return your money if your subscription comes in after 100,000 shares are sold at 12¼ cents per share. Write or wire at once. Get literature, map and bank reference. Wm. G. Krape, Inv. Co., 971 Gas & Electric Bldg., Denver, Colo.

M'ALLISTER TAKES PRELIMINARY STEP IN MILK INQUIRY

State Attorney-General Searching for Basis for Action Against St. Louis Distributors.

Attorney-General McAllister has begun a preliminary investigation of the St. Louis milk situation, in order to determine if there is basis for an official inquiry into the methods of St. Louis distributers who raised the price of milk Oct. 1 from 11c to 13c and 14c a quart.

At present the Attorney-General is directing his work along the line of personal inquiry and has reached no decision as to what method he will employ, should circumstances warrant, in his investigation. Over long distance telephone from Nelson, Mo., last night, he told a Post-Dispatch reporter that he is going to give the situation his earnest thought and, if he discovers ground for action, will institute proceedings to relieve the situation.

Attorney-General McAllister's activity follows the efforts Thursday of President Aloe of the Board of Aldermen and representatives of women's organizations of St. Louis to induce Gov. Gardner to appoint a commission to work with a similar commission appointed by the Governor of Illinois to investigate production and distribution cost of milk. Gov. Gardner informed the committee that he would first have to ascertain from the Attorney-General if he had the power to create a commission with legal authority to summon witnesses and produce records.

Daues Doubts Governor's Authority.

City Counselor Daues, whose opinion also was sought by the Governor, does not believe the Governor can create a commission vested with such powers. "I seriously doubt that the Governor can legally create a commission with authority to summon witnesses and compel the production of books and other records," Counselor Daues said. "There is no question of the fact, however, that the Legislature can create such a commission and clothe it with authority to regulate production and distribution of foodstuffs and investigate prices.

"I have not looked deeply into the question as to whether the Governor has a right to appoint such a commission and clothe it with necessary powers, and do not care to be placed in the attitude of advising him on this point."

Should the Attorney-General find ground upon which to base an investigation it is possible that he will hold public hearings on the milk situation, as he is doing in the coal investigation.

Public Hearings Urged.

The Board of Aldermen, a committee of which recently reported, after hearing milk distributers in secret sessions, that "13 and 14 cents" a quart was a fair retail price for milk under existing conditions, is being urged to reinstate the milk inquiry on its calendar and hold public hearing, at which consumers can introduce evidence of attempts of distributers and producers to fix prices unlawfully, restrain trade and otherwise endeavor to maintain exorbitant prices.

Mrs. George Gellhorn, chairman of the Women's Food Conservation Committee, will go to Jefferson City tomorrow to attend a meeting of the Council of Defense, and will ask its co-operation in efforts to prevent unreasonably high milk prices.

The Department of Justice has been quietly investigating the milk situation, and food inspectors likely will be called before the November federal grand jury to tell the result of their investigations.

Frank B. Wolken, president of Jersey Farm Dairy Co., which distributes about 400 gallons of milk daily, said yesterday that the increase in price from 11 to 13 cents a quart, Oct. 1, has resulted in a decrease in consumption of 25 per cent all over the city. Other distributers place the amount of decrease at 10 to 15 per cent.

Producers Perceive Mistake.

Pevely Dairy Co. officials say that the producers are now realizing the fact that high prices result in a corresponding decrease in consumption. They point out that while they may have other markets at present for their product—condensers working on large war contracts—these markets will disappear almost entirely at the close of the war, and it is to the producers' interest to reduce their demands for next month, so that this city will remain the staple market for their goods in the future, as it has been in the past.

At the meeting of producers and distributers in East St. Louis, when the former raised the price of milk from $2.20 a hundred pounds (11.63 gallons) to $3.20, the producers gave notice that they would insist upon a further advance for November.

N. E. Baum, secretary of the Southern Illinois Milk Producers' Association, which supplies most of the milk consumed in St. Louis, said last night on long-distance telephone at his home in Carlyle, Ill., that the producers would demand at least $3.42 a hundred pounds for their milk Nov. 1.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of our dear boy, George Weindorf, who was suddenly called from this life Oct. 17, 1916.

Forget you we never will;
It was a shock severe,
It left us brokenhearted
And day by day sadly miss you;
His merry laugh we hear no more,
The voice we loved is still.

Sadly missed by
PARENTS, BROTHER AND SISTERS.

In Memoriam.

In memory of our dearly beloved mother, Katherine Rall, who departed life Oct. 10, 1916.

Sad and sudden was the call
For our dear mother loved by all.
We little thought that on that day,
Our dear mother would be called away.
She shall never be forgotten,
Never from our memory fade;
Loving hearts will always linger
Around the grave where she is laid.

Sadly missed by
HER DAUGHTERS.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of my dear wife and our dear mother, Bernhardine Hamburger, who was called away two years ago, Oct. 12, 1915.

The month of October again is here;
To us the saddest of all the year.
Some time, some day
Our eyes shall see the face we loved so well;
Some time our hands shall press in hers and never say farewell;
Her merry laugh we hear no more,
The voice we loved is still,
And all that is left for memory
Is her grave on a distant hill.

Sadly missed by
HUSBAND, DAUGHTER AND SONS. (c)

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of my dear wife and daughter, Mrs. Margaret Fehl, who died one year ago, Oct. 14, 1916.

Some time, some day.
Our eyes shall see the face we loved so well;
Some time our hands shall press in hers
And never say farewell.
Her merry laugh we hear no more,
The voice we loved is still
And all that is left for memory
Is her grave on a distant hill.

Sadly missed by
HUSBAND AND MOTHER.

May her soul rest in peace.
ARTHUR G. FEHL AND CATHERINE SHARP.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of my dear wife and our dear mother, Caroline Berlemann, dear son and brother, Fred Berlemann, who departed this life Oct. 15, 1915.

Two sad years have passed away:
Sad and sudden was the call
For our dear mother, loved by all.
With little thought that on that day
Our dear mother was called away.
We could not realize what was said
When the message came that she was dead.
Day by day we sadly miss her;
Friends may think the wound is healed,
But they little know the grief
That's within our hearts concealed.
She shall never be forgotten,
Never from our memory fade;
Loving hearts will always linger
Round the grave where she is laid.

Sadly missed by
HUSBAND, DAUGHTER AND GRANDCHILDREN. (c)

SIMPSON'S "Travels in Russia" is not a war book, but one based on travels in 1910 and 1912, when nothing worse than the old regime and the Asiatic cholera prevailed. The farm-born newspaper man, author, formerly of the Illinois State Journal and the New York Musical Courier, is one of the few Anglo-Saxon writers who had the industry to speak and read the difficult but beautiful language of the Russians before traveling among them. Many beautiful letters to the author attest enjoyment of the casual humor, genial tone and great help in finding some of the true flavor of Russian life. Only 136 pages; 50 half-tones, 16 musical etchings. In full cloth, price $1. Order direct from the author-publisher or give this order to your dealer. Eugene E. Simpson, Taylorville, Ill. (99)

Big Bargain on Lindell Boulevard Residence

We offer a rare opportunity to purchase for much less than value a handsome, dignified residence, 3846 Lindell bl. opposite the beautiful little triangle park. This house is surrounded by some of the most prominent and aristocratic homes in St. Louis.

Contains 10 cheerful rooms, 2 modern, tiled bathrooms on second floor; hardwood floors; large modern living room in ivory white finish; new, clean decorations; house of best construction; hard granite base and red Colonial brick; practically as good as the day it was built.

No "safer" investment in a home can be made. It can be bought at less than half what it could be duplicated for today, and will make anyone a handsome, comfortable home for the next 10 years, and is in a high-class, convenient neighborhood. One need have no worry of locality changing and values depreciating, for the future of Lindell bl. from Grand to Vandeventer is most promising.

This house is erected on a lot 60x213 feet. Ground alone is now almost worth the price of the entire property. It could today be changed into a display building for business purposes and would command immediate tenants, but it is far too desirable a residence property at this time, and will remain so for many years to come; but it is property with an assured future.

Price extremely low for quick sale. Open for inspection all day Sunday.

PURINA SCRATCH FEED
PURINA CHICKEN CHOWDER

Eggs depend on whites

Grain feeds fail to give hens elements required for whites of eggs. Wheat corn, oats, barley, kafir contain (above bodily maintenance) elements to average 224 yolks and only 154 whites.

Purina Chicken Chowder with Purina Scratch Feed contains elements for 212.33 whites, 214.77 yolks.

Note perfect balance and large number. 99 out of 100 hens eat too much grain which forms fat and cuts down egg laying. Feed 100 lbs. Purina Scratch Feed to 100 lbs. Purina Chicken Chowder—you'll use less feed and get

More eggs or money back

Money paid for Purina Chicken Chowder will be refunded if hens do not lay more eggs when fed Purina Chicken Chowder as directed with Purina Scratch Feed than when fed any other ration.

"Sun Dials" Answers to Three 'Poultry Puzzles'

The "Sun Dial" column of the Evening Sun of New York is versatile. Recently it gave considerable attention to "poultry puzzles," of which it received a considerable number from Sun readers. Three of them are here reproduced:

"H. Hassenpfeffer (Hoboken)—No. Moistening the mash with stale beer will not change a tenor cockerel into a baritone. Also, it is immoral; no beer should be allowed to grow stale. Your use of the phonograph in voice training is all right, but it would be well to cut out the Wagner and substitute patriotic airs even in your locality. However, you cannot get a perfectly matched quartet from cocks of the same breed. Use Leghorns or Minorcas for tenors; good baritones can be bred from most of the medium-weight breeds (R. I. Reds, Plymouth Rocks or Wyandottes), but for a true basso you will need a Langshan or perhaps even an English game."

"Hester S. (Hohokus)—I'm afraid that if 11 of your herd of 13 are trying to crow you can hardly expect many January eggs. There is something wrong. Thirteen is not a lucky number."

"W. J. B. (Hot Springs)—It is not possible to train a heavy breed such as your Orpingtons to walk a tight rope successfully. Try Anconas."

Average Egg Yield Increased Remarkable

The effort to increase the average yield of eggs per hen in this country has been astonishingly successful. There are many times more 200-egg hens than there were 15 years ago, and the number is all the time growing. But the growth has not been accidental. It has come about by careful breeding, by careful selection of individuals, by trap nesting and by good care and intelligent feeding.

Hens are picked for the laying pen by the shape of their bodies and by their pelvice bones. They are mated to a male whose mother was a superior layer. It is now claimed that in the breeding pen such a male has more to do with the laying qualities of the offspring than the females. This has probably not been definitely established, however. And then, no matter how good the hen may be by inheritance as a layer, she must have good food and care or she will do only moderately well.

It is not easy to get a large number of 200-egg hens, but almost anyone can increase the egg production of flocks 25 per cent by careful selection, breeding, feeding and care, and in that way increase profits 100 per cent.

During the first nine months of 1917 the Post-Dispatch printed 3321 Classified Instruction Want Ads—1571 more than the FOUR other St. Louis newspapers combined.

COST OF FEED FOR PRODUCTION OF EGGS

Results of Government Experiments With Leghorns and General Purpose Fowls.

The cost of feed for producing eggs with pullets and yearling hens both from leghorns and from general-purpose breeds, in the experiments on the United States Department of Agriculture farm, Beltsvill Md., during the past year, even with the high price of grains, has been considerably lower than the price received for nearby fresh eggs.

Leghorn pullets ate an average of 4.8 pounds of feed in producing dozen eggs. The feed costs on an average of 12.9 cents per dozen eggs produced by the flock. The cost of feed per dozen eggs varied from 9.: cents in July to 41.4 cents in November, when, during the moulting season, the flock continued to eat but, of course, produced fewer eggs.

Leghorn yearling hens ate on an average 5.5 pounds of feed per dozen eggs produced. The average cost of feed per dozen eggs produced by the flock was 14 cents. The cost of feed per dozen eggs varied from 7.3 cents in July to 26.63 in November (moulting period.)

The general-purpose breeds ate considerably more feed than the Leghorns, the pullets consuming an average of 6.7 pounds of feed and the yearling hens 9.6 pounds in the production of a dozen eggs. The feed cost averaged 16.75 cents per dozen eggs for the pullets, varying from 11.7 to 28.9 cents, and for the yearlings averaged 24.5 cents, ranging from 13.9 to 81.3 cents.

The cost of mash mixture per 100 pounds varied from $1.82 to $2.98 and scratch mixture from $1.90 to $3.68.

Bee Culture as Good Poultry Side Line

Bee culture is an excellent sideline for the poultry keeper. Bees take up little room, and the cost of getting into bees is small. One good hive will store 40 to 50 pounds of honey in one season. This ought to be worth $12.50 in cash at the door nowadays. It is entirely practicable for many poultry raisers to keep 25 or more stands of bees. One poultryman in the Central West has 165 stands on a piece of ground 60x100 feet. Honey to the value of $1400 was produced last season. If one has a farm of 10 acres or more the opportunities for expansion are almost limitless. They can also be kept in suburb or city. Beehives are even kept on the flat roofs of houses or apartments. The value of bees is now well understood in other directions than the gathering and storing of honey. They pollenize fruits and flowers. Many orchards would benefit from the presence of more bees. Poultry, fruit and bees are regarded by some as an ideal combination. But if one has no knowledge of bees he should go slowly or he will get "stung" in more than one sense.

Poultry Problems Solved.

Digestive Ailments.

On several mornings lately I have found one or two of our half-grown chickens, that seemed healthy the previous evening, dead with their craws full. I cut through the flesh of one just below the breastbone and about a half cup of watery fluid ran out. The intestines showed a sickly color and there was a bad odor. Can you tell me the cause, and suggest a remedy? Do you think we are feeding too much grain? We feed about 1½ quarts a day to 15 young chickens. It is the regular hen food, and we give them table scraps, too.—J. C. B., St. Louis, Mo.

These birds have undoubtedly had access to something that they should not have had. It may have been of a poisonous nature, or some putrid food matter. If any of the remaining birds show symptoms of this trouble it may help them to give a little epsom salts or a teaspoon of castor oil, but of course, the first thing to do is to make a careful investigation to see what these birds have been getting in the way of food. The trouble may have been caused by something in the table scraps. Possibly you allowed some part of the scraps to spoil and ferment before the chickens got them.

Soft-Shelled Eggs.

What causes soft-shelled eggs and what can I give the chickens to prevent this?—Rose, St. Louis, Mo.

The usual cause of soft-shelled eggs is the absence of mineral, shell forming material in the food. Feed them crushed oyster shell, or lime that has been slaked.

IMPROVED RENTAL SITUATION CHEERS REALTY INTERESTS

Tenants for Apartments, Flats, Residences and Business Quarters Said by Agents to Have Appeared in Steady and Impressive Procession.

PROPER VALUES BEING RESTORED

Office Building Managers Report Lowest Stage of Vacancies Since World's Fair, Some Having Waiting Lists—Preparing for After-Peace Boom.

By Berry Moore.

From an investment viewpoint, the most significant recent development in the realty situation in St. Louis has been the improved rental aspect, which is comprehensive in scope and which includes all parts of the city.

Tenants for apartments, flats and dwellings have appeared in steady and impressive procession, according to C. H. Zeibig of Cornet & Zeibig, while removals have been fewer than for a similar period in a decade. The demand is characterized by agents as unprecedented and can be ascribed, it is declared, to the increased birth rate among the population, augmented by an influx of new residents.

The demand for apartments and flats is such that a dearth in homes of this type is not improbable in the early future. Consensus of opinion of the close observing members of the real estate fraternity is that within another year there will be few vacant houses in St. Louis or in the suburbs.

The rising cost of material and of construction generally has checked building projects of all descriptions, and the demand is rapidly depleting the supply. Furthermore, a resumption of building operations, it is declared, will be impracticable before a recession in prices, which is not expected until several years after the war.

Rents have been advanced from $2.50 to $5 a month in a multitude of instances, while free rent is allowed only in lieu of repairs, which now is a convenient arrangement in view of the advanced prices of the paper hanger, of the tinner, plumber and the carpenter, as well as the jack of all trades.

Apartments in Record Demand.

There is not a vacancy in many of the largest apartment structures, both old and new, and many are on a new and high dividend basis, with two and three year leases.

The demand for units in the Westmoreland Hotel Apartments at 5330 Berlin avenue is without a precedent. Nearly half the space in this building, comprising 77 high efficiency apartments, has been leased for two-year periods, and if the present rate of leases is maintained the apartments will be entirely leased before their completion, which is scheduled for Nov. 1. Ten new leases for units in this building, according to the Rosen-baum-Hauschulte Real Estate Co., its agents, were concluded the past week. Several well-known women and men, whose names are withheld, have reserved space in this building, which is eight stories and fireproof, a record that sets the pace for apartment house demand in St. Louis.

An inpouring of negroes from the South and from Illinois, especially from East St. Louis, as well as from Missouri, has absorbed all the vacancies and placed on a higher rental plane property in districts occupied by that race.

The result of all this is that real estate in St. Louis is fast regaining its former prestige in the investment world, and this insures a restoration of prices, which have shrunk in many sections of the market well below intrinsic values.

Business Properties Filling.

Absorption in the business district is on a scale rivaling that in the residential district. This applies especially to space in the office structures in the heart of the business district. Vacancies in these buildings are at the lowest stage since the World's Fair period, and in the majority of cases are isolated and only of short duration, according to William K. Morrison, manager of the Fullerton Building. "We have only one or two vacancies in the Fullerton Building, and pending negotiations indicate that the building will be 'flush up' with tenants before Nov. 1," Morrison said. "Many new business interests are establishing branches in St. Louis and are seeking quarters in the modern office structures in the heart of the great commercial center of the city. At the beginning of the war many branches occupying quarters in the downtown office buildings were abandoned, owing to the adverse conditions confronting business interests, especially those with foreign connections, but with peace looming on the horizon, representatives of these concerns are now seeking their old habitats in the downtown structures."

The Railway Exchange Building is 95 per cent rented, the indications being that this huge structure soon will be entirely out of the rental market. Claude B. Ricketts, its manager, has announced that all rents of vacant offices in the building on Jan. 1 will be advanced from $2.50 to $5.

There is not a vacant office in the Third National Bank Building, according to Guy H. Wright, its manager, who boasts of a waiting list for this structure.

Announcement in last Sunday's papers that the Continental Supply Co., one of the largest distributors of pipe and tubes for gas and oil wells and for refinery equipment in the United States, had acquired a 10-year lease of the seventh and one-fourth of the sixth floor of the new Post-Dispatch Building at Twelfth and Olive streets, was, according to Wright, followed by a flood of applicants for the space now occupied by this concern, including the entire ninth floor of the Third National Bank Building, which it will vacate Jan. 1.

It is declared that a proclamation of peace will be the signal for a bull movement in the St. Louis real estate market, and agents and operators are shaping their lines in anticipation of the early future's rare opportunities.

NEW STREET MARKET, OPEN FOR A DAY, TO CLOSE FOR WINTER

Only One Farmer Appears at Nineteenth Street and St. Louis Avenue on Opening Day.

The appearance of only one farmer at the opening of St. Louis' third public market at Nineteenth street and St. Louis avenue, yesterday, which resulted in the disappointment of several hundred housewives who had gone there, was followed by an announcement that the market will be closed for the remainder of the winter to reopen next spring. Announcement was made by North St. Louis merchants, who had sponsored the market. In explanation the merchants declared cold weather and rain preceding the opening day had dampened the ardor of many farmers whose promises to sell produce from their wagons had been received by a committee following a tour of St. Louis County.

The one farmer brought a wagon load of sweet corn. This was quickly bought by women.

WESTMORELAND A RECORD

Roof Garden With Pleasure Devices Among Striking Features and Sanitary Appliances.

Though the Rock Island tract, extending from Union boulevard to DeBaliviere avenue, on the north side of Berlin avenue was placed on the market less than a year ago, its absorption for high-class apartments has been swift and complete.

The demand for these apartments has been such that in several instances the buildings have been entirely preempted before their completion. The Sam Koplar Real Estate and Building Company, composed of former Mayor F. H. Kreismann, Sam Hamburg, Jr., and Sam Koplar, have led in the upbuilding of the Rock Island tract.

Crowning Improvement.

The Westmoreland Hotel apartment building which is being erected at 5330 Berlin avenue by the Koplar company, a client of the Rosenbaum-Hauschulte Company, forms the crowning feature of the movement there. This structure includes 77 high-efficiency unit apartments and is fireproof, soundproof and [illegible] proof.

Exemplifying the demand for apartments on the north side of Forest Park, 32 of the Westmoreland units already have been leased, the indications being that it will be entirely absorbed before its completion, scheduled for Nov. 15.

Eight apartments on the second floor are completed and have been furnished for inspection.

Pleasure Devices on Roof.

There will be a roof garden with swings and other pleasure devices, while the ground on each side of the building will be beautified with a flower garden.

The apartments, which will overlook Forest Park, will have one of the most elaborate lobbies of any building of this type in the city.

The Rock Island tract was purchased eight months ago from the Rock Island Railroad Company by the Croesus Realty Company, a syndicate organized by the Rosenbaum-Hunschulte Real Estate Company.

A New Dance That Everybody Can Learn

It is called the Ramble and is a combination of the Waltz, the Foxtrot and the One Step—All danced in the same six-six time

Posed especially for this magazine by Mrs. Richard Harding Davis (Miss Bessie McCoy) and G. Hepburn Wilson, its "inventor."

FOR years dancing teachers have been inventing and devising new dances and for years the dancing public has continued waltzing, foxtrotting and onestepping in blissful ignorance of the Fish Walk, the Chinese Toddle, the Flatfooted Flamingo and the other closefitting dances suggested by the so-called "Masters of Dance." For almost without exception the new dances have been too difficult for all except professionals.

To overcome this difficulty G. Hepburn Wilson, who has invented or devised a considerable number of ballroom dances, has presented a new dance which is a combination of the three most popular steps—the waltz, foxtrot and one step. This new dance, which has been indorsed and adopted by the recent national convention of dancing teachers, is called the Ramble. And if one can dance the one step, waltz and foxtrot, one can dance it after one lesson.

The Ramble is danced in six-six time throughout. It begins with a waltz and this movement continues for sixteen bars. Then the foxtrot is danced for 16 bars and then the one step.

Here are Mr. Wilson's instructions for dancing the Ramble:

Gentleman's part—Count one, two, three, four, five, six, equaling 2 bars

Balance forward with left foot	1 bar
Balance backward with right foot	1 bar
Four waltz steps forward to left	4 bars
Step on left foot	1 bar

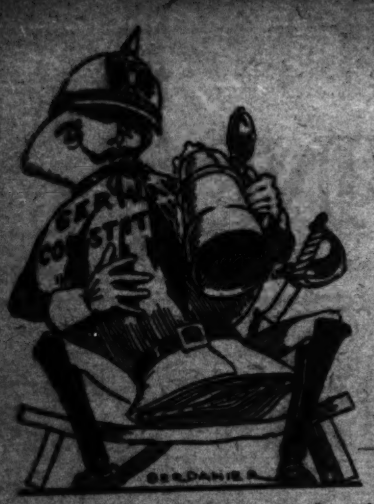
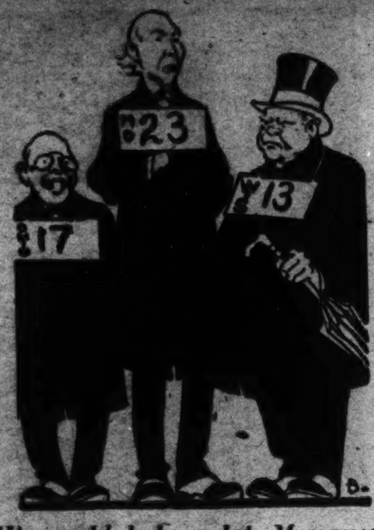
A New Series of Potash and Perlmutter Stories

BY MONTAGUE GLASS

No. 1. - On Soap Boxers and Peace Fellers



"In Germany, Mawruss, a constitution means only one thing. It's something that can be ruined by drinking too much beer and you don't have to hire a lawyer for that."



"It would help a lot, Mawruss," Abe said, "if Senators and Congressmen was numbered the same like automobiles."

"PEOPLE ain't begun to realize yet what this war really means, Mawruss," Abe Potash said as he finished reading an interview with ex-Ambassador Gerard, in which the ex-Ambassador said that people had not yet begun to realize what the war really meant.

"Maybe they don't," Morris Perlmutter agreed, "but for every feller which ain't begun to realize what this war really and truly means, Abe, there is a hundred other fellers which ain't begun to realize what a number of people there is which goes round saying that people ain't begun to realize what this war really and truly means, y'understand. Also, Abe, the same people is going round begging people which is just as patriotic as they are, that they should brace up and be patriotic, y'understand, and they are pulling pledges to hold up the hands of the President on other people who has got simillar pledges in their breast pockets and pretty near beats 'em to it, understand me, and that's the way it goes."

"Well, if one time out of a hundred, they strike somebody who really and truly don't realize what the war means, like you, Mawruss," Abe began, "why then their time ain't entirely wasted neither."

"I realize just so much as you do what this war means, Abe," Morris retorted.

"Maybe you do," Abe admitted, "but you don't talk like you did, Mawruss, otherwise you would know that if out of a hundred Americans only 99 of 'em pledges themselves to hold up the hands of the President, y'understand, and the balance of one claims that we are in this war just to save our investments in Franco-American bonds and that Mr. Wilson is every bit as bad as the Kaiser, except that he's clean-shaved, y'understand, then them 99 fellers with the pledges in their breast pockets should ought to convert the balance of one. Because, Mawruss, a nation which is 99 per cent patriotic is like a fish which is 99 per cent fresh—all you can notice is the 1 per cent which smells bad."

"I am just so much in favor of the country being 100 per cent American as you are, Abe," Morris said, "but what I claim is that we should go about it right."

"If you mean we shouldn't argue with them 1-percenters, but send them right back to that part of the old country which they come from originally, Mawruss," Abe continued, "why, I am agreeable that they should be shipped right away, F. O. B., N. Y., all deliveries subject to delay and liability being limited to $50 personal baggage in case they should, please Gawd, fail to arrive in Europe."

"Sure I know," Morris agreed, "but pretty near all them 1-percenters was born and raised in the United States or in Chicago, Wisconsin or Cincinnati. You take this here Burgermeister of Chicago, for instance, and the chances is that all he knows about the old country is what he learned on a couple of visits to Milwaukee, y'understand, so how could you export a feller like that?"

"I don't want to export him, Mawruss. All I would like to see is that they should put an embargo on him," Abe said, "and on his friends, them peace fellers, too."

"Well, I'll tell you," Morris commented, "about them peace fellers, you couldn't blame 'em exactly, because you know how it is with some people: they ain't got no control over their feelings, and if they're scared to death, y'understand, they couldn't help showing it, which my poor grandmother clav hasholom wouldn't allow me to keep so much as a pea shooter in the house, on account, she says if the good Lord wills it, even a broomstick could give fire."

"And yet, Mawruss, if burglars would of broke into her home, I bet you she would grabbed the nearest flat iron and went for 'em with it," Abe said, "so don't insult your grandmother selig by comparing her with them peace fellers which they oser care how many burglars is johnnying the front door, just so long as they could hide under the bed."

"At the same time, Abe, there is some of them peace fellers which ain't so much scared as they are contrary, y'understand," Morris said. "Take this here La Follette, Abe, and that feller's motto is: 'My country—I think she's always wrong—but, right or wrong, that's my opinion and I stick to it.' All a United States Senator has got to do is to look like he is preparing to say something, y'understand, and before he can get out so much as 'Brother President and fellow members of this organization,' La Follette jumps up and says, 'I'm sorry, but I disagree with you.'"

"That must make him pretty popular in the Senate," Abe remarked.

"Popular's no name for it," Morris continued. "There ain't a United States Senator which wouldn't stand willing to dig down and pay for a set of engrossed resolutions out of his own pocket, just so long as Senator La Follette would resign or something."

"But Senator La Follette ain't one of them peace fellers, Mawruss," Abe said.

"Sure, I know," Mawruss replied. "All he wants is to run the war according to Cushing's Manual. If he had his way, we wouldn't be able to give an order for so much as one-twelfth dozen guns, y'understand, without it come up in the form of a motion that it is regularly moved and seconded that the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized to order the same and all those in favor will signify the same by saying aye, y'understand, and even then, Abe, him and Senator Vardaman would call for a show of hands under section 12 subsection (d) of the bylaws."

"Then I suppose if a few thousand American soldiers gets killed on account they ain't got the right kind of guns, Mawruss, we could lay it to section 12 subsection (d) of the bylaws," Abe suggested.

"And you could give some of them Senators credit for an assist, Abe, because you take a Senator like that, Abe, and when he holds up the ammunition supply with a two-hour speech y'understand, he oser worries his head how many American soldiers is going to be killed by the Germans in France six months later, just so long as his own name is spelt right by the newspapers in New York City next morning."

"It would help a whole lot, Mawruss," Abe said, "if Senators and Congressmen was numbered the same like automobiles, y'understand, because who is going to waste his breath arguing that the Senate should pass a law which it's a pipe the Senate ain't going to pass on account that nobody is in favor of it except himself and a couple of other Senators temporarily absent on the road, making Fargo, Minneapolis, Chicago and points east as traveling peace conventioners, y'understand, when he knows that next morning the only notice the New York newspapers will take his Geschrei will be: 'Among those who spoke in the Senate yesterday was:'"

"Well, there's plenty of people which thinks when Governor Lauben wouldn't let them peace fellers run off their convention, y'understand, that it was unconstitutional," Morris said.

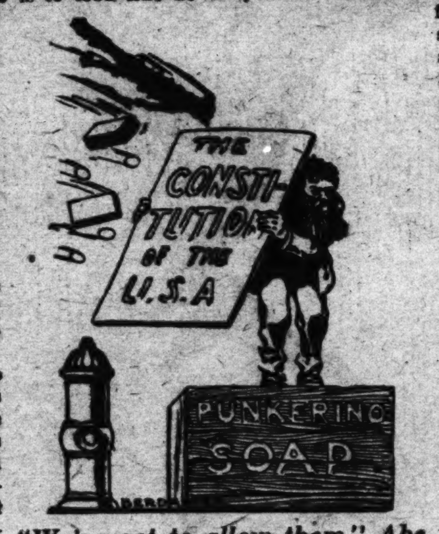
"Sure, I know," Abe said, "they're the same people which thinks that anything what helps us and hinders Germany is unconstitutional, including the Constitution. You take them Socialist orators, which the only use they've got for soap is the boxes the soap comes in, y'understand, and to hear them talk you would think that the Kaiser sunk the Lusitania pursuant to Article LXI, Section 2, of the Constitution of the United States, Mawruss, whereas when President Wilson sends a message to Congress asking them when they are going to get busy on the war taxes and what do they think this anyway, a kaffeklatsch, y'understand—it is all kinds of violations of Article XVI, XXXII, OK and COD of the Constitution and that the American people is a lot of weak-livered curs to stand for it, outside of being weak-livered curs anyway."

"You meant to say we allow these here fellers to get up on soap boxes and say such things like that?" Morris exclaimed.

"We've got to allow them," Abe replied. "The Constitution protects them."

"What do you mean—the Constitution protects them?" Morris said. "Here a couple of weeks ago a Judge in North Carolina gives out a decision that the Constitution don't protect little children 11 years old from being made to work in factories, y'understand, and now you are trying to tell me that the same Constitution does protect these here loafers? What kind of a Constitution have we got anyway?"

"I don't know, Mawruss, but there's this much about it anyhow: a lawyer could get more money out of just one board of directors which wants to go ahead and put through the deal if under the Constitution of the United States nobody could do 'em nothing, y'understand, than he could get out of all the children which gets injured working in all the cotton mills south of Mason & Hamlin's line, understand me. So you see, Mawruss, the Constitution not only protects these here soap box orators, but it also gives 'em something to talk about, because when they want to knock the United States and boost Germany, all they need to say is that you've got to hand it to the Germans; if they kill little children, they're anyhow foreign children and not German children."



THE CONSTITUTION OF THE U.S.A
PUNKERINO SOAP

"We've got to allow them," Abe said. "The Constitution protects them."

"I suppose a lot of them soap box orators gets paid by the German Government for boosting the Germans the way you just done it, Abe," Morris commented, "which I see that this here Ridder of the New York Staats Zeitung gives it out that anyone what accuses him that he is getting paid by the German Government for boosting the Kaiser in his paper would got to stand a suit for liable, because he is too patriotic an American sitson to print articles boosting the Kaiser except as a matter of friendship and free of charge—outside of what he can make by syndicating them to other German newspapers."

"But do them other German newspapers get paid by the German Government for reprinting Mr. Ridder's articles?" Abe asked.

"That Mr. Ritter don't say," Morris replied.

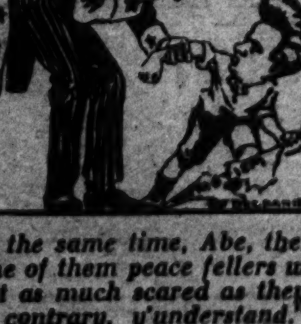
"Well," Abe continued, "somebody should ought to repeat the way them German newspapers love the Kaiser, even if it's only a United States District Attorney, Mawruss, because you take it if the shoe pinched on the other foot, and a feller by the name Jefferson W. Ridder was running an American newspaper in Berlin, Germany, by the name we would say, for example, the Berlin, Germany, Star Gazette, which is heart and soul for Germany and at the same time prints articles by American military experts showing how Germany couldn't win the war not in a million years, and the sooner the German soldiers realise it, the quicker they wouldn't get killed for such a hopeless Geschaft, y'understand. Also, nobody has a greater admiration for the Kaiser than the Berlin, Germany, Star Gazette, understand me, but that if the Kaiser thinks President Wilson is a tyrant, y'understand, then all the Star Gazette has got to say is: some day when the Kaiser is fixing the ends of his moustache in front of the glass mit candle grease or whatever such chamorrim uses on their moustaches to make themselves look like Kaisers, y'understand, that the Kaiser should take another look in the mirror and he would see there such a cutthroat tyrant which President Wilson never dreamt of being in Princeton University to the shipping clerk even. Also this here Berlin, Germany, Star Gazette says that Germany is the Land of Bluff and that"——

"One moment," Morris Perlmutter interrupted. "What are you trying to tell me—that such a newspaper would be allowed to exist in Berlin, Germany?"

"I am only giving you a hypo-critical case, Mawruss," Abe continued, "where I am trying to explain to you that if this was Germany it wouldn't be necessary for Mr. Ridder to sue anybody for liable. All he would have to do when they ask him if he's got anything to say why sentence should not be passed, y'understand, is to tell the Judge what was his trade before he became an editor, understand me, and they would put him to work at it for the remainder of the war."

"He wouldn't get off so easy as that, even," Morris commented. "Why, what do you suppose they would do to the editor of this here, for example, Star Gazette, if he was to just so much as hint that the Crown Prince couldn't be such a terrible good judge of French chateau furniture, y'understand, on account he had slipped over on the Berlin antique dealers a lot of reproductions which they had every right to believe was genwine old stuff, as it had been rescued from the flames, packed and shipped under the Crown Prince's personal supervision? I bet you, Abe, if the paper was on the streets at 3:30 and the sun rose at 3:35, y'understand, the authorities wouldn't wait that long. They'd shoot him at 3:32."

"I know it," Abe agreed. "You see, Mawruss, an editor, a soap-boxer, a cotton-mill owner or a stock-waterer might get away with it in this country under the Constitution, but over on the other side they wouldn't know what he was talking about at all, because in Germany, Mawruss, a constitution means only one thing. It's something that can be ruined by drinking too much beer, and you don't have to hire no lawyer for that."



"At the same time, Abe, there is some of them peace fellers which ain't as much scared as they are contrary, y'understand."

him, that he might not see what spoke in her eyes.

"'Yes. Well, I was just getting nicely to sleep, when somebody down on my left began firing. Then I saw, down the hill, the flashes of guns, and soon I could hear great lumps of pot-leg screaming through the air. They are firing a lot of pot-leg, those Kafirs. I fired at a flash that came out pretty regularly, and by and by it ceased to flash. Then, as I rose on my knees, a great knob of pot-leg hit me in the shoulder, and I cried out and fell down. Your husband came to me and helped me to go back to the rocks, and soon after all the shooting stopped. The burghers found three dead Kafirs in the morning, so we won.'

"'You were very brave,' said Anna.

"'Yes, wasn't I? And so was your husband, I believe,' said the wounded man. 'I couldn't see him, but I've no doubt he was. They'll try to rush the drift again tonight.'

"'What makes you think so?' Anna demanded, starting.

"'Oh, they've been gathering for some days,' answered the other. 'It's what they are trying to do. You see, there are no farms to plunder on the other side of the river, so they must cross.'

"'I see," said Anna slowly.

"When he was ready, she helped the wounded man again to his saddle, and saw him away, then turned, with the light of a swift resolution in her eyes, to the task of getting ready to go to Andreas. The river and the hills were but a short six hours from her farm, and on a horse she could have ridden it in less. But it was no wish of hers to bring any slur upon her husband, so she prepared to go to him in a cart, taking shirts and shoes and tobacco, like a dutiful wife visiting her husband on commando. And for a purpose she took no trouble to name herself, she put in her pocket a little pug-nosed revolver which Andreas had once bought, played with for a while, and then forgotten.

"A Kafir came with her, to see the horses and so on, for she was to travel in no other manner than that in which burghers' wives travel every day; but once clear of the farm she took the reins and the whip to herself, and drove swiftly, pushing the team anxiously along the way. So well did she guide her path that by evening they were slipping down the road towards the drift of the Tiger River, and when the light of day began to be mottled with night, they had crossed the drift and were passing up the right bank. When at length darkness came, they were at the foot of the hills which the commando held.

"Here Anna alighted and left the boy to outspan and watch the cart. In a basket on her arm she had a bottle of whisky and a bottle of medicine for rheumatism, that would make her coming seemly, and with the little revolver in her pocket knocking against her knee at every step, she faced the dark and empty veld, and began the ascent of the hill alone. She was come to be a spur to her husband. This she knew clearly enough, yet as she went along, with the thin wind of the night on her forehead, she wasted no thoughts, but bent herself to the business of finding the laager and coming to Andreas. About her were the somber hills, that are, in fact, mere bushy kopjes, but in the darkness and to one alone, portentious and devious mountains. Veld-bred as she was, the business of path finding was with her an instinct, like that of throwing up your hand to guard your eyes when sparks spout from the fire. Yet in an hour she lost herself utterly.

"She strove here and there, practicing all the tricks of the hunter to avoid moving in a circle, and so on. She wrenched her skirts through bushes that seemed to have hands. She plunged over stones that were noisy and ragged underfoot; she stumbled in ant-bear holes and bruised herself on ant hills. And after a long time she sat down and listened—listened patiently for the alarm of firing to beckon a course to her. And there she waited, her basket on her knee, her arms folded across it, for all the world like a quiet woman in church, with no tremors, but only a mild and enduring expectancy.

"It came at last, a tempest of shooting that seemed all round her. Below her and to her left, there were splashes of white flame. The fighter's daughter knew at once that these were from Kafir guns. Overhead, the rip-rip-rip of the burghers' rifles patted like rain on a roof, like hoofs on a road. And all was near at hand. Despite her efforts, she had come nearly the whole way round the hill and was now barely outside the cross-fire. She stood up, shaking her skirts into order, and took in the position. It was a bad one, but it pointed the way to Andreas, and with a pat to her tumbled clothes she settled the bottles safely again in the basket and resumed her climbing.

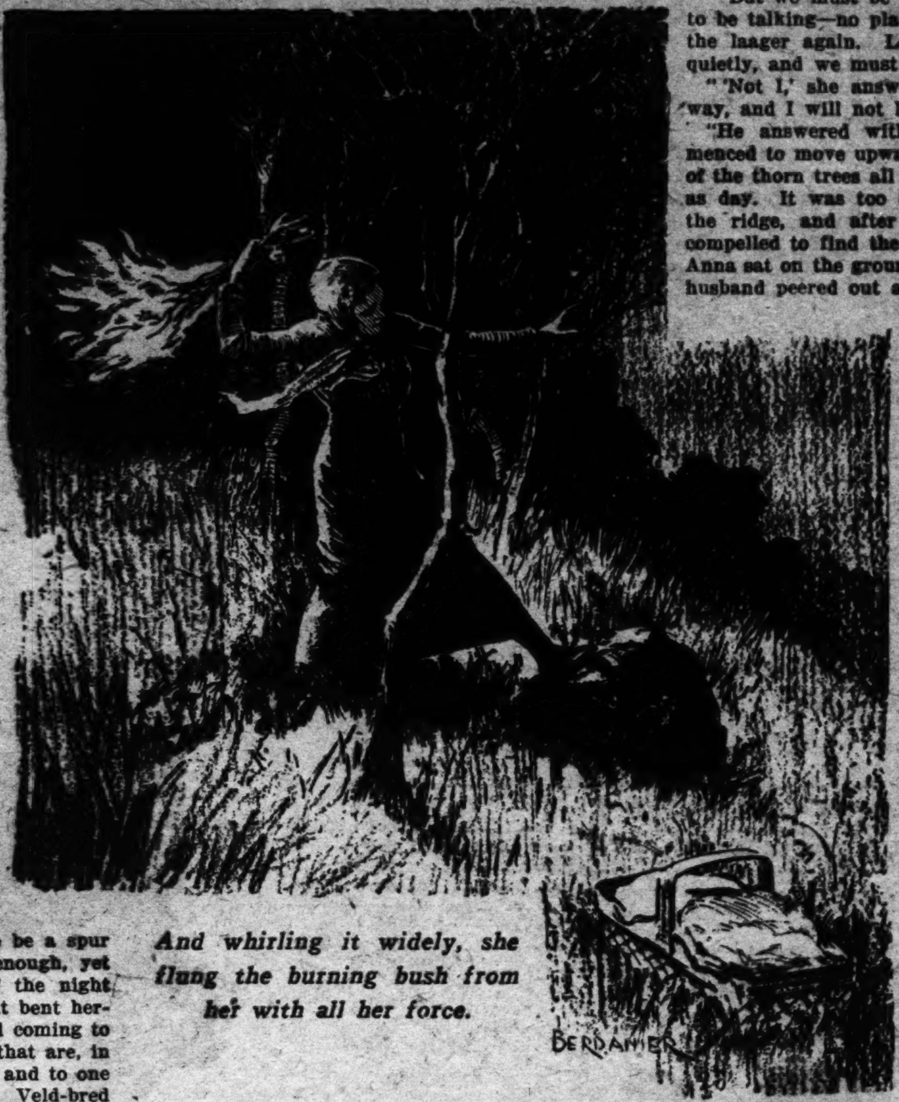
"She thrust along through the bushes, while the clatter of the rifles grew nearer, and presently there was a flick—like a frog diving into mud—close by her feet, and she knew there were bullets coming her way. Flick-plop! It came again and again and again.

"'Someone sees me moving and is shooting at me,' said Anna to herself, and stopped to rest where a rock gave cover. The bullets, lobbing like pellets tossed from a window, came singing down towards her, clicking into the bushes, while below she could see the progress of the battle written in leaping dots of fire. The Kafirs were spreading among the boulders—so much could be read from the growing breadth of the line of their fire, and Anna was quick to grasp the meaning of this movement. They were preparing to rush the hill, as of old the Basutos had done. The Kafirs with guns were being sent out to the flanks of the line to keep up a fire while the center went forward with the assegais. It was an old maneuver; she had heard her brothers talk of it many time, and also—she remembered it now—the counter trick to meet it. There must be bush at hand, to set fire to, that the advance may be seen as soon as it forms and withered with musketry.

"Regardless of that deft rifleman among the burghers who continued to drop his bullets about her, Anna took her basket again on her arm, came forth from her rock and resumed her climb. She was obliged to make a good deal of noise, for it was too dark and uncomfortable to enable her to choose her steps well. Up above, the burghers must have heard her plainly, though none but a keen eye would pick the blackness of her shape from the bosom of the night. The summit and the foot of the hill were alive with the spitting of the guns, and all the while the unknown sharpshooter searched about her for her life with clever plunging shots that slicked the dirt up. One bullet whisked through a piece of her skirt.

"'Now, I wonder if it can be Andreas who shoots so neatly,' said Anna, half-smiling to herself. 'He would be surprised if he knew what he is shooting at. Dear me, this is a very long and tiresome hill.'

"It was almost at that moment that she heard it—the beginning of the rush. There came up the hill, like a slow and solemn drum music, the droning war song of the Kafirs as they moved forward in face of the fire. It was an awful thing to hear, that bloody rhythm booming through the dome of the night. It is a song I have heard in the daytime, for a show, and it rings like heavy metal. Anna straightened herself and looked about her; there was nothing else for it but that she must start a fire, ere the battle line swept up and on to the laager. It would draw more shooting upon her; but that gave her no pause. She had matches in her pocket, and fumbled about her and found a little thorn bush that crackled while it tore her naked hands. Crouching by it, she dragged a bunch of matches across the side of the box. They spluttered and flamed and she thrust them into the bush. It took light slowly, for there were yet dregs of sap in it, but as it lighted, the deft rifleman squirted bullet after bullet all around her, aiming on the weakling flame she nursed with her bleeding hands.



And whirling it widely, she flung the burning bush from her with all her force.

"But for this she had no care at all. She had ceased to perceive it. Sheltering the place with her body, she drew out more matches, tore up grass, and built the little flame to a blaze that promised to hold and grow. As it cracked among the twigs, she wrenched the bush from the ground and ran forward with it upheld.

"'Burghers, burghers!' she screamed. 'Pas op! The Kafirs are coming up the hill!'

"And whirling it widely she flung the burning bush from her with all her force and watched its fire spread in the grass where it fell. Then she, too, fell down and lay among the rocks and plants, scarcely breathing.

"Up above, the old commandant, peering under the pent of his hand, saw the torch waved and the figure that flung it.

"'Allemachtag!' he cried. 'It's the Vrouw Van Wyck!'

"The next instant he was shouting. "And here come the Kafirs! Shoot, burghers, shoot straight and hard.'

"Where she lay, near the fire that now spread across the flank of the hills in broad bands among the dry grass with withered bushes, the Vrouw Van Wyck heard that last cry and lifted her head as a torrent of shooting answered it. The Kafirs and burghers were at grips, and it seemed that all around her the night rustled with secret men that slunk about. There was great danger to her at last, for either in going forward or going back she might fall into the hands of the Kafirs, and, oh, you can never tell what that may mean! At the best and choicest it is death, but at the worst it is torment with loathly outrage, the torment and degradation of sheol. Anna knew that, knew it well and feared it. That daunted her, and as the thought grew clearer in her mind, dread gripped her, and she huddled among the stones with ears alert and a heart that clacked as it beat.

"Noises threatened her, and to them, the casual noises of the night, she gave ear anxiously, while above her the fight raged direfully and all unheard. At one time she truly saw naked Kafirs go up the hill—the light of the fire glinted on the points of their assegais and threw a dull gleam on the muscle-rippled skin of them. Next, stones falling made her start, and ere this alarm was passed she heard the unmistakable clatter of shod feet among the boulders, and—plain and loud—an oath as some man stumbled. He was already to be seen, vaguely; then he was near at hand, coming upon her.

"'Now, what in God's name is this?' she cried, and rose. In her hand was the little blunt-nosed revolver.

"The man ran through a bush towards her. 'Anna,' he cried, 'Anna!'

"It was Andreas, and he took hold of her body and pressed her close to him.

"She thrilled with a superb exaltation of pride and joy, and put her arms about him.

"'What are you doing here?' he demanded.

"'I was coming to you,' she said, and with a little laugh, as of a girl, she showed him the basket, with the bottles yet in it. 'And you?' she asked, then.

"'Me?' he said. 'Why, I've come for you, of course. The Kafirs are at the ridge, and God knows what might happen to you. Was it you I was shooting at down here all the time?'

"'You shot very well,' she answered, and showed him the hole in her skirt where the bullet had pierced it. She heard him mutter another oath.

"'But we must be going,' he said. 'This is no place to be talking—no place at all. We must get around to the laager again. Let me have your arm, and tread quietly, and we must leave the basket.'

"'Not I,' she answered. 'I have brought it all this way, and I will not leave it now.'

"He answered with a short laugh, and they commenced to move upward. But by now the fire had hold of the thorn trees all about, and their path was as light as day. It was too dangerous to attempt to climb to the ridge, and after walking for a while they were compelled to find the cover of a rock and remain still. Anna sat on the ground, very tired and content, and her husband peered out and watched what was to be seen.

"'We have beaten them,' he said. 'I can see a lot of them running back. Pray God none come this way. I wish I had not left my rifle.'

"'Yes,' said Anna, 'you left your rifle, and came unarmed to help me.'

"'It would have been awkward among the bushes,' he explained, and was suddenly silent, looking out over the top of the rock.

"'What is it?' asked Anna. He gave no answer, so she rose and went to his side and looked too, with her arms on his shoulder.

"The rip-rip of the burghers' rifles sounded yet, but there was now another sound. The bushes creaked and the stones rocked with men returning down hill. Not 200 paces away they were to be seen—many scores of Kafirs dodging downhill, taking what cover they could, pausing and checking at each rock and mound that gave shelter from the bullets.

"Anna felt her husband quiver as he saw the crowd swooping upon him.

"'Take this,' she said, and pressed the little revolver into his hand. 'It would be well not to be taken. But kiss me first.'

"He looked from the retreating and nearing Kafirs to her, with a face knotted in perplexity.

"'It is the only thing,' she urged, and drew his lips to hers.

"He looked down at the little weapon in his palm, and spoke as with an effort.

"'I was never a brave man, Anna,' he said, 'and I can't do this. Will you not do it?'

"She nodded and took the pistol. The Kafirs found nothing to work their hate upon."

GAME OF THE LABRADOR ESKIMO

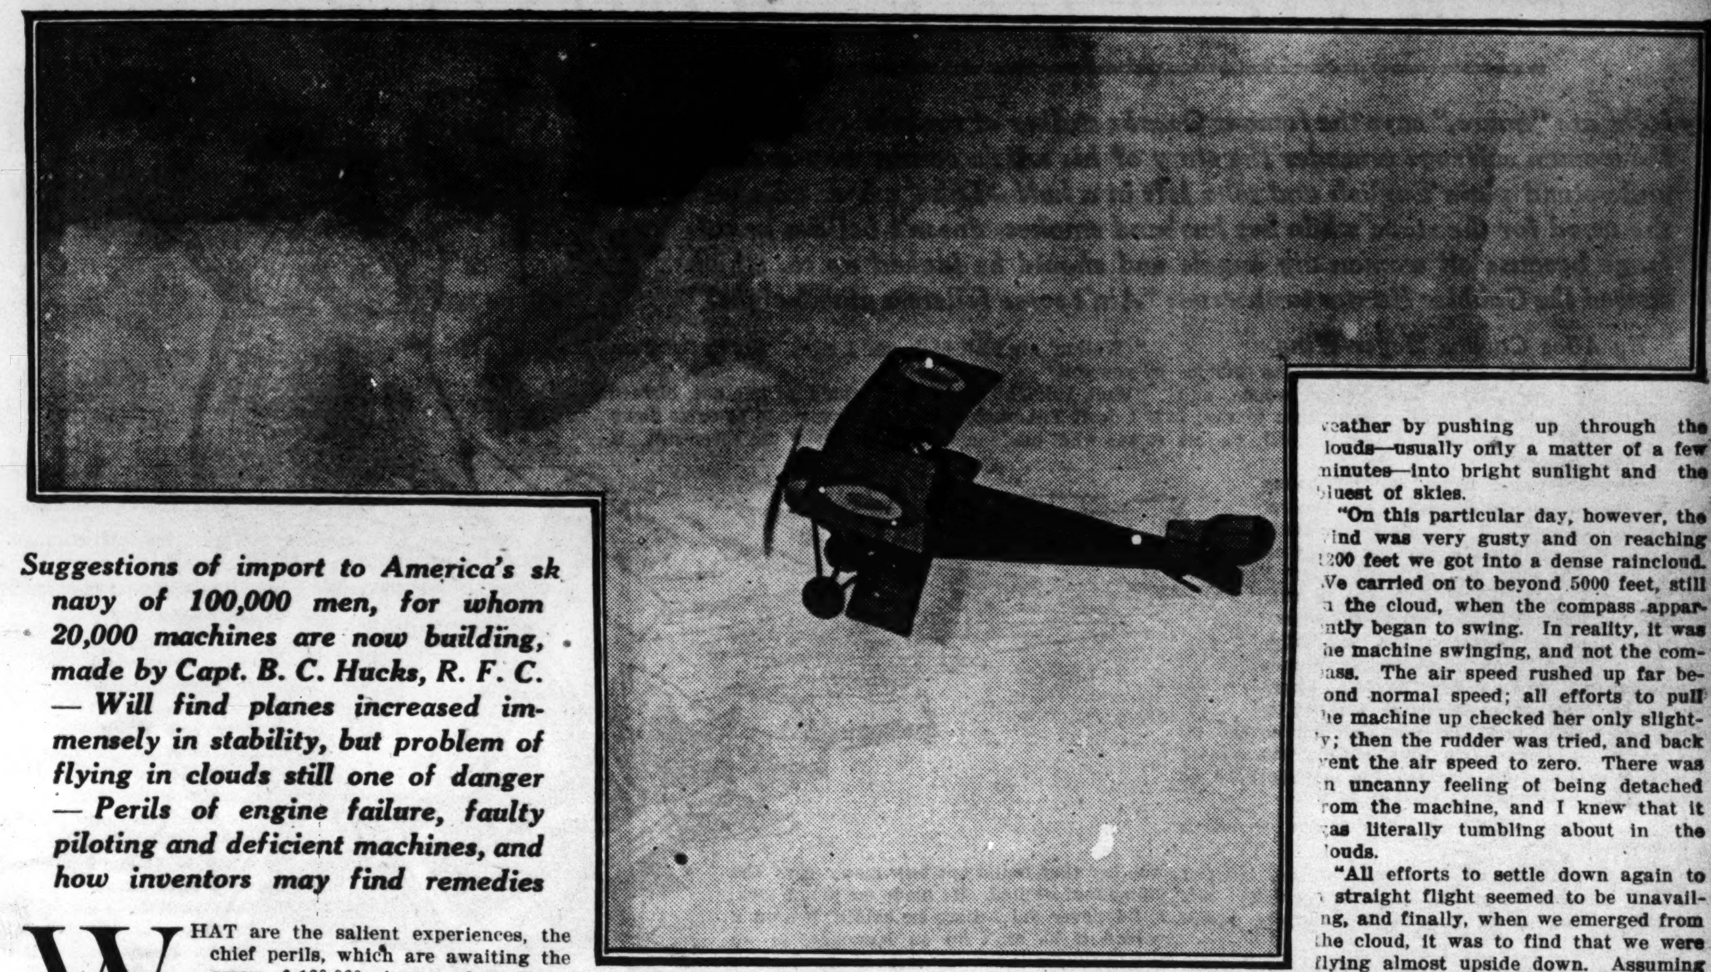
THE game of cup and ball (ayayau'k) is played in Labrador as among the Central Eskimo. A rabbit's skull or a cone-shaped piece of ivory is bored full of holes, and a peg of ivory, about four inches long, is attached to it by a thong. The game is to pierce the holes with the peg when the skull or ivory piece is swung on the end of the thong. If a player misses more than once, he has to give place to another. After successfully taking the holes in order, he may continue piercing any hole until he misses one.

A game (tingmiay'ax) similar to dice is played with ivory images of birds. There are 15 to 18 figures used in the game. Small images of men and women are also used. The players sit around a dressed sealskin. The images are taken in the hand, shaken and thrown up. In falling, those that stand upright belong to the player. The one who succeeds in getting the greatest number is declared the winner.

The Labrador Eskimo also play a game with small ivory pieces covered with dots in varying patterns, which appears to be an adaptation of dominoes (amasua'lat).

Two or more persons, according to the number of pieces in a set, sit down and pile the pieces before them. One of the players mixes the pieces together in plain view of the others. When this is done he calls to them to take the pieces. Each person endeavors to obtain a half or a third of the number, if there are two or three players. The one who mixed up the pieces lays down a piece and calls his opponent to match it with a piece having a similar design. If this cannot be done by any of the players, the first has to match it and the game continues until one of the persons has exhausted the pieces taken by him. The pieces are designed in pairs, having names such as Kamiu'tik (sled), Kaiak (canoe), Kale'sak (navel), 'A'magut (many), Atau'sik (one), Ma'kok (two), Pingasut (three), Sita'mut (four) and Ta'limut (five). Each of the names above must be matched with a piece of similar kind, although the other end of the piece may be of a different design. Kamiutik may be matched with an Amaaut if the latter has not a line or bar cut across it; if it has the bar must be matched with Amazut.

"My Three Years' Service as an Air-Fighter"



An actual photograph of a war airplane hovering near a cloud bank; once inside, the flyer is very likely to lose his way. He may be falling, spinning around, or even be traveling upside down and not even know it.

Suggestions of import to America's sky navy of 100,000 men, for whom 20,000 machines are now building, made by Capt. B. C. Hucks, R. F. C. — Will find planes increased immensely in stability, but problem of flying in clouds still one of danger — Perils of engine failure, faulty piloting and deficient machines, and how inventors may find remedies

WHAT are the salient experiences, the chief perils, which are awaiting the army of 100,000 airmen whom Uncle Sam is now choosing, for whom 20,000 machines are already building, for whom the nation's keenest brains in the automobile engine industry have devised the most efficient motor yet designed, and for whose training and equipment Congress has appropriated the enormous sum of $640,000,000?

This question, of interest not only personally to the prospective aviators and their relatives and friends, but also from the point of view of patriotism and romance to the country as a whole, has received a notable answer from a veteran of three years' service in the war. He is Capt. B. C. Hucks of the Royal Flying Corps, and his views and adventures, of particular value to the American novices who will soon be at the front, are embodied in a memorable paper read by him recently before the Aeronautical Society of Great Britain.

His opinion is that newcomers in the air game will have the advantage of a progress literally colossal which aviation has achieved under the stress and strain of three years of warfare—a warfare in which life and death at any moment may depend on an airplane's perfection in every detail, and upon the aviator's coolness and rapidity of thought in emergencies of great variety.

"A pilot has only to take a short flight in a 1914 model machine and then fly the latest 1917 pattern to really appreciate the advance that has been made," said Capt. Hucks.

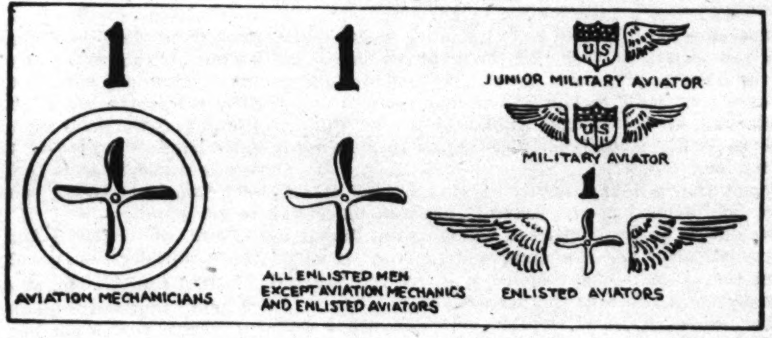
"Some time ago I had occasion to fly, after a considerable lapse of time, a 50-horsepower Gnome Bleriot, once a premier machine; in fact, a type used quite a lot by ourselves and the French at the very beginning of the war. At first I believed the machine to be a very bad specimen of the make, but after flying it for some time and acquiring a sort of lost art of balance, like a man who has not skated on ice for years and has to get his legs again, I realized that it was quite a good machine of the type, but that it takes considerable time to get used again to such inefficiency."

This remarkable increase in stability is due, Capt. Hucks says, to such slight alterations in the sections of the planes and elevators that only a very experienced eye can distinguish a stable from an unstable machine when they are standing side by side. Yet the one machine is an airplane inherently stable, which, if high enough in the air, will mostly right itself if the driver is cool enough to remove his hands from the levers; while with the other a moment's relaxation of control may result fatally.

Next to the improvement in stability, Capt. Hucks places increase of engine horsepower, conferring tremendously greater speed and climbing power. Third, he ranks the development of synchronizing gun gear, which enables a machine gun to be fired straight ahead through a tractor propeller. Until this device was perfected, he says, it seemed likely that the tractor in front, which pulls the airplane after it, would be doomed in favor of the propeller behind, which pushes the machine ahead of it, although "the former is far more effective aerodynamically than the latter." After all, he remarks, the synchronizing device is so simple that one is at a loss to understand how it remained so long undiscovered.

Despite these advantages, Capt. Hucks is of the opinion that in the present era of military flying there remains one great danger which has not been mastered, and he suggests the kind of contrivance by which, he declares, inventors could reduce the danger. That is the peril of flying in the clouds, of so much importance nowadays when it is to the advantage of a fighting airman to utilize clouds either as an ambush from which to fall upon his enemy, or else as a harbor into which flight may be made from superior forces.

It may not be generally known, says the airman, that during the last few years there have been a great number of fatal accidents due entirely to flying through clouds. The danger is that, enveloped in the mists of the sky, the aviator will lose all sense of direction and in consequence presently find his machine hopelessly out of control.



New insignia to be worn by United States flyers.

"I will give an instance which happened to myself a few weeks ago in the West of England," says Capt. Hucks. "I set out on a very cloudy, windy day to do a test climb to 10,000 feet on a late type of two-seater plane. I had often on previous occasions succeeded quite comfortably in reaching this height in spite of overcast weather by pushing up through the clouds—usually only a matter of a few minutes—into bright sunlight and the bluest of skies.

"On this particular day, however, the wind was very gusty and on reaching 1200 feet we got into a dense raincloud. We carried on to beyond 5000 feet, still in the cloud, when the compass apparently began to swing. In reality, it was the machine swinging, and not the compass. The air speed rushed up far beyond normal speed; all efforts to pull the machine up checked her only slightly; then the rudder was tried, and back went the air speed to zero. There was an uncanny feeling of being detached from the machine, and I knew that it was literally tumbling about in the clouds.

"All efforts to settle down again to a straight flight seemed to be unavailing, and finally, when we emerged from the cloud, it was to find that we were flying almost upside down. Assuming control again was then an easy matter."

This sort of thing, the narrator continues, has happened to him more than once, and also to many other aviators. He tells of a squadron commander in France who was surprised, while flying in a cloud, to find that everything loose in the machine was falling out. Without his knowledge he had become so "turned around" that he was flying upside down. Sometimes airplanes emerging from a cloud are found by their drivers to be in a "spin;" and not infrequently the planes collapse from the strain. In one such case, when the aviator was killed, the distintegrated planes landed half a mile from the body and the motors.

In such cases, Capt. Hucks finds that the compass, the spirit level and the apparatus registering the air speed are useless. Aviators have often reported that as soon as they got into a cloud "the compass started spinning." In fact, it was the airplane whirling about. The spirit level is fatally disarranged by centrifugal force when the airplane is whirling, and even when the air speed suddenly increases the driver, when immersed in a cloud, cannot tell whether he is falling in a straight nose dive or else revolving madly about in a descending spiral.

The instrument which Capt. Hucks recommends inventors to work on is one that will constantly show to the aviator a correct horizontal and a correct vertical line. The compass is supposed to show the former and the air speed the latter, but they are futile when flying in the clouds, as has been shown. The perfect device, he says, will probably be based on the gyroscopic principle.

Crashes, by which the Captain means accidents which result in striking the earth so as to demolish the craft, are principally due to three causes—engine failure, faulty piloting and faulty machines. Of these the most important is engine failure, often because the pilot is suddenly forced to descend on a site unsuitable for landing.

Engine failure, he asserts, is only rarely due to a general breakdown of the motor, but in the great majority of cases to a defect in some small detail. Personally, he has been compelled to make more forced landings on account of failure of the petrol supply than any other engine trouble. And this is due, not to exhaustion of gasoline, but to failure of the pressure feed. Very seldom has he been compelled to alight because the feed pipes become choked or because they were severed, but in nearly every instance because the pressure feed failed. Therefore, he recommends that this system of petrol feed be dropped altogether, and says he has obtained satisfactory results from a gasoline pump instead of the air pressure pump generally in use.

A not infrequent cause of engine trouble, he states, is dirt in the gasoline tank. He advises that a thorough system of tank washing before pouring in the petrol be adopted. It may take a considerable time, but dirt in the tank eventually works its way into the feed pipes or filters and chokes them. In such cases, there is a good chance of "crashing" unexpectedly.

Capt. Hucks believes that so far as fundamental type goes there has been little improvement during the war, the advance having been confined to improvements in details, momentous as have been the results of these. The Wright brothers, like Holland in the submarine field, still hold the basic discoveries of human flight. The triplane is regarded as a very slight variation from the standard, and the results obtained with the quadruplane, or four-tiered machine, have not justified the experiments.

Yet, says this authority, "the past three years, although normally a short space of time, have been a veritable lifetime, judged by the advance of aviation. Many thousands of persons are now deeply engrossed in the subject. I think I am right in saying that through the war aviation has advanced more than it would have done in eight or ten years of peace conditions. In fact, the rate of improvement in aircraft is so fast, the pace is so alarmingly rapid, that it is almost impossible for manufacturers to keep up. It seems that by the time the latest and most efficient type of machine is manufactured in sufficiently large numbers to gratify half the requirements of the service, that type of machine is out of date and obsolete."

The Captain says that he has flown many kinds of machines, and that the beginner need not be excessively alarmed if required to change from one make to another.

He says that the difference in the piloting of the various types of modern machines is remarkably small, and that in his opinion any man who is thoroughly efficient with one type will, in a short time, be master of any other.

This conclusion is of extreme importance, considering the specialization into which modern aviation has evolved itself—there being divisions into photographing, scouting, bombing, fighting and other arms of airplanes.

"The chief difference seems to be," says Capt. Hucks, "that the smaller and faster machines are more difficult to land, but are easier to handle in the air. In the case of crashes, the larger and heavier the machine is, the less damage is likely to occur to the occupants, as a great share of the shock of impact is absorbed by the heavy machine.

"Very much larger and heavier machines than those at present in use might comfortably be flown single-handed, no extra effort being required for the controls, providing that the controlling surfaces are properly balanced.

"To the lay mind it might appear that with such contrasts as exist between the smaller and larger machines it would be necessary to train pilots intensively for each type. In my experience this is not so, although, of course, the very best results are obtained when pilots are required to specialize."

Capt. Hucks recalls that one authority named a good horseman as being the type possessing the best qualifications for an airman, and agrees that good hands, steady nerves and judgment are essential. But he adds:

"Personally, I consider that the nearest equivalent to the art of flying is that of motor car driving. A person who thoroughly understands and who can drive a car really well should possess the qualities required for piloting an airplane. A good motorist has this advantage over a good horseman, that the former is more likely to be naturally mechanical—a faculty inborn, not easily acquired, and very important in the matter of flying."

The second cause of disasters named by Capt. Hucks is that of faulty piloting, and he says that the most common error made by even experienced fliers is that of losing flying speed on a turn which begins a side-slip, and which, given sufficient height, terminates in a nose dip, or what is far more serious, a spin. This mistake is frequently made under stress of circumstances, when engine failure calls forth extra effort on the part of the pilot to reach a certain landing place. That is always a dangerous maneuver, and in nine cases out of ten when smashes have resulted less damage would probably have been caused had the pilot kept his machine from turning and pancaked straight ahead.

Most of the later type of machines can be "stalled"—that is, their velocity can be reduced well below flying speed—without any risk of side-slipping, provided they are kept in a straight course and laterally level. These will automatically drop the nose as soon as the speed becomes so low that the elevators have little or no effect.

The great majority of accidents due to this cause start at heights insufficient for the machine to get out of its side-slip before striking the ground. If sufficient height remains after the machine assumes a nose drive, there is no reason why it should not be "pulled out" and a normal glide resumed. But getting out of a spin too near the earth is a far more difficult proposition than the instinctive maneuver of pulling up out of a nose glide.

In fact, spinning is so dangerous that Capt. Hucks advises manufacturers to see that their machines are of the non-spinning type. However quick and clever, he says, the pilot may be in applying his pet remedy, he may not have height enough to do so, and the result is usually disastrous.

The errors of judgment which are made in landing account for crashes galore, but these, fortunately, are usually a small matter compared to those made in the air, seldom resulting in more than a smashed landing chassis. Flying experience is the only remedy for this particular fault.

Landing with the wind will sometimes end in a crash through the machine over-running the limit of the landing ground; while landing side to wind will buckle wheels and wreck chassis. Neither of these troubles is always the direct fault of the pilot.

An easily distinguishable standard type wind-vane on every recognized landing ground would considerably lessen smashes from these causes.

Accidents directly due to faulty construction of the airplane are, fortunately, comparatively rare, as when they happen the results are so often fatal. They occur, however, even on standard types. In some cases the airplane is not entirely at fault, as in these days of heavy high speed efficient machines with so little head resistance and which attain colossal speeds on diving, it is such an easy matter for the pilot to increase the load beyond the highest factors of safety.

Construction failures of machines in the air can sometimes be traced to damage inflicted by imperfect landing, usually to the back part of the body in the region of the tail skid. This gets overlooked and subsequently the tail gives way under any extra stress while flying.

Time and material would be saved, in Capt. Huck's opinion, if the modified "penguin" type of machine were more generally used for the very earliest training. He refers to the small-powered machine, incapable of leaving the ground, but designed solely for taxi-ing about the aerodrome, which was generally in vogue at the Bleriot schools before the war. On this machine the pupil can be loosed off alone immediately after preliminary explanation with comparatively no risk, and at the same time he would get used to controlling his engine, have plenty of practice in the use of that important control, the rudder, and lastly, but not least, he would have to be left to his own resources, use a little initiative, and get used to the noise and wind from his motor.

This type of machine might be modified in such a way that the other controls might be brought to play an active part in piloting the "penguin" over the ground. The whole body and wings might be supported independently of the landing chassis (or rather the rolling chassis) in a sort of gimbals, so that it could be banked and elevated by the control lever while running along or turning. The Captain thinks an hour's taxi-ing on a machine of this type would, as a preliminary, be of more assistance than the same amount of dual control, as the pupil would know at least more about the use of his rudder.

The best type of airplane to use for instruction in actual flying and the question as to whether it should be stable or not is a very debatable point. It is the opinion of this veteran that the less efficient within certain limits the early training machine is, the better and sounder will be the elementary knowledge and experience gained by the pupil. Such experience is likely to be very valuable when, later in his career, he is confronted with engine failures or similar predicaments, where his reserve of engine power will no longer cover up his multitude of sins in piloting.

Personally, Capt. Hucks does not consider the stable machine the best for training. If it is considered so on the score that once in the air it will look after itself and so reduce the chances of the pupil crashing, then one must assume, for the sake of argument, that a self-landing training machine has been devised that will automatically land itself correctly and do away with the smashes on landing; so that ultimately, with a few more improvements, all the pupil need do would be just to sit still and take the air and everything would be done for him. But after many hours of joy-riding on this super-school machine he would have learned very little about piloting. For securing Aero Club Certificates for pupils at so much a head as a commercial proposition, this sort of machine might be excellent, but the unstable machine should be used as the basis of training to get the best results in the end.

"I now come to another question, over which there is a deal of controversy," Capt. Hucks concludes. "It is the use of instruments for training. I consider instruments as valuable accessories to any machine, but only under certain circumstances are they necessities, and in training they should not be regarded as indispensable. It is the wrong system, in my opinion, for the pupil to be made to rely on them too much.

"Although flying is largely a mechanical procedure, there is a tremendous lot of the personal sensation and feel that the pilot should acquire which, when once acquired, will take the place of practically any instrument devised. For instance, could an ice-skater learn to do the outside-edge merely by looking at a bubble of a spirit-level fixed in front of him? I should say no, but once he had acquired the feeling that he had correct balance, which only practice can give, he will make his sharp turn on the outside-edge at the correct angle better than any instrument could show him.

"Therefore I say let the pupil acquire without delay that naturally instinctive feeling so absolutely essential for a good pilot. When he is taught to rely on his instrument too much to climb, turn, or even try to land, he will be long, if ever, in acquiring the art that will make him independent of instruments.

"I seldom use an instrument as an assistance to piloting. Do not assume that I am sneering at instruments: in fact, as I have stated, there are times when they are a necessity."

Capt. Hucks advised the British to develop strict medical tests for the selection of candidates for the flying corps. His recommendations have particular interest in view of the rigid examinations, based on the latest scientific principles, which are in force in the United States air service, and which were described in the Sunday Post-Dispatch Magazine a week ago.

"I think," he asserted, "that a great deal of time and expense might be saved if some form of medical test were applied to prospective pilots, such as I understand is done in France, where the effect of sudden shocks upon the system of the candidate is recorded by mechanical means, and other tests are made which are supposed to give a fair indication at once of the medical fitness and the possession of the necessary qualities, such as nerve, judgment and the presence of mind required for the making of a pilot.

"There are many pupils on whom a lot of time and material has been wasted in the endeavor to make pilots of them who simply do not possess these ordinary qualifications, and it is not until they have had smash after smash that it is discovered that they simply have not got it in them."

The "Waacs"---But What's in a Name?

at one end and a miniature stage at the other. In short, the familiar compound of tearoom, clubroom and concert hall—where you sip your cocoa, write your letters and give or attend entertainments. 'Y. W. C. A.' is the sign on its face; the two organizations work together for the welfare of the girls.

"When I made my visit the evening was typical August; there were deck chairs planted in the open, a game of tennis was in progress, and half the camp had wandered out a-walking. Even so, the hut was by no means neglected; there was custom at the counter and a tidy audience for a lecture. And tonight, when the rain is beating down in torrents, I know, without telling, that it will be filled from end to end—as it will fill every evening when the darkness lengthens and outside amusements are impossible. Without such a meeting place and the interests it creates, a temporary colony, with no roots in the soil, would often find its hours of leisure more wearisome than its hours of work. A hut concert in these conditions is not only a hut concert; it is an event to be talked of afterwards. And a lecture in the same way may be more than just a lecture—a subject for thought and argument unconnected with immediate surroundings.

"And be it remembered that in such a temporary colony immediate surroundings are permanent and hard to get away from. There are few facilities in Northern France for travel, for change and week-ending; you must give your reason if you would enter a train—and the reason has got to be a good one. Hence your change of idea and relaxation of mind must be found on the spot you are tied to—tied to, maybe 'for the duration.' The camp and your daily duties for the time being are your world, and the hut where you are made welcome and forget your work is often the element which makes that narrow world something better than a well-managed pen."

And shall we some day have American "Waacs" reinforcing our "Sammies" in France? No doubt, if the war persists long enough; for the American girl yields in spirit, enterprise and patriotism to her sisters of no other nation of the world.

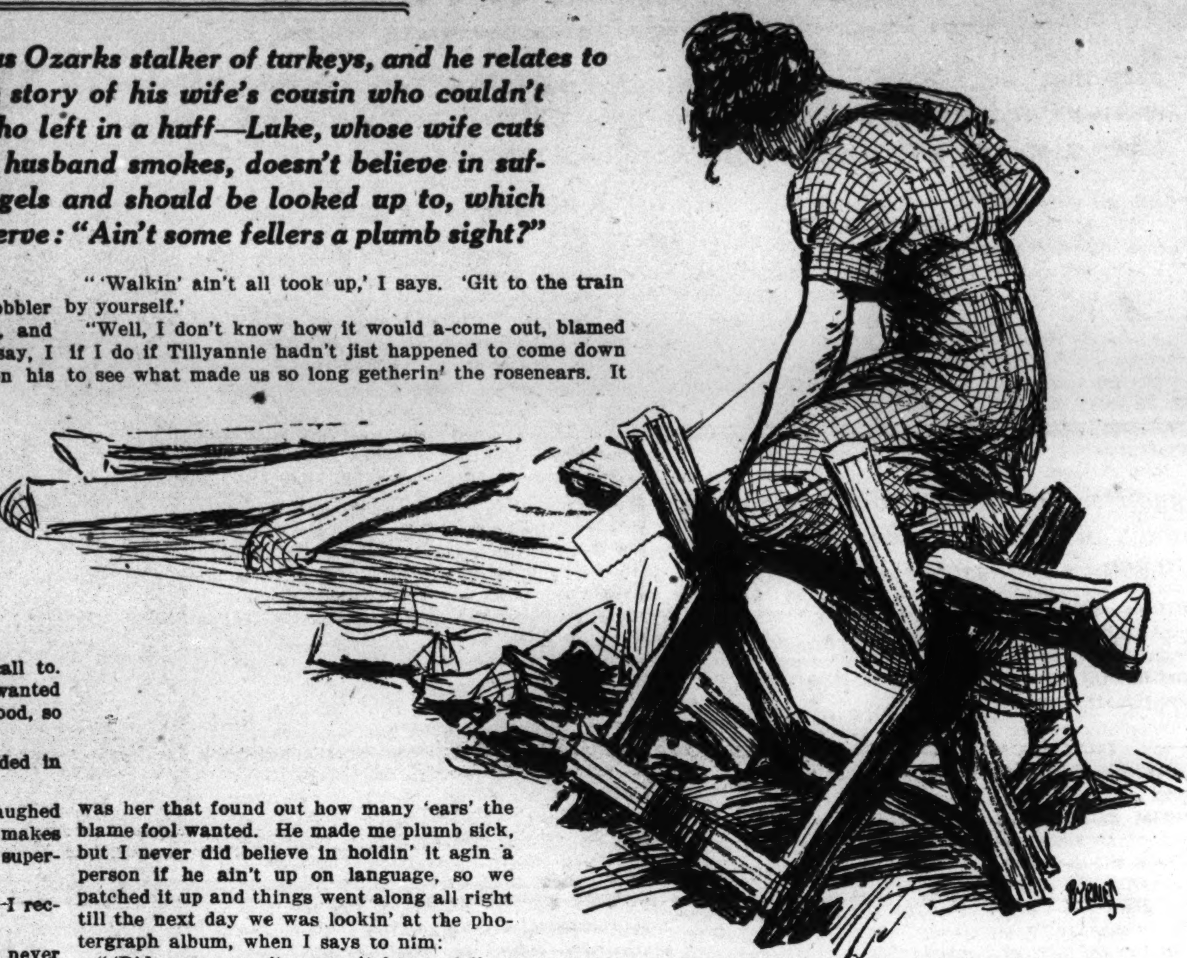
THE GOBBLER HUNTER, THE CITY FELLER AND LUKE HOOSIER

City folks are "quare," says the famous Ozarks stalker of turkeys, and he relates to the woman suffrage crusader the story of his wife's cousin who couldn't understand plain English and who left in a huff—Luke, whose wife cuts the wood for the stove while her husband smokes, doesn't believe in suffrage because all women are angels and should be looked up to, which caused the Gobbler Hunter to observe: "Ain't some fellers a plumb sight?"

By Alice Curtice Moyer-Wing.



"That's jist Alviny, workin' up some old fence rails fer the cookstove," he says.

I KNEW him the moment I saw him—the Gobbler Hunter. I came upon him in the woods, and just for the sake of having something to say, I "reckoned" that he hadn't put a notch on his gunstock lately.

"You jist come around to our house fer supper tonight and see," was the reply. "Of all the cooks, Tillyannie is the beatenest. Why, she could make good eatin' out of old wool hats. She shore got everybody skinned when it comes to fixin' good things to eat. Don't keer who they air. And her roast turkey! Say, if you don't never taste it the way Tillyannie does it, you won't never be jist plumb ready to pass in your checks. They'll be somethin' missin' and you ortn't to go without it, and you're shore in luck that you ain't got no call to. Tillyannie, she's been a sayin' all along that she wanted you to visit us when you got into this neighborhood, so jist consider yourself invited.

"Looks as if they wasn't no introductions needed in this here meetin', don't it?"

His grin was too infectious to resist, so I just laughed with him in appreciation of the Ozark way which makes so formal a thing as an introduction entirely superfluous.

"But I'd heard about you," I said. "That's how I recognized you."

"Shore. Everybody hears about me. They ain't never been nobody around here that could git in hollerin' distance of me when it comes to huntin' turkeys. Why, when they jist ain't no sich a thing nowhere as wild turkeys, me and Tillyannie is a-livin' fat on 'em. Fine big feller I got this mornin'. Gobbled like a locomotive. Mighty nigh a shame to kill him."

And then I asked him if he believed in woman suffrage.

"You bet your life, I do," he said. "And I wasn't borned that a-way, nuther. I jist larned to believe in it from observation. Why, you cain't kill the darned thing. Ever time somebody hits it a whack or cuts its head off, it jist bobs up agin, bigger than ever.

"But before we git deep into it, I want to tell you about a feller frum the city that's jist been a-visitin' us. I was thinkin' about him when you come up. I reckon that's La Belle you're a-ridin'?"

I said it was.

"She packs you all around jist like she enjoyed it, don't she?"

"She does enjoy it," I assured him. "She's just about half of this campaign, knows all about it and likes it."

"Shore," he agreed. "Hosses knows a heap more than they let on sometimes. Reckon you wouldn't swap her off?"

"No."

"Shore not. Well, about this feller frum the city—say! Some of you city people is shore quare; quare as they make 'em.

"This feller is a kind of a cousin to Tillyannie. Hadn't never been away frum Sent Louis, so this fall he jist up and come to make us a visit. He's the kind of a feller that puts a 'g' into sich words as doin', but he seemed like a all-right feller in spite of it, so I made him welcome, though I hadn't never seen him before, and I liked him well enough, so that I didn't keer if he tagged around with me. Sometimes he was useful. Sometimes jist ornamental, as the feller says. But I didn't mind.

"'You can go with me after corn, if you don't keer,' I says to him the next mornin', leadin' the way to the late rosenear patch.

"'Shore,' he says, follerin'.

"'How many years do you want?' I axed him. I never did believe in pullin' more than you need.

"'How many what?' he axed.

"'Years,' I says. 'How many do you want?'

"'I've got 45 now,' he says, lookin' kinder funny. 'Ain't that enough fer a while?'

"I reckon I looked kinder funny myself, but I says: 'Where air they? I didn't see you comin' out here by yourself.'

"'They're all over me,' he says. "Cain't you see the signs of 'em? But what has comin' out here by myself got to do with it?' lookin' at me suspicious.

"'Oh, nothin,' I says, lookin' at him the same way and beginnin' to pull corn, with one eye on him. 'Do you reckon three years would be too much fer you?' I ventured to remark, sort of keerless.

"'Three years where?' he says. 'At Jefferson City?' he says. 'Kinder sounds like you want to send me up fer somethin' or other.'

"'Maybe that's where you belong,' I says, 'though that wasn't what I was a-aimin' at.'

"'You're a lunatic,' he says, 'if you air kinfolks.'

"'Crazy people always does think that everybody else is crazy,' I sasses back. 'And I ain't no blood kin to you, nuther. But how many years can you eat, then, if that will do any better?'

"'How many years can I eat! Gee whizz, man, I believe you're makin' fun of me. Jist plumb out-and-out fun of me.'

"'You ain't no sense at all,' I says, feelin' all riled up. 'What's the matter with you, anyhow. Seems to me that you're the darndest fool I ever run acrosst.'

"'Seems to me that same way about you,' he says, all riled up hisself.

"'Once more,' I says, 'how many years do you want? And if that won't do, how many years can you eat?'

"'And once more, I refuse to answer any sich fool questions,' he says. 'If you'll take me to the train tomorrer, I guess I'll be goin' back to the city,' he says.

"'Walkin' ain't all took up,' I says. 'Git to the train by yourself.'

"Well, I don't know how it would a-come out, blamed if I do if Tillyannie hadn't jist happened to come down to see what made us so long getherin' the rosenears. It was her that found out how many 'ears' the blame fool wanted. He made me plumb sick, but I never did believe in holdin' it agin a person if he ain't up on language, so we patched it up and things went along all right till the next day we was lookin' at the photergraph album, when I says to him:

"'Did you ever git your pitcher took?'

"'I ain't got no call fer pitchers,' he said.

"'But didn't you ever git it took?' I axed.

"'I ain't a married man,' he says. 'What would I want with a pitcher? But if I had a dozen pitchers I wouldn't expect nobody to take 'em,' he says.

"I didn't want to notice his quareness too hard, him bein' Tillyannie's cousin, so I says to him: 'You could git a good one took at Poplar Bluff,' I says, tryin' to be polite.

"'Air they jist all a-pinin' away fer pitchers in Poplar Bluff?' he yelled at me. 'Is Poplar Bluff a den of pitcher thieves?' he yelled agin. 'And have I got to take a pitcher along with me down there jist to be robbed?' he yelled a little louder.

"'Once more, you blamed eejet,' I yelled back at him, 'I'll ax you a civil question, jist fer manner's sake. Did you ever have your pitcher took? We'd shore like to have one—that is, I reckon Tillyannie would.'

"Well, the upshot of the whole thing was that he walked to Williamsville that night so as to git a early train fer Sent Louis.

"Wasn't that a plumb sight? I ain't holdin' it agin you fer bein' frum the city, yourself, but that feller was a quare one. If he jist knowed it, I didn't want his pitcher all mixed up with the photergraphs nohow. It would a-spiled the album. Plumb spiled it. And you can tell him so fer me if you ever run acrosst him.

"Have you seen Luke Hoosier yet?" he asked suddenly.

"This morning," I said.

"Did he talk to you about women bein' angels?" he asked.

I told him that he did.

"What was Alviny doin' this mornin'?"

I told him that she was hauling in cornstalks when I first saw her.

"Shore. Sich little jobs as haulin' fodder and fixin' the fence is Alviny's reglar passtime and sawin' wood is her sideline. That chilly mornin' we had t'other day, the mornin' of the night it frosted, I drapped in at Luke's house on my way to the postoffice. Luke, he was settin' by the far-place, smokin' his pipe and toastin' hisself over a pile of blazin' pine knots. He had heerd that you was gittin' round close and purty soon he up and says: 'I've always held out that women is angels. Jist angels. That's why I don't want 'em to vote. Why,' he says, 'they jist ort to be up high some place, on a throne or somethin', so's a man can kneel at their feet and worship 'em. Angels shore ain't got no business votin', he says.

"I heerd the saw a-goin' out at the woodpile, but I didn't seem to notice it, so I says: 'If there's anything to that about their bein' angels, they're shore needed at the polls about as bad as any place,' I says. 'A little angelic goodness would come in mighty handy in a voter,' I says. 'The better the voter, the better the vote,' I tells him. 'Don't you worry,' I says, 'about too much angelic goodness goin' to waste at the polls. They ain't no place where a supply of it could be used to better advantage. Got somebody sawin' wood fer you?' I axed, gittin' up to go.

"'Oh, no! That's jist Alviny, workin' up some old fence rails fer the cookstove,' he says.

"'Oh,' I says. 'So, at odd times, when you ain't worshippin' your angel up on that high throne you was talkin' about, you've got her sawin' wood fer passtime.'

"But Luke, he didn't more'n half like it, him not bein' much of a hand to joke. I reckon you talked with Alviny some this mornin'?"

I said I did.

"And I reckon when Jim wasn't listenin' she told you she believed like you do?"

I said she did.

"Shore. Ain't some fellers a plumb sight? But, as I was sayin', ever' time somebody comes along with a anti-sufferage ax and cuts its head off, it jist sprouts up purtier than before. See this old gum stump? Well, its determination shore 'minds me of worman sufferage. You jist cain't kill this kind of a gum. You can deaden 'em all around like you do to kill any other kind of a tree that I ever heerd of, but darn me if this kind of a gum keers a copper. It jist perks up its head in the spring and gits as green as the rest of 'em. Then you cut it off at the stump, thinkin' you've got it where the wool is short that time, shore, but you see an example right before you of the trick it cuts up when you do that. That there stump jist natchelly refuses to act like other stumps. It jist sends up dozens of sprouts and flourishes like a bay tree, as the feller says. Not the kind of sprouts that grows up from the ground like ordinary stumps has, but sprouts that shoots right up from the middle of it, right up where the tree trunk was a standin' afore it was cut off—right up toward the sky, as it were.

"Well, that's the way with worman sufferage. You cain't kill it. It would a-died a unnatural death long ago, if it could a-been killed. It jist goes on growin' and bloomin' bigger and purtier every year. Tillyannie, she reads all the news to me. We keep posted up, right along, on things. And we're expectin' to go to the polls together, yet. And right here in old Mizzoura, too. Shore we do."

DRIED POTATOES

A consular report from Bolivia calls attention to the fact that throughout the Andean Plateau of that country, potatoes are cultivated at altitudes where even the hardiest grains and vegetables will not grow. The natives have a method of preserving potatoes, which consists of alternate freezing and thawing until all the moisture is removed. The resulting product is known as Chunu and it can be stored for months and even years without fear of deterioration. Pressed into little bullet-shaped pieces, chunu is universally offered for sale in the markets, and is one of the chief foods of the native population.

The "Waacs"—But What's in a Name?

Latest British slang may not be pretty, but it stands for Woman's Army Auxiliary Corps, whose taking over of work behind the front is releasing thousands of men for the trenches — Women ambulance drivers, bookkeepers, hospital orderlies, paymistresses, cooks and seamstresses, and the life of England's flower of womanhood within sound of the big guns —: -:-

"Waacs-on-Parade"—somewhere in France.

ADD now to the war's eccentricities in the creation of slang the dismaying vocable "Waacs." As it first falls upon startled ears, the syllable reveals an unloveliness singular even in military argot. It connotes an auto horn, a college yell, or an Aristophanic chorus of frogs. It would serve as the nonsense-name of some fictitious monster in a Lewis Carroll zoo. Yet scarcely any word in England today arouses deeper emotion, sincerer reverence and more heartfelt blessings.

For this squawking noun denominates England's newest and most gracious war enterprise, one that has developed, too, in bewildering magnitude. The letters composing the word are the initials of the Woman's Army Auxiliary Corps, a sonorous phrase which the British, with a passion for abbreviation equalled only by their disregard of euphony, have cut down to "Waacs." Similarly, to Tommy-Atkins-in-a-hurry, Great Headquarters is "G. H. Q.," and Commanding Officer is "K. O."

In England's crying necessity for men, more men and always men, the first step in the mobilization of the nation's woman power was that of employing women and girls in the munitions factories, thus eventually releasing hundreds of thousands of men for the battlefield.

Then, as the war's hunger for men in France and Flanders grew ever fiercer, the question occurred to Mrs. Chalmers Watson, a physician who had been active in war work, why women could not relieve still other thousands of men in work back of the battle lines. She saw no reason why, with the exception of actual fighting and heavy mechanical labor, women could not serve as well as men in most of the occupations behind the front. Why could they not become ambulance drivers, hospital orderlies, bookkeepers and paymistresses; why could they not cook, sew and repair gas masks?

The answer to these questions was the organization, about 14 months ago, of the first company of "Waacs." A few pioneers won the consent of the military authorities for a tryout. By common consent, they accomplished wonders. Efficient, willing, making no complaint as to hours and duties, they were heart and soul in the winning of the war. Within the limits of physical strength, there proved to be no task in which these young women were less competent or faithful than the men whom they displaced.

The officials were greatly impressed, and urged that the organization be taken up on a large scale. With Dr. Watson as the chief executive, the movement grew to imposing proportions. There is one camp in England today—one out of many, many others—where 1000 women are in training for work behind the front. The organization is on military lines. The women wear khaki uniforms and sign a pledge of enlistment for the duration of the war. Discipline is strictly enforced, and there is even a series of punishments prescribed under the Defense of the Realm act. But such is the keenness and eagerness of the volunteers that even the slighter penalties have but seldom been invoked.

The possibilities appealed to all the spirited instincts of the nation's young womanhood, and it must be remembered that these girls are the sisters, bred of the same bone and flesh, of the gallant youths who at the beginning of the war hastened to France to pour out their lives in the sacred cause of civilization against savagery. These, too, are modern young women, to whom the historic feminine role of waiting, in idle suffering, while the men make war, has grown distasteful and unworthy.

France had from the outset of the conflict remained the mecca of their imaginations, but the scenes of battle were barred to almost all save nurses. Here was an opportunity for adventure and service in France itself which fired thousands of girlish hearts. To be near the heart of things, to be within hearing of the guns, to send a God-speed to the fighters as they went forward to the trenches and to welcome them back as they returned in pain and weariness, and, above all, to release more and more men for active combat with the Huns — surely duty and romance were here irresistibly combined. Certainly there was no lack of volunteers.

"War has known no such adventure," says Dr. Watson, "since the Amazons. But these are not Amazons. They are the girls we have known, the wives and mothers and sisters who were the light of our homes in the old time and who will return to lighten them again.

"Our greatest hopes are being realized, and the spring campaign should witness a revolution of service such as the world has never known. This does not seem to me an exaggerated statement. These great armies of women, the majority of them in their neat khaki uniforms, are going out to release fighters for the trenches. They will add to our forces large numbers of soldiers who would otherwise be at the desk, in the hospital, or at some transparently civil employment. And they will carry to the tasks an enthusiasm and a loyalty which no man could better."

In some parts of France the "Waacs" have already ceased to be a novelty. Some companies have been there long enough to start camp cabbage gardens, after the fashion of the masculine corps. Their uniforms pervade the cobbled streets of the towns where they are quartered, and, office hours over, dot the country roads. Judging by the frequency with which they are seen under escort, they appear to be popular with the army from a social point of view.

But they remain a new thing in history; those brown-hatted, khaki-clad young women are unprecedented in the annals of soldiers and soldiering. Women in numbers have attached themselves to armies before now; but these organized, chaperoned and well-behaved feminine battalions for noncombatant duties are a direct product of the new warfare which is waged by a nation with every resource of its strength, which is fought by civilians as well as soldiers, and which is won in the factories as well as in the trenches.

By no means all of the "Waacs" remain in the so-called security back of the front, which is no longer so safe as it was before the boche airmen took to bombing hospitals and other noncombatant establishments. Many of them, as ambulance drivers, go frequently under fire, and, like the male drivers, wear steel helmets as a protection against shrapnel and have gas masks within instant reach.

A woman journalist who recently visited a "Waac" camp in France finds that the women workers are usually billeted in towns or villages. They are not put in huts when it can be possibly avoided, as the hope is to maintain for them some semblance of home life. In measuring accommodations, it is generally reckoned that two girls need the space usually devoted to three men. But this does not mean a camp of frills and furbelows, by any means.

"Incidentally," says this writer, "one speculates as to what army life will make of the ordinary girl, how it will affect her in habits and outlook. For the life she is leading is army life, rubbing elbows with soldiers, domiciled in barracks, hedged round by the barriers of discipline. It leaves its mark on the man who has led it, and it will leave its mark on her.

"As regards appearance, there is not much fault to be found with her; her neatness is ultra-military. All the same, I am told that, in spite of her smartness, the 'Waac'—some of her—not infrequently suffers from homesickness when she first settles down over-channel, which, given her newness to barrack conditions, is a misfortune not to be wondered at. Girls fresh from home and the comparative privacy it affords must almost inevitably take time to adapt themselves to a life entirely in common; close quarters, even if comfortable, are not suited to every temperament, and seven in a bedroom may at first be a trial to one used to slumber alone. But one gathers from the look of the majority that the shaking-down process is not of very long duration, that with more or less swiftness they find their level and adapt themselves to camp life and atmosphere. They enroll, one imagines, in the sensible spirit, well knowing that the small discomforts which fall to their lot are as nothing to the hardships and dangers their brothers are called on to suffer, since they live—in the camp I speak of, at least—under model conditions as regards sanitation and health.

"Their work would appear to have been a success—at any rate their numbers are increasing, and with the increase has come the inevitable need to provide them with interest for their leisure. That means more accommodations than the regulation mess and living huts—in other words, the same facilities for rest, amusement and supplementing of rations that the Y. M. C. A. provides for their comrades of the army. What they need they have: a hut, own brother to the countless others that are served by the Red Triangle; well scattered with chairs, well furnished with tables, a provision counter

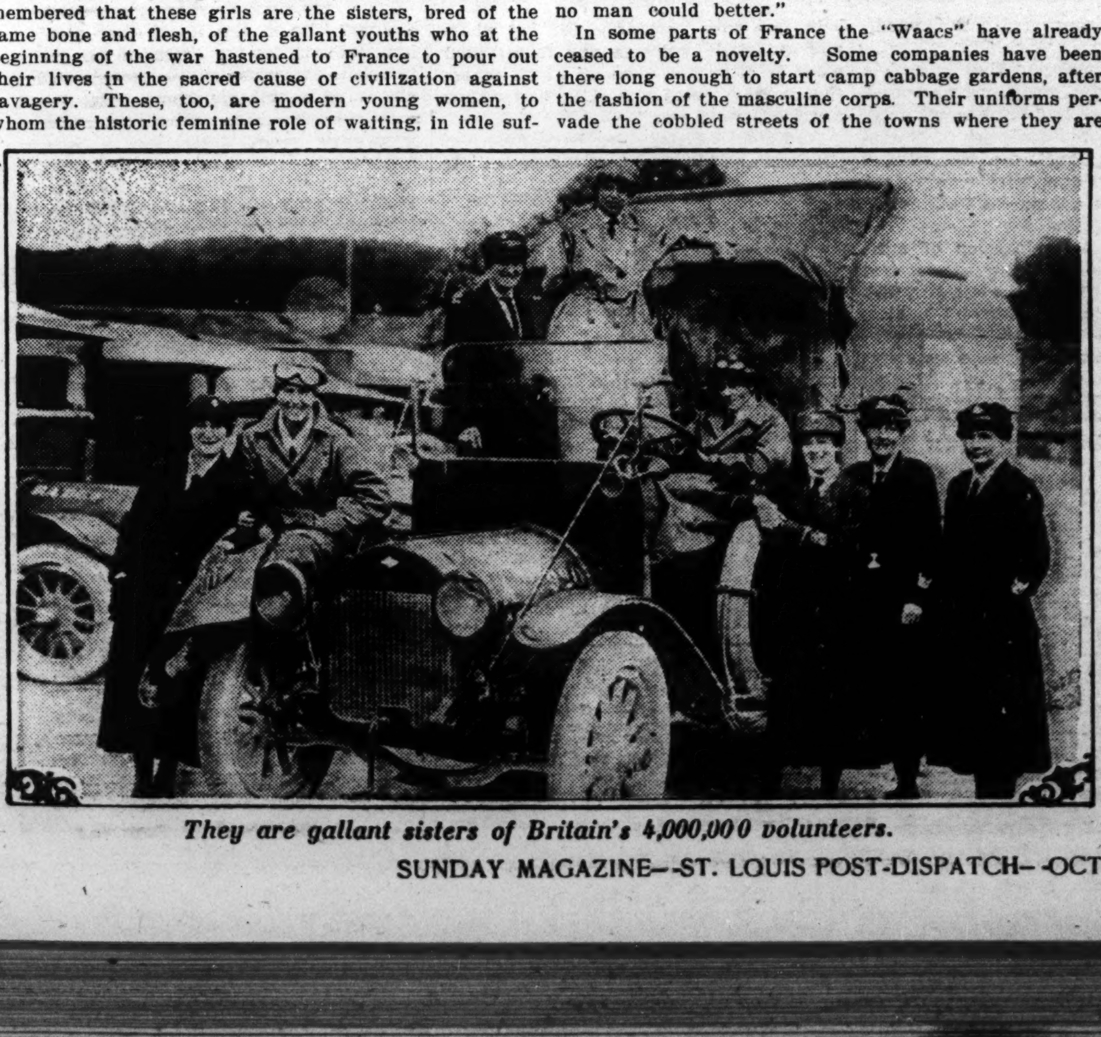
No frills and furbelows about these steel-helmeted ambulance drivers not far from the front.



They are gallant sisters of Britain's 4,000,000 volunteers.

SEE THIS FAMILY OF FIFTEEN? THEY LIVE ON $63 A MONTH

Not only that, but the parents save for a rainy day, too—Mother makes all the clothes, and nothing is ever bought except for cash—Chickens and garden help provide table supplies—Two children going to high school -:- -:- -:-

GEORGE A. MEZUR.

LIST, all ye railers at the high cost of living, to this true tale of a husband and father who supports a family of 15—his wife, himself and 13 children—on his wages of $63 a month, and has enough left over to put $100 in the savings bank at the end of the year!

This miracle of thrifty managers in an age of extravagant costs for even the necessities of life is George A. Mezur, 36 years old, of 1142 Pavilion street, Cincinnati. The supreme example of his confidence in his powers of economy is displayed by the fact that he, a widower with eight children of his own, selected for his second wife a widow with four more. Still another child, making up the roster of 13, has been born to them.

This is true paternal intrepidity. Mezur should become historical as a living refutation of the doctrine of race suicide. He may attain a prominent place as a hero in the Rooseveltian pantheon. His faith in his powers to maintain a voluminous brood of progeny is not less than epic. Even the famous lady of advanced age who had her habitat in a piece of footwear had nothing on him for scientific management.

Mezur is sub-foreman in a railroad warehouse, and his wages total $63 a month. Many single men would find it almost impossible to maintain themselves alone on this sum, and most of them would consider it madness to attempt to marry with such slight resources. The prospect of an increment, not of 13 children but only two, would fill them with forebodings of starvation and nakedness for the entire family.

But a glance at the pictures on this page will show that the Mezur family seems far from any acquaintance with famine or lack of clothes. The children are all plump and smiling, the mother's face beams with well-being and Mezur himself has an exceptionally stalwart and well-nourished appearance.

"How does he do it?" will be the first despairing question asked by the average householder. The initial marvel wrought is that in connection with the family's food. It sounds perfectly incredible, but Mezur asserts, and shows records of purchases to prove it, that he is able to accomplish the following prodigious feat:

He feeds 15 persons at an average rate of 97 cents a day, or about 6 1-2 cents each.

Many a childless couple in ordinary circumstances spends more for food each day than 97 cents. Here is how Mezur manages it, shown by an average daily menu:

Bread	$ .25
Meat	.22
Potatoes	.10
Oatmeal	.10
Tea	.04
Lard	.05
Pancake flour	.10
Butter, salt, sugar, etc.	.11
Total	$ .97.

It will be noted that this list, while not entirely vegetarian, provides that less than one-fourth of the expense goes for meat, while 55 cents, or more than one-half, is devoted to bread, potatoes, oatmeal and pancake flour. The photographs are ample proof of the powers of nourishment supplied by such a diet. Lard and butter reinforce the fats supplied by the meat.

At the rate of 97 cents a day for food, the family's bill for this item each month would be about $29! In how many families—not only without 13 children, but with none at all—does the monthly grocery bill for husband and wife alone exceed this sum? As Mezur truly remarks: "I could feed half my family on what other people waste." So large an establishment requires considerable room, so the Mezurs have a seven-room house, for which $15 a month is paid. The cost of food and rent totals $44, leaving $19 a month from Mezur's wages to be spent in other ways.

He spends part of it for life and health insurance, and also carries insurance on the lives of the six oldest children. Clothes and shoes must be purchased, but the expense of these necessities is reduced by the fact that Mrs. Mezur herself makes all of the clothes for herself and the children, while Mezur, who has considerable skill as a cobbler, mends all of the shoes, thus prolonging their usefulness when in many other families the footwear would be discarded.

All of the children old enough to go are taken to the movies twice a month, and on these festive occasions they also get a treat to ice cream. What is left Mezur puts in the savings bank. Last year his savings amounted to $100. The year before he was able to present a piano to his oldest daughter, which cost $150, and she is taking music lessons.

It must be remembered that the family's entire financial resources are the father's wages. None of the children works outside the home, and in fact the two eldest were entered in high school this fall. But they have their tasks at home, Mezur saying that "they are trained like soldiers." One takes care of the baby. Another is in charge of a large flock of chickens, which help out with eggs and an occasional fry or stew. Others work in a garden which aids in supplying vegetables in the summer. Still others are intrusted with the housework, relieving their mother so that she has time for her duties as seamstress for the family.

Mezur's chief principle is: "Never buy anything on credit." He will not even run a grocery bill, paying cash daily for what he buys. If anything is needed in the family and there is no money to pay for it, they must wait until the money is saved.

In consequence, he can say: "I am happier than many men whose incomes are thousands of dollars a year. I am able to keep my family well fed and clothed, educate the children and still put a bit of money aside for a rainy day.

Mrs. George A. Mezur and some of the Mezur family.

"Men who are better paid strive for more, and thus bring on themselves unnecessary troubles. My family and I are satisfied if we have enough to eat and wear, keep up the insurance, put a little aside for the future and have a reasonable amount of recreation. If I have $15 or $20 saved for an emergency, I am contented. I believe in giving the children a good education, and I'll see them through. But Hoover has nothing on us when it comes to saving.

"I don't owe a cent to anybody. I am constantly on the watch for bargains, and by having cash I am able to buy food in wholesale lots, thus cutting down the price of provisions. That we have plenty is shown by the fact that all the children are healthy, rosy-cheeked and happy. While others are busy denouncing high prices, I am always studying out new ways of avoiding waste.

"I am the handy man around the house at repairing things. Many an evening I spend in putting new soles and heels on the children's shoes. I mend the furniture and keep all the household furnishings in top-notch shape. This prolongs their life, and we don't have to buy new furniture as often as most other people do. It is nothing wonderful. We merely know how to save."

TENSE ECONOMIES IN WAR-TIME PARIS

Written by Paul Farish, formerly of St. Louis.

PARIS, Aug. 29.

WHO is the man who once said that a French household could live on what an American family throws away?

At the present moment, when living is sky-high and going higher every minute, the practice of every-penny-must-count is being pushed to the limit. Not one piece of coal can drop from a wagon without there being three hands ready to catch it before it touches the ground; not a nail can remain on the sidewalk untouched; not even a cigarette butt can lie in the gutter in peace. But the most striking practice, and the one which is brought home best to an American, is the garbage-pail scavenger.

Paris has no alleys; the blocks are rather small, and are solidly built up, private homes being the exception and eight-story apartment buildings the rule. In the early hours of the morning the janitress brings out onto the sidewalk before her house the garbage box. She has hardly gotten back into the building when Scavenger No. 1 appears. His specialty is empty cans; he is armed with a weapon shaped like a large hook, with which he carefully searches the box. In a few seconds he fishes out three or four sardine or tomato cans, which he looks at in triumph and stows away in his sack. Then he passes on to the next house. In two minutes comes a woman; she is looking for old papers. Dirty or clean makes little difference; all are piled into her basket. No. 3 searches for lemon and orange peels, which are used by the cheap perfume makers. By the time that the garbage wagon comes, about 7 a. m., there is very little left to take away.

Another thing which strikes the American, in walking down the street at this period of the year, is to find all the shade trees, at least their trunks, apparently painted yellow; on closer examination you will find that this is caused by the bark peeling off in thin slabs and exposing a yellow inner back, very smooth and soft. You are astonished not to see some of the fallen bark lying at the foot of the tree; but if you wait a minute, you will see the explanation. As soon as a piece falls, a woman or child darts out from a nearby house and seizes the precious wood. And now, when fuel is so rare and expensive, some do not wait for the bark to fall, but pry it off with sticks.

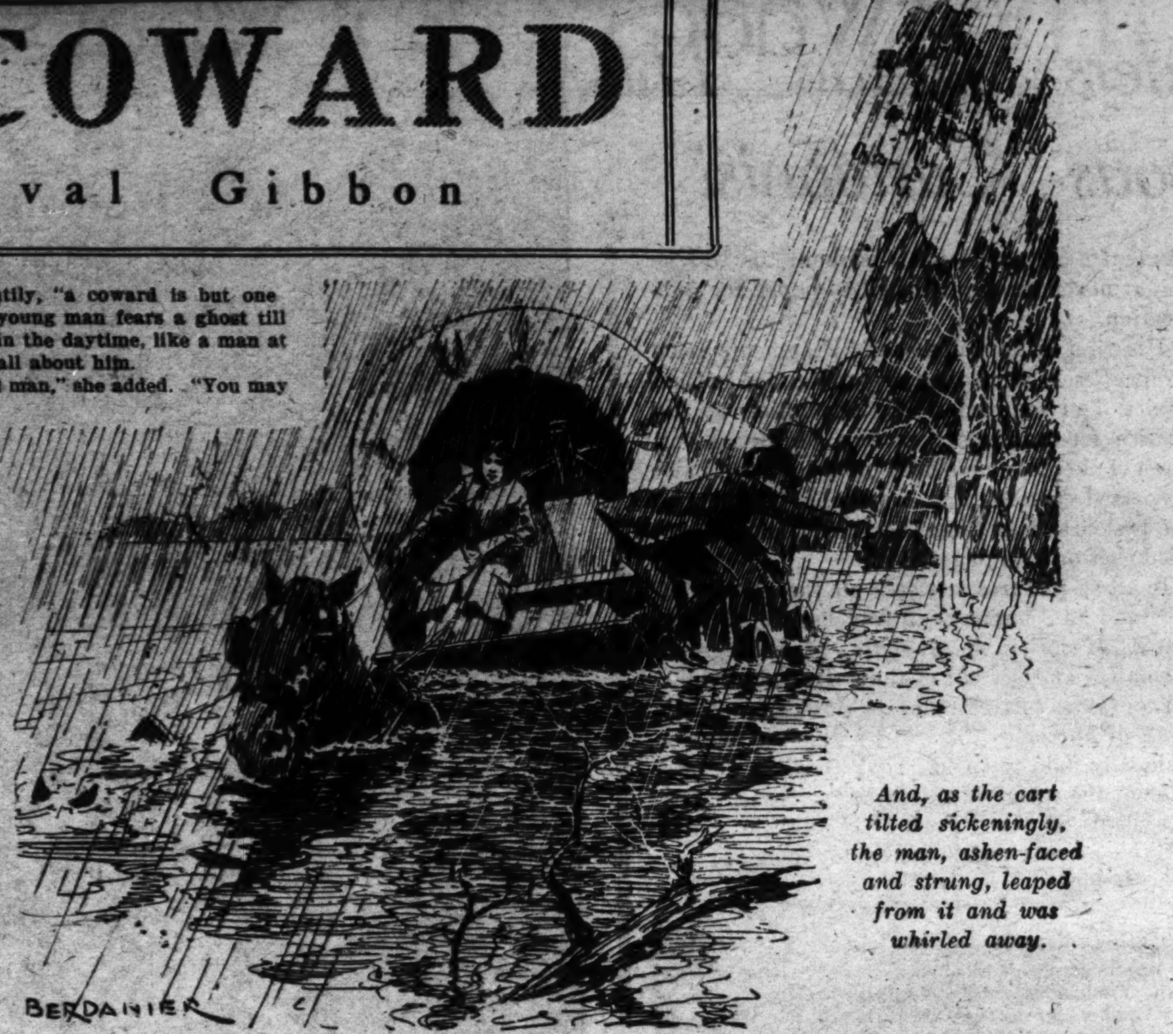
Economy, too, is the reason why a pile of wooden paving blocks cannot be left unguarded; in 10 minutes the entire pile would have vanished. Where has it gone? If you could visit the cellars of the nearby houses you would find them stuffed with every sort of old paper, wood and, in general, everything that would burn. The paving blocks, being soaked in tar, are very much sought after.

The economy appears to be contagious, and has now spread to the modern apartment houses. The heating systems have particularly suffered, for the landlords seem to have vied as to the one who could get away with the smallest radiators! Imagine that 12 seven-room apartments are heated, during five months, with 15 tons of coal! Even elevators are built with the idea to save the pennies; if, after paying a visit to a friend on the sixth floor, you look for the call button for the elevator, you find only a little sign "Tenants are informed that the elevator is to be used only for the ascent." Hot and cold water are sold by the quart; a little meter is perched on the pipes where they enter the apartment.

The only thing to which the economical system has not yet been applied is to time. American architects get hot under the collar when they visit a building under construction and find, for instance, the plasterers, carpenters and painters gathered around the steamfitter, who is engaged in putting in a radiator. It takes by actual count 10 minutes to hoist a sack of cement from the first to the fourth floor. In almost every branch of trade it takes from two to three men to do one man's work. Since the war conditions in this line have been getting worse; for instance, on account of the shortage of help, Africans were imported to sweep the streets of Paris; it is not on record that one of these men from another land should work more than half an hour at a stretch; his entire time is occupied in lying on a sunny bench asleep. Yes, France has not yet learned that "Time is money"!

THE COWARD

By Perceval Gibbon



And, as the cart tilted sickeningly, the man, ashen-faced and strung, leaped from it and was whirled away.

"AFTER all," said the Vrouw Grobelaar weightily, "a coward is but one with keener eyes than his fellows. No young man fears a ghost till it is dark, but the coward sees the stars in the daytime, like a man at the bottom of a well, and ghosts walk all about him.

A coward should always be a married man," she added. "You may say, Katje, that is hard on the woman. It is what I would expect of you. But when you have experienced wifehood you will come to the knowledge that it is the man's character which counts and it is the woman's part to make up his deficiencies. With what men learn by practicing on their wives, the world has been made.

"If you would cease to cackle in that silly fashion I would tell you of Andreas Van Wyck, the coward—a tale that is known to few. Well then!

"He was a bushveld Boer, farming cattle on good land, not a day's ride from the Tiger River. His wife, Anna, was of the De Villiers stock from the borders of the Free State, a commandant's daughter, and the youngest of 14 children. They were both people of a type common enough. Andreas was to all seeming just such a burgher as a hundred others who have grown rich quietly, never heard of outside of their own districts, yet as worthy as others whom everyone nods to at Nachtmaal.

"Anna, too, was an everyday pattern, a short, plump, woman, with a rosy, solemn face and pleasant eyes—a sound Boer woman, who would carry out her saddle, catch her horse and mount him without help. You see, in her big family, the elders were all men, and most had seen-service against the Kafirs, and a girl there won esteem not by fallals and little tripping graces, but by usefulness and courage and good fellowship. She saw Andreas first when he was visiting his mother's aunt in her neighborhood. There was shooting at a target for a prize of an English saddle, and no one has ever said of him that he was not a wonderful shot. He carried off the prize easily, against all the Boers of those parts, and Anna's father and brothers among them. A few months later they were married.

"They drove from Anna's home to Andreas' farm on the bushveld in a Cape cart, with two horses, and sat close under the hood while the veld about them was lashed with the first rains of December. It was no time for a journey by road, but in those days the country was not checkered with railway lines as it is now, and Anna had nothing to say against a trifle of hardship. For miles about them the rolling country of the Free State was veiled with a haze of rain, and the wind drove it in sheets here and there, till the horses staggered against it, and the drum of the storm on the hood of the cart was awesome and mournful. Toward afternoon, after a long, slow trek, they came to the slope towards Buys' Drift, and Andreas pulled his horses up at the edge of the water.

"The rains had swelled the river to flood, and it ran with barely a ripple where ordinarily the bushes were clear of the water. Full a hundred and fifty yards it spanned, and as they looked they saw it carry past a dead ox and the rags of uprooted huts.

"'We can never cross till it goes down,' said Andreas. 'I am sorry for it, but there is no choice. We must go back to your father's house.'

"Anna pressed his arm and smiled.

"'You are joking,' she said. 'You know well that I would not go back there tonight for all the floods in 10 years. No girl would, that valued her husband and herself.'

"'But look at the drift!' he urged.

"'It is a big head of water,' she agreed. 'I was once before upset in such a flood as this. You must head them upstream a little, and then strike down again to the opposite bank.'

"'Not I,' he answered. 'I am not going to drown myself for a trifle of pride, nor you either. We must go back.'

"She shook her head. 'Not that!' she replied. 'Give me the reins and the whip.' Before he could resist she had taken them from his hands. 'Put your feet on our box,' she directed, 'or the water will float it away. Now then!'

"She drew the whip across the horses' quarters, and in a minute they were in the river, while Andreas sat marveling.

"You understand that it was first necessary to move upstream to a point in the middle of the river. She steadied the horses with a taut hold on the reins, for her young wrists were strong as iron, and spoke to them cheerily as the flood leaped against their chests, and they stood and hesitated. The rain drove in their faces viciously; Andreas, his face sheltered by the wide brim of his hat, had to rub away the water again and again in order to see; but Anna knit her brows and endured the storm gallantly, while with whip and rein and voice she pushed the team on towards the place of turning.

"The rushing of the water filled their ears, and before them, between the high banks of the Vaal, they saw only a world of brown water, streaked with white froth, hurling down upon them. It rose above the footboard and swelled to the level of the seat. The horses, with heads lifted high, were often, for an anxious moment or two, free of the shifting bottom and swimming. A tree, blundering downstream, struck the near wheel, and they were nearly capsized, the water rushing in over their knees. As they tilted Andreas gave a cry and shifted in his place. Anna called to her horses and knit her brows.

"At last it was time to humor them around, and this, I need not tell you, is the risky business in crossing a flooded drift. With somewhat of a draw on the near rein, Anna checked the team, and then, prodding with her whip, headed the horses over and started them. They floundered and splashed, and Andreas half rose from his seat, with lips clenched on a cry. The traces tightened under the water, a horse stumbled and vanished for a moment, and, as the cart tilted sickeningly, the man, ashen-faced and strung, leaped from it and was whirled away.

"The water took him under, drew him gasping over the bottom, and spat him up again to swim desperately. His head was downstream, and, as there was a sharp bend half a mile below, he had no extraordinary difficulty in bringing his carcass to shore. He lay for a minute among the bushes, and then ran back to see what had become of the cart, the horses and his wife. He found them ashore, safe, and waiting for him, and Anna wringing the wet from her hair as she stood beside the horses' heads.

"'You are not hurt?' she asked, before he could speak. Her face was grave and flushed, her voice very quiet and orderly.

"'No,' he said.

"'Ah!' she said, and climbed again into the cart, and made room for him in the place of the driver.

"That was how he discovered himself to his wife. In that one event of their wedding day he revealed to Anna what was a secret from all the world—perhaps even from himself. He was a coward, the thing Anna had never yet known of any man—never thought enough upon to learn how little it may really matter or how greatly it may ruin a character. When her brothers, having drunk too much at waapenschauw, wished to make a quarrel quickly, they called their man a coward. But for her it had been like saying he was a devil—a futile thing that was only offensive by reason of its intention. And now she was married to a coward, and must learn the ways of it.

"They spoke no more of the matter. Anna shrank from a reference to it. She could not find a word to fit the subject that did not seem an attack on the man with whom she must spend her life. They settled down to their business of living together very quietly, and I think the commandant's daughter did no braver thing than when she recognized the void in her husband, and then, holding it loathsome and unforgivable, passed it over and put it from her mind out of mere loyalty to him.

"The years went past at their usual pace, and there occurred nothing to earmark any hour and make it memorable, till the Kafirs across the Tiger River rose. I do not remember what men said the rising was about. Probably their chief was wearied with peace and drunkenness and wanted change, but anyhow the commando that was called out to go and shoot the tribe into order included Andreas, the respected burgher and famous shot. The field cornet rode round and left the summons at his house, and he read it to Anna.

"'Now I shall get some real shooting,' he said, with bright eyes.

"She looked at him carefully, and noted that he lifted down his rifle with the gaiety of a boy who goes hunting. It brought a warmth to her heart that she dared not trust.

"'It is a pity you should go before the calves are weaned,' she said.

"'Pooh! You can see to them,' he answered.

"'But you could so easily buy a substitute. It would even be cheaper to send a substitute,' she urged half-heartedly.

"You see, she had no faith at all in his courage. The years she had lived with him had brought forth nothing to undo the impression he had left in her mind when he sprang from the cart and abandoned her in the middle of the Vaal River, and this emergency had awakened all her old fear lest he should be proclaimed a coward before the men of his world.

"'I dare say it would be cheaper and better in every way,' he answered, with some irritation. 'But for all that I am going. This is a war, the first I have known, and I am not going to miss the chance. So you had better get my gear ready!'

"With that he commenced to tear up rags and to oil and clean his rifle.

"She bade him adieu next day and saw him canter off with some doubt. He had shown no hesitation at all in this matter. From the time of the coming of the summons he had been all eagerness and interest. It might have led another to think she had been wrong, that the man who feared water feared nothing else; but Anna knew well, from a hundred small signs, that her husband had no stability of valor in him, and that he was and would remain—a coward.

"Next day the fighting had commenced, and Anna, working serenely about her house, soon had news of it. There was a promise of interest in this little war from the start. The commando, under Commandant Jan Wepner, had made a quick move and thrust forward to the crown of the little hills that overlook the Tiger River and the flat land beyond it, which was the home of the tribe. Here they made their laager, and it was plain that the fighting would consist either of descents by the burghers on the kraals or of attacks by the Kafirs upon the hills. Either way, there must be some close meetings and hardy hewing, a true and searching test for good men. The young burgher that told her of it, sitting upon his horse at the door as though he were too hurried and too warlike to dismount and enter, rejoiced noisily at the prospect of coming to grips.

"Anna puckered her brows. 'It is not the way to fight,' she said doubtfully. 'A bush and a rifle and a range of 600 yards is what beat the Nasutos.'

"'Pooh!' laughed the young burgher. 'You say that because your husband shoots so well, and you want him to be marked for good fighting.'

"She frowned a little, inwardly accusing herself of this same meaning. She would gladly have put these thoughts from her, for brave folk, whether men or women, have commonly but one face, and she hated to show friendship to her husband and harbor distrust of him in her bosom. When the young burgher at last rode away, galloping uselessly to seem what he wished to be—a wild person of sudden habits—she sat on the stoep for a while and thought deeply. Then she sighed, as though pondering brought her no decision, and went once more about her work, always with an eye cocked to the window to watch for any rider coming back from the laager with news of affairs.

"But there was a shyness on both sides for a week. The Kafirs had not yet ripened their minds to an attack on the hills, nor had the burghers quite cloughed their custom of orderliness and respect for human life. There was a little shooting, mostly at the landscape, by those whose trigger fingers itched, but at last a man came back with a hole in his shoulder, to be doctored and admired, halted at the door and told of a fight.

"He sat in a long chair and told about the pain in his shoulder, and opened his shirt to show the wound. Anna leaned against the doorpost and heard him. Outside his brown pony was rattling the rings of the bit and switching at flies, and she perceived the faint smell of its sweat-stained saddlery and the horse odor she knew so well. Before her, the tall, grimy man, with bandages looped about him, his pleasant face a little yellow from the loss of blood, babbled boastfully. It was a scene she was familiar with, for of old on the Free State border the burghers and the basutos were forever jostling one another, and—I told you her father was a commandant!

"'But tell me about the battle,' she urged.

"'Allemachtag!' exclaimed the wounded man. 'But that was a fight! It was night, you know, about an hour after the dying of the moon, and there was a spit of rain and some little wind. The commandant was very wakeful, I can tell you, and he had us all out from under the wagons, though it was very cold, and sent us out to the ridge above the drift. And there we lay in the long grass, among the bushes, on our rifles, while the field cornet crawled to and fro behind us on his belly and cursed those who were talking. I didn't talk—I know too much about war. But your man did. I heard him, and the field cornet swore at him in a whisper.'

"'What was he saying?' Anna asked quickly.

"'Oh, dreadful things. He called him a dirty takhaar with a hair-hung tongue, and'——

"'No, no!' cried Anna impatiently. 'What did my husband say, I mean. What was he talking about when the field cornet stopped him?'

"'Oh, he was just saying that it would be worth turning out into the cold if only the Kafirs would come. And then he cried out, 'What's that moving?' and the field cornet crawled up and cursed him.'

"'Go on about the fight,' said Anna, looking from

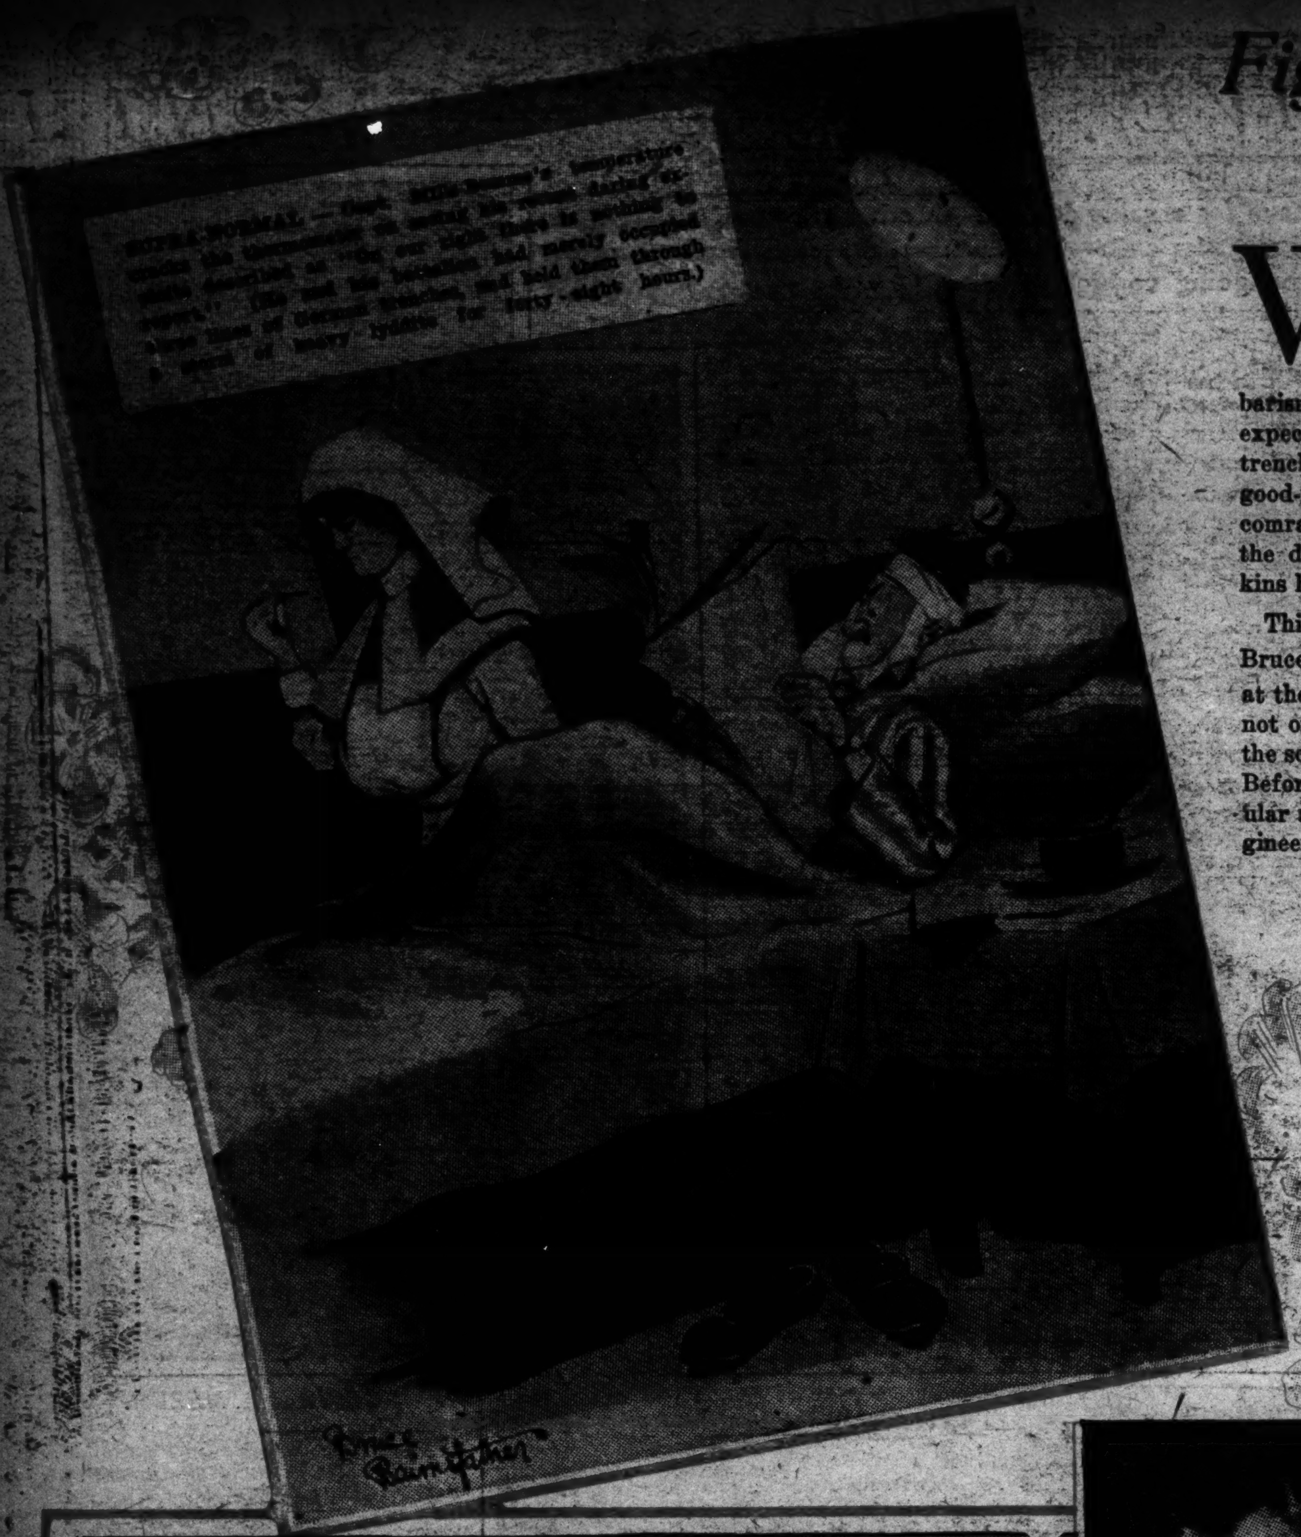
Fighting in Flanders Made This Soldier a Famous Cartoonist

WHILE Raemaekers, citizen of a neutral nation and a civilian, has dedicated his vitriolic pencil to the most serious onslaughts upon German barbarism, British genius—adept at doing the unexpected—has produced a cartoonist of the trenches who has delighted millions with his good-natured satires at the expense of his own comrades. Needless to say, no one has enjoyed the drawings more heartily than Tommy Atkins himself.

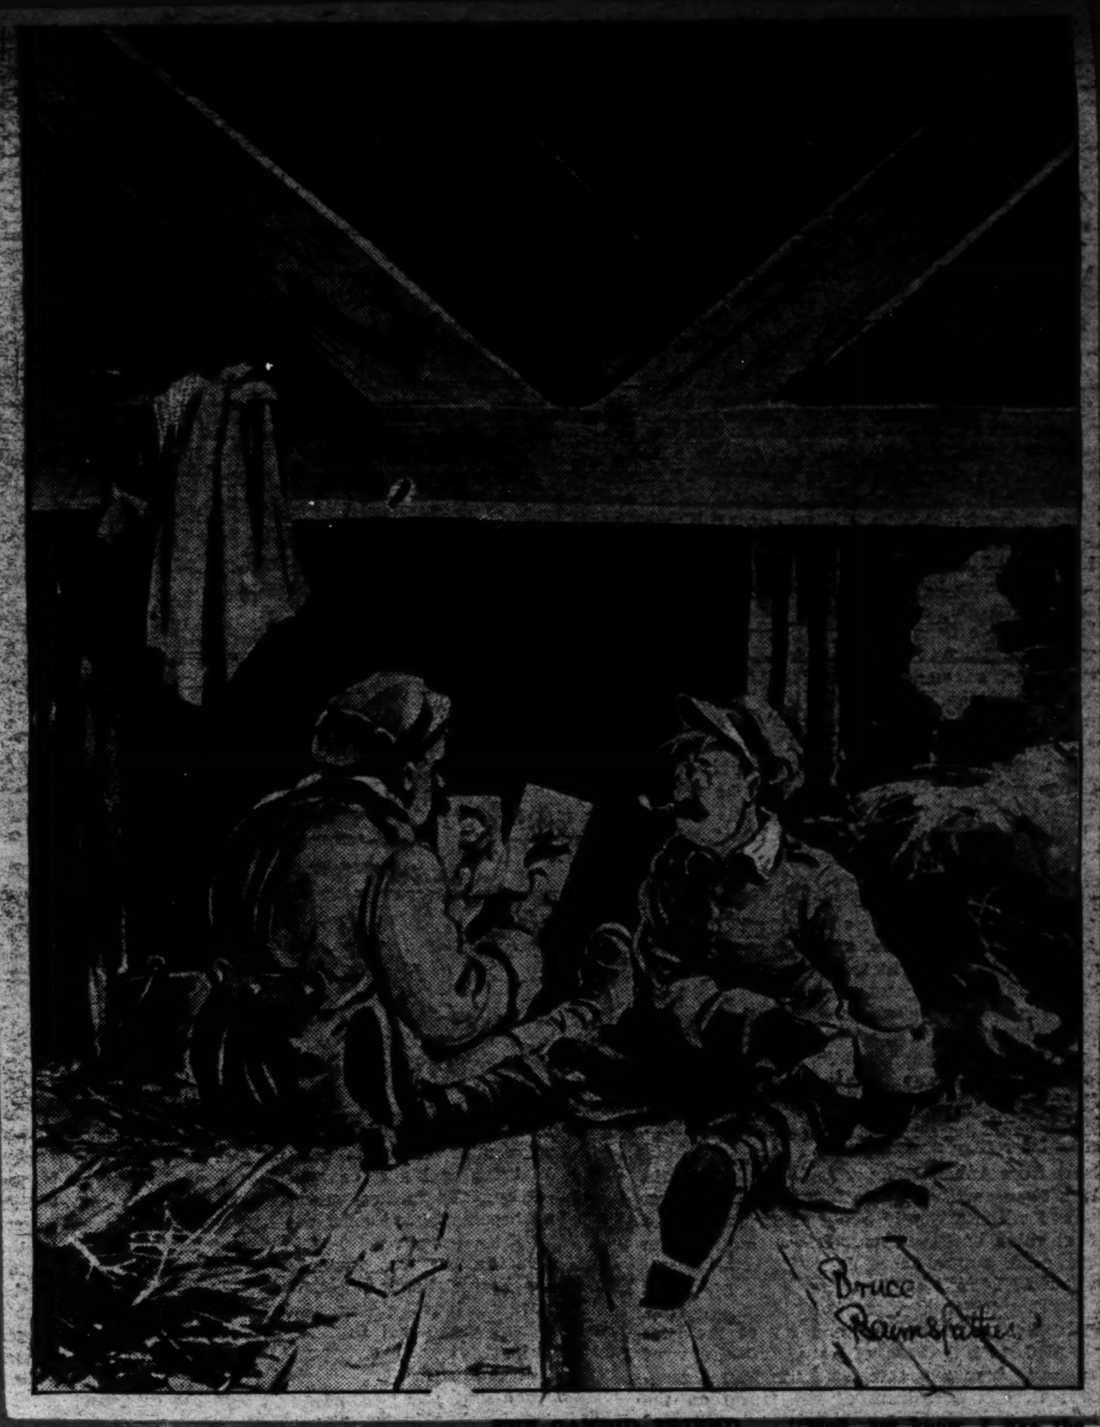
This new humorist of the crayon is Capt. Bruce Bairnsfather, who has seen much service at the front, and whose drawings are valuable, not only for their wit, but for their fidelity to the scenes through which he himself has passed. Before the war he was for some time in the regular army, and worked at his profession as engineer. He sketched only for fun, on walls or shirtcuffs or tablecloths. Without the war he might never have put pencil to paper for publication.

His first little volume of "Fragments from France'' sold more than a quarter of a million copies, and enjoyed a big circulation at the British front. Since then two additional volumes of sketches have been published, and have surpassed even the first in popularity. Some of the best drawings from the three books are reproduced on this page.

In these pictures one sees all the horrors of the mud in Flanders, of trenches filled with water, of miserable dugouts, of bedraggled humanity; and yet out of the universal wretchedness shines forth Tommy Atkins' indomitable sense of humor. The artist's respects are occasionally paid to "Old Fritz,'' but the delineation of the enemy is untainted by "hate.'' His treatment of the "Boche'' is quite as good-natured as that administered to Tommy.

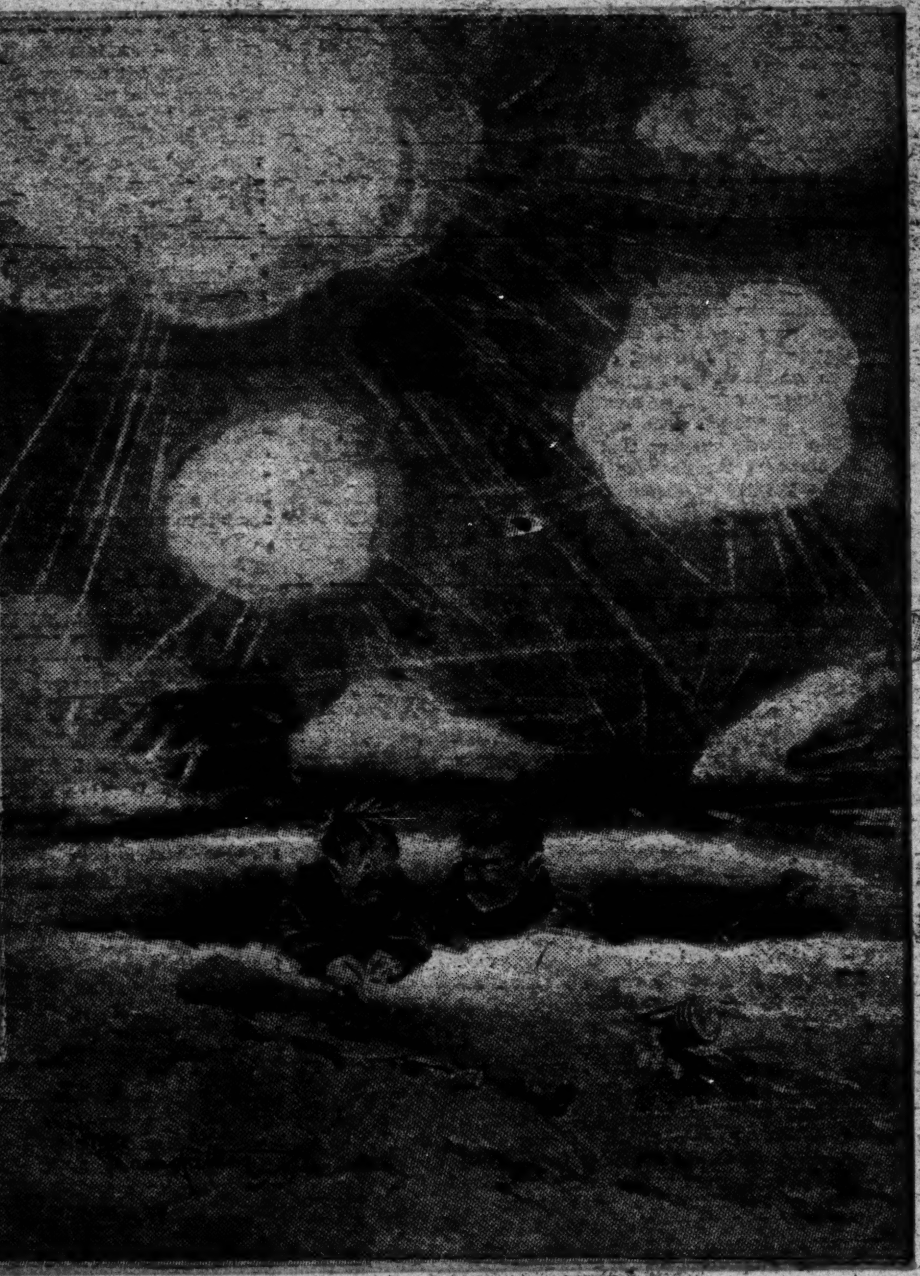


[illegible] NORMAL.—Capt. [illegible]'s temperature reaches the thermometer on seeing his [illegible] during exploits described as "On our right there is nothing to report.'' (He and his battalion had merely occupied three lines of German trenches, and held them through a storm of heavy [illegible] for forty-eight hours.)

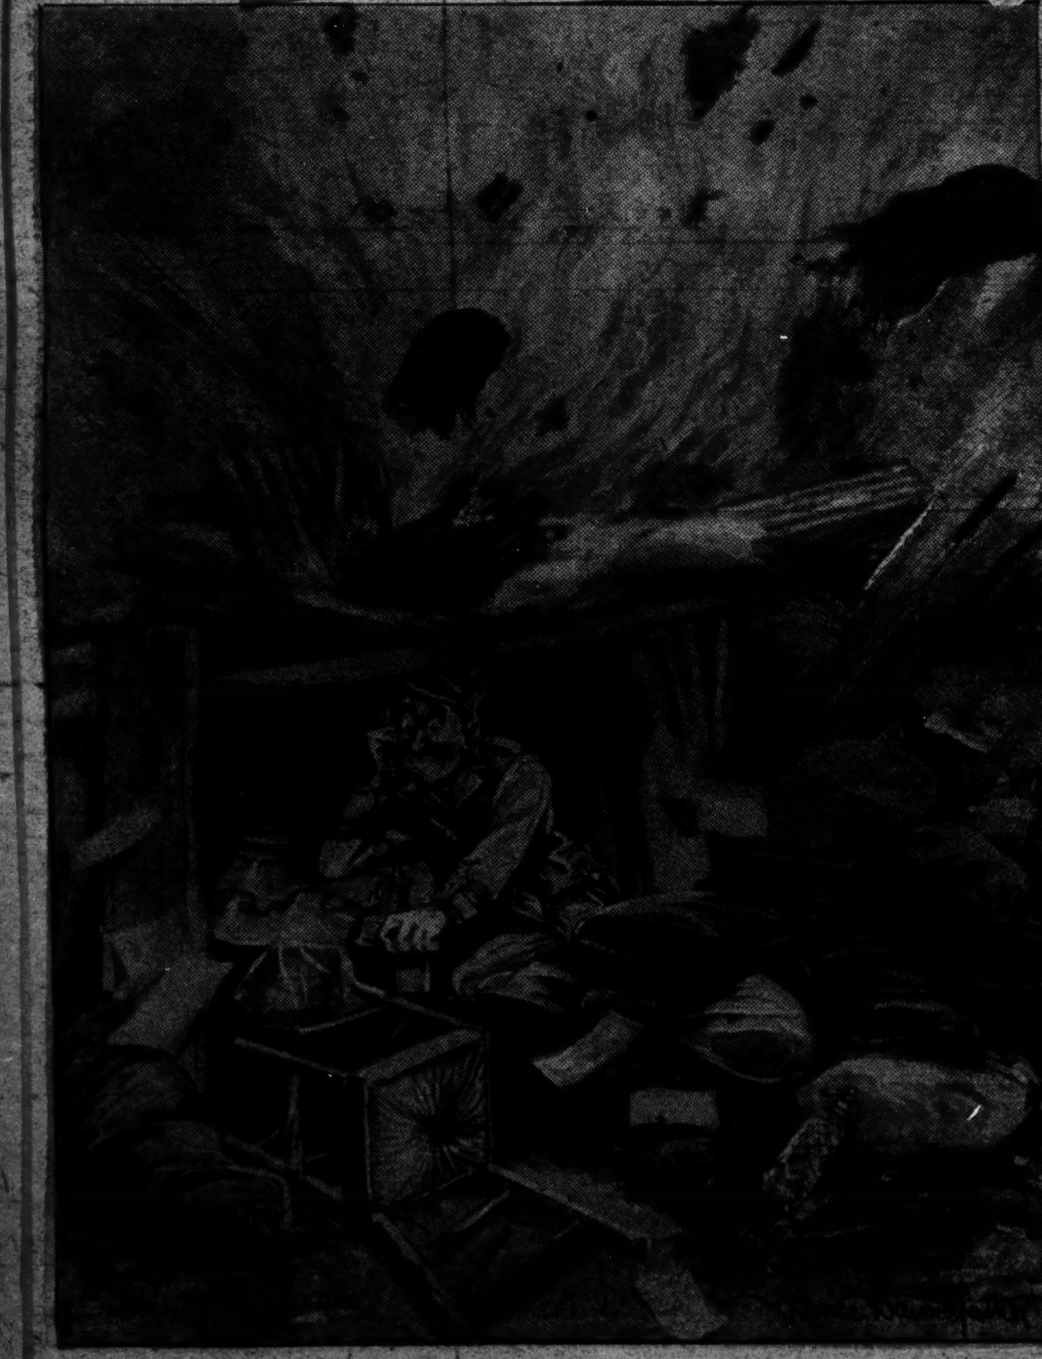


THE CANDID FRIEND.—"Well, yer know, I like the photo of you in your gas mask best.''

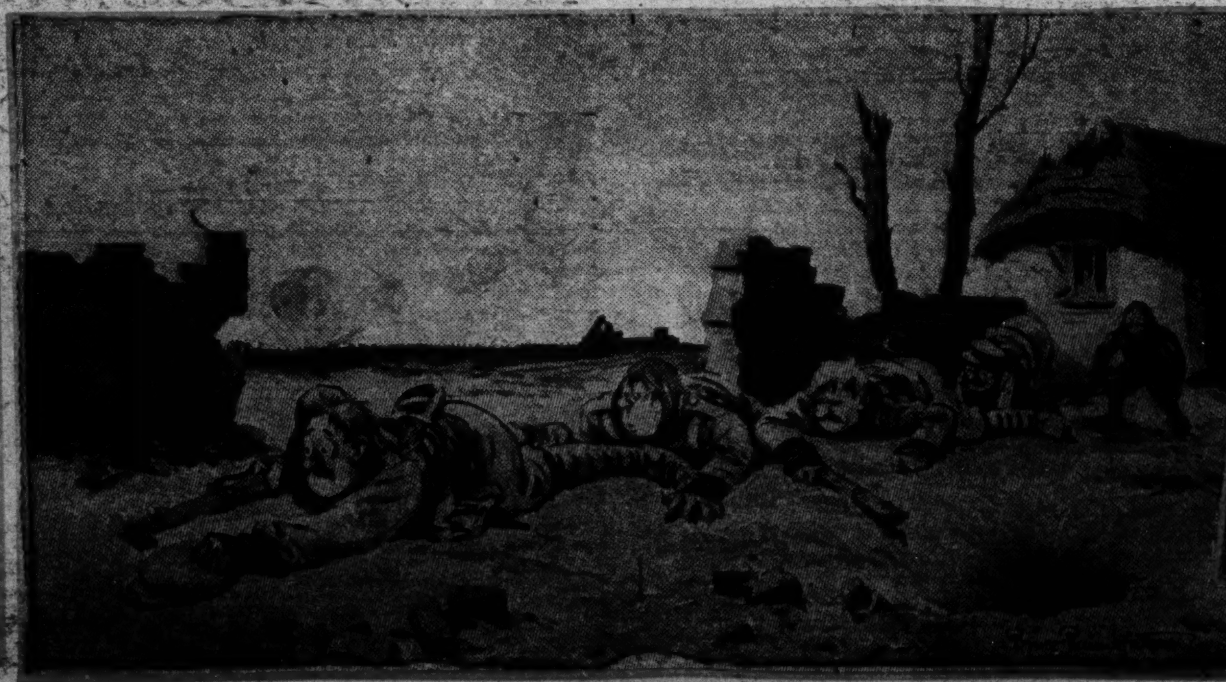
CAPT. BRUCE BAIRNSFATHER.



"Well, if you knows of a better 'ole, go to it.''



THE THINGS THAT MATTER.—Scene: Loos, during the September offensive. Colonel Fitz-Shrapnel receives the following message from "G. H. Q.'': "Please let us know, as soon as possible, the number of tins of raspberry jam issued to you last Friday.''



There is certainly a lot of truth in the maxim, "An army moves on its stomach.''

"Where do yer want this put, Sargint?''

First pictures of Famous Mount Athos Monasteries, near Saloniki. Mount Athos Peninsula, with its monasteries dating back 1000 years, is the "Holy Land" of Greece. Since the tenth century no woman has set foot within the sacred precincts, and in modern times cameras have been as strictly barred. But with the Allied occupation of Saloniki, French official photographers were permitted to enter the shrine and record its Middle Age architecture, its treasures and decorations. On the left is a picturesque, ancient tower, with primitive means of access by way of a ladder. In the center is a view of the court, showing quaintly costumed priests ringing the bells. To the right is a group of buildings comprising the monastery of Hilendar.
